AWFUL SLAUGHTER.

at Victory of the Boers Over the Zulus.

ixty-one years ago, where British guns now booming, the Boers inflicted a bing defeat on the savage hordes of gaan, the cruel Zulu chief, whose sence was a menace to the early and ttered settlers of Natal, mostly Boers, o had trekked from Cape Colony and t anchor in the green valleys of Natal. me time previously Dingaar had lured ter Rietief, e of the founders of ritzburg, and 200 burghers to his war-al on the White Umfolosi, in Zululand, the pretense of ceding them territory Natal, and murdered them all in cold od. Then the Zulus descended on the ttered homesteads and laagers in enen county, where Estcourt,. Weenen d Colenso now stand, and butchered n, women and children in the darkness night. Those who were left when the rning dawned hurriedly built a laager d beat back the impis, fugitive Kaffirs lling in hundreds by Boer bullets in ir flight down the Bushman river val-y. Weenen county, means "weeping," d takes its name not only from the tears the Dutch, but from the walls of the lus as they fled in confusion.

For some time subsequently Dingaan d the upper hand, gaining three vic-ies over the Boers, and a small Eng-h force under a Mr. Biggar, was anni-ated at the mouth of the Tugela. Din-an then marched on to Durban, and er looting the settlement, retired in-d.

Meantime, the Boers had been rein-rced from Cape Colony, and took up a ong position in laager northeast of ndee, on the Blood River. Here the ole Zulu army fell upon them. Four imes Dingaan's braves tried to storm e camp and were repulsed with fearful ssac on each occasion. Then they wa-red and fled. Through ravines and don-s the Boers chased them; hundreds were lled by bullets, hundreds in attempting cross the swollen river, henceforth own as the River of Blood. On the er side three men only were wounded y assegais. It was a glorious victory. Before the battle a vow had been made the Lord by the chief commander at if he had vouchsafed a victory to em, a house should be raised to the ory of his name, and to-day the Dutch eformed church in Maritzburg still ands a witness to this vow.

The day is observed as a holy anniver-ry throughout Dutch South Africa, and Paardekraal, now known as Krugers-orp, is the Transvaal national monument ected to commemorate the event. An nual gathering is held there every 16th December to celebrate the triumph er Dingaan and over the British at ajuba.

125 MEN ENTRENCHED.

rom the Inroads of Dreaded Catarrh—What Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder Did for Mr. LeBlanc He Proves Will Do For Others.

Alfred LeBlanc, of St. Jerome, Que., was a great sufferer for years with catarrh of a very severe type. Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder rescued him when everything else had failed. To-day when e goes to his lumber camp with his 125 men, this great remedy is considered as much a necessity to comfortable camp life as anything else. It relieves cold in the head in ten minutes; prevents the growing of catarrh germs, and when they are sown, it cures them. Sold by Ormond Walsh.

TO FOOL AN ENEMY.

ome of the Strategems That are used in Warfare

The well known saying that "all is fair in love and war" is only true in a very limited sense, for, apart from those treacherous artifices which no honorable man would think of resorting to, the leading nations of the world have settled by solemn treaty the methods by which civilized warfare should—and should not—be carried on.

There is nothing wrong in the favorite Boer device of luring the enemy into an ambush, and then shooting the unsuspecting soldiers down, brutal as it may seem. That was what happened at Bronkhurst Spruit in 1880; but the next step of the Boers was one of the greatest outrages ever perpetrated on humanity in the name of war.

Having drawn the British into their ambuscade, the Boers sent out a flag of truce. That, of course, at once stopped the British fire, and gave the Boers the chance of covering our soldiers with their guns. They then deliberate aim at the redcoats, of whom 200 out of 250 were shot down. This despicable use of the white flag was described at the time as the act of the basest scoundrels, and should have shut out the Boers forever from treatment as civilized foes.

In the present War.

In the present war the enemy has not scrupled to make use of the same forbidden tactics. At the battle of Elandslaagte the Boers hoisted the white flag in order to stop the British fire to give themselves the opportunity to escape. But for this their defeat would have been still more crushing than it was.

One of the most cowardly acts ever perpetrated by a general was that of the notorious Cronje, when operating, during the former war against the town of Potchetfafroom. In order that the British garrison should refrain from firing on his men, he was brutal enough to place British non-combatants whom he had "captured" in front of his most exposed positions. Moreover, he committed another serious breach of the international laws of war by withholding from the beleaguered garrison, until it surrendered, the information that peace had been concluded.

"It is a relief to turn from these discreditable and dishonorable tricks of war to those which are permissable. In the course of the fighting at Kimberley, the Boer commandant, Botha, set a very artful trap for the North Lancashire Regiment. Near a very tempting position he had the ground heavily mined, and then by various feints and dodges did his best to draw our gallant soldiers upon it. The Lancashire's colonel was, however, too wary to be trapped in that way, and the cunning Boer commandant was killed for his pains.

Baden-Powell's Trick.

The resourceful Colonel Baden-Powell, in charge of the slender forces at Mafeking, played a perfectly justifiable and withal amusing trick on the Boers beleaguering the town. Inside Mafeking he had two truck loads of dynamite, which he feared might be exploded in the event of his stronghold being shelled. Knowing that if he could place the trucks anywhere in the way of the Boers they, ignorant of the contents, would be almost certain to fire on them, he sent the trucks about nine miles along the track.

Then the engine uncoupled and proceeded on its way back to the town, but not more than a mile had been covered when a loud explosion rent the air. The colonel's ruse succeeded admirably, for the Boers no sooner dis covered the trucks than they commenced firing upon them. By the explosion of the dynamite no fewer than 100 of the enemy were killed.

In Naval Warfare.

In naval warfare artifices are resorted to as well as in campaigns conducted on land. The sinking of the Merrimac in the course of the Spanish-American war was a dodge to keep the Spanish fleet bottled up in the harbor in which it had taken refuge, the entrance being so narrow that with this obstruction to encounter it was thought no vessel could have got out.

The Spaniards also tried various devices in their operations against the American warships. As she cruished about the gunboat Wilmington sighted what appeared to be a heavily laden schooner, but about which there appeared to be not the smallest sign of life.

Investigation, however, proved that the vessel was nothing more than a derelict, which, after being filled with old iron, had been sent adrift from Havana, in the hope that some craft of the American blockading fleet might run into her and get more or less seriously damaged. In order that this fell purpose might not be accomplished the gunboat promptly fired three or four shots into the derlict, which sent the latter with its curious cargo to the bottom of the sea.

THE FARMER'S LOT

The farmer is a happy man—or should be, don't you know,
He doesn't have a thing to do but plow
and reap and sow,
He sleeps till 4 o'clock each morn,
then goes about his tasks.
Gets three square meals each working day, and that is all he asks.

He hires a man to do his work, when he can raise the price,
Feeds him on pork and jonnycake, potatoes, mush and rice.
When autmumn gilds the towering hills, he comes to town and votes.
And settles up his winter's bills by issuing his notes.

He always has one suit of clothes, and often he has two,
For footwear he prefers a boot, and never wears a shoe;
And when the summer comes he sheds his duds to 'scape the heat.
And doesn't have to don his coat when he sits down to eat.

He keeps a wagon and a span with which to drive to town;
His wife was never known to be without a gingham gown;
His children, too, are fat and stout—they're not brought up on cake.
And never cry all night because their little stomachs ache.

He needs no money in his purse, his credit's always good.
He takes the Weekly Times and he pays for it in wood.
The merchants furnish him dry goods and groceries as well,
Because they know some day he'll have some pork or wheat to sell.

Ah, happy is the man who dwells upon the farm, apart
From noisy cities, crowded towns, and commerce's busy mart.
Serene he lives nor gives one thought to hoarding piles of pelf,
My dearest hope is that some day I'll have a farm myself.

Showing Him How.

"You young scoundrel!" said the father, seizing his disobedient son by the hair. "I'll show you how to treat your mother."

And he at once proceeded to show young hopeful the way by banging him across the ears two or three times and then shaking him until his hair began to fall out.

Dew.

Teacher—How do you account for the phenomenon of dew?

Boy—Well, you see, the earth revolves on its axis every 24 hours, and in consequence of this tremendous pace it perspires freely.—London Tit-Bits.

Physicians as a class are opposed to what they call "patent medicines." It is not often they openly endorse them. Now and then, however, some doctor, who has been the eye witness of a remarkable cure by the use of Dr. Pierce's remedies, feels it a duty to tell what he knows. Dr. Joseph Fike, of Lost Springs, Marion Co., Kansas, is such a man. He writes: "I am using a good many of your medicines in my practice. Ten years ago I had a patient who was badly affected with scrofula. Her mouth and throat were in an awful condition, and there were lumps on the outside below the jaws the size of a hen's egg. Other doctors said it was a fatal case. I felt confident that some of my remedies would benefit her. It came to my mind that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery was recommended for such cases, so I went to the drug store and bought one bottle and gave it to her to use as directed. Five bottles cured her, and she is well to-day."

For more than thirty years Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., has enjoyed a far larger practice than many physicians who charge large fees for advice. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is made without alcohol, and is a preparation based upon his extended experience with disease. It is a temperance medicine, pure and simple, and without alcohol, whiskey, sugar or syrup to preserve its properties, keeps perfectly in any climate for any length of time. Others may imitate the remedy; they cannot imitate its cures. Let no one talk you into using an imitation medicine as a substitute for Dr. Pierce's. Sick people who cannot visit Buffalo may consult Dr. Pierce by mail. He gives free, fatherly advice for treating and curing diseases of a chronic, obstinate and lingering nature. No charge is made for such consultation.

IS MARS PEOPLED?

Such a Claim Advanced by a German Scientist.

"Is Mars inhabited?" has been asked very often during recent years and has engaged the serious attention of many astronomers and especially of M Camille Flammarion, a noted French scientist and author.

Some new light is now thrown on this subject by Professor Ernst Haeckel, an eminent German philosopher, in a book entitled "World Problems. After pointing out that men have been studying the heavens for more than 4,500 years and have only been studying themselves for the last half century he says we may safely assume that the many fixed stars whose light requires thousands of years to reach us are suns and are surrounded by planets and worlds similar to those we know. We may also assume, he holds, that thousands of these planets have arrived at the same stage of development as our world, and it naturally follows that on them the same conditions of life prevail as on this earth, and there is no valid reason why human beings should not live there as they do here.

Professor Haeckel takes care to explain that there are doubtless many planets the temperature of which is such that life, as we understand the term, cannot be sustained on them. He thinks it very probable that there are types of animals and plants on some planets which are not to be found on the earth. According to him it is very likely that the biogenetic process exists on Mars, Venus and possibly some other planets of our system, as well as on planets of other solar systems, but plants on these planets have reached a higher stage of development than has been reached by animals and plants of this earth.

If we assume that Mars is inhabited—and Professor Haeckel seems pretty well satisfied that it is—we must assume, he holds, that the men and women whose home is on the planet are not such as we, but of a far higher type. They may resemble us exteriorly, but they are free from our physical defects and excel us in strength and gracefulness. It is in the intellectual sphere, however, that their superiority is most clearly shown. If there are human beings on these planets, says Prof. Haeckel, it is extremely probable that they far surpass ordinary men and women in intelligence.

Outlived the Romance.

Mrs. Marmaduke (enthusiastically)—See those young lovers sitting so close together on that bench, Tom? How beautifully the future opens before them! How happy they are! To them everything is possible!

Mr. Marmaduke—And nothing probable.—Harper's Bazar.

Forgotten Her Calling.

"Yes, the doctor ordered him sent to the hospital. He wasn't getting the right kind of care at home."

"Let's see. Whom did he marry?"

"His wife was a trained nurse."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

Col. Greenwood Off.

Lt.-Col. Greenwood left for Kingston yesterday, on his way to South Africa. He was given a send-off on the departure of the Belleville train. A number of leading citizens went to the station to bid him a last farewell, amongst whom were A. P. Poussette, Q. C.; Col. Rogers, Major Edwards and others, including a number of ladies.

New Readers

We have just received a neat little book of new readings in Scotch and English for social gatherings. The elections are from the works of Mr John Imrie, Toronto and are up to date. For sale at Times Bookstore.

Police Court.

At the police court yesterday a boy was charged with cruelty to animals. The offence complained of in this case was the driving of a poor old horse, horribly lame and a wreck of the most complete and pitiable kind, on the street last Monday afternoon. The animal was drawing a load of ashes and its condition was noticed by many on the street that afternoon and many comments were passed on it. At the court an information was laid against the owner of the horse and employer of the boy who drove it, and the case against the lad was held over.

County Maps.

Only a few copies of the splendid new map of Peterborough County left Mounted on canvas with wooden rollers, $2; paper 50c. Times Bookstore

The Chemong Lake Bridge.

Considerable interest has been created in town over the rumor that the Government will not give the $10,000 promised to the Chemong Lake bridge unless the bridge be made a permanent one. This means that the work will not be proceeded with at present, for the County Council has not the funds or does it propose to fill in all the way. The County Council will meet next week, when the matter will come before them.

A Sad Journey.

Mr. W. J. Pearson, the well known horse buyer, of Montreal, and his son, Mr. Percy, received a telegram yesterday while staying at the White House informing them that Mr. Wm. Pearson, who is captain of the Trinity hockey team, Montreal, was dying. There was no particulars given as to the cause of his illness. Mr. Pearson and Mr. Percy left on the first train for home. Their many friends in Peterborough and elsewhere will sympathize with Mr. Pearson and will join in the wish that the young man may recover.

THE CENTRAL EXHIBITION.

MEETING OF AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY YESTERDAY.

Mr. F. H. Dobbin is Elected President—Reorganization of the Association Begins.

The annual meeting of the West Peterborough Agricultural Society took place in the Town Council Chamber yesterday afternoon.

There were about fifteen or sixteen gentlemen present when the meeting opened, which number was increased to eighteen or nineteen before it adjourned.

Mr. W. J. Green, the Secretary-Treasurer read the financial statement which showed that the Society had paid all its obligations, and owed the bank between eight and nine hundred dollars. The prize winners and those who had accounts against the Society in connection with the Fall Exhibition, accepted, in most cases, seventy cents on the dollar in settlement of their claims.

Mr. G. W. Fitzgerald, the retiring president stated that the affairs of the society were ing ood shape. The failure to make ends meet last year was due entirely to bad weather and not to bad management. They should elect a strong board, and he had no doubt that the society would be free from debt in a couple of years at most.

Mr. F. H. Dobbin, was 'n motion, heard. He had a scheme to propose which he thought would put the society in a good financial position. He had the names of twent business men of the town who were prepared to subscribe $100 each towards the exhibition provided they were allowed to participate in the management of the society. He thought that by associating the business men and getting them interested financially in the society, there would be good results. The addition of a couple of thousand dollars to the funds of the society, would put them in a position to offer attractions that would swell the gate receipts. He thought a good strong board, composed of farmers and merchants would be able to secure a guarantee of $500 from the Town Council and a similar guarantee for the County council against bad weather.

Mr. Wm. Collins was requested to take the chair, and the election of officers then proceeded as follows;

President—F. H. Dobbin.

First Vice-President—Geo. E. Elliott.

Second Vice-President—H. C. Garbutt.

Directors—Messrs. J. J. Turner, W. E. Conway, D. Kennedy, T. M. Hunter, G. W. Fitzgerald, Geo. W. Bennett, A. Fair, R. Varica, C. B. McAllister

Honorary Directors—S. D. Wrightmeyer, T. E. Bradburn, A. Saunders, James Davidson, G. W. Hatton and W. H. Robertson.

A long discussion took place as to two or a three days show, after which the meeting adjourned.

A BRAWNY SCOT.

Eggs and Grape-Nuts.

"I would like to give you my experience since using Grape-Nuts ten weeks. I began weighing 175 pounds with a big stomach owing to improper digestion.

I now weigh 190 pounds, and the flesh is on the right places, i. e., the entire muscular anatomy.

Before trying Grape-Nuts I looked upon the food as a Yankee dodge to fleece the public. (I am Scotch.) I am glad to admit my mistake. I stir two raw eggs in one half-cup Grape-Nuts, sugar to taste, beat all together two minutes, add boiling water one half-cup; let stand two minutes, and you have a dish that would satisfy the Prince of Wales for once in his life anyhow. I have a delicate sister in Edinburgh, Scotland, who wants Grape-Nuts. Can she get them there?" John W. [illegible], Oakland, California.

THE COLTS WIN.

A Rattling Fine Hockey Match at the Rink Last Night.

Talk about fast hockey matches. Thunderations, gee whiz, but ain't the Colts corkers. Just think of it, Peterborough 12, Cobourg 6. "Cullie" Robertson will cry for a week. His favorites lost and they lost in a fair and square game of hockey. There was not a word of dissatisfaction on either side. Everything passed off well and the onlookers got their money's worth.

The local boys started in with a rush just after the game started and had run up three goals before the visitors got a sight of it, when Bowie by a clever shot tallied one for Cobourg. Then the Colts scored three more, and the visitors 3 before half time, when the scor was 6—4 in favor of Peterborough.

In the second half the visitors scored the first goal and the crowd cheered to the echo. It was getting very hot but when Harry King got hold of the puck in the next game, and by a brilliant piece of passing between "Maggie" managed to score. It was thought that the Boers had struck the town, for such a wild lot of girls in the gallery never was seen. Cobourg followed with another game in a short time, which Peterborough followed up with 6 more. Score—12 to 6 in favor of Peterborough.

Mr. Percy Brown, of Toronto, was the referee and gave the best of satisfaction.

The teams were composed as follows—

Cobourg—Osler, goal; Field, point; Brown, cover; Hutchins, Bowie, Rooney and McCallum, forwards.

Peterborough—Miller, goal; McGrath, point; Armstrong, cover; Morgan, King, Lynch and Whitcroft, forwards.

Umpires—F. D. Kerr and W. H. McQuillan.

Timekeepers—D. Field and W. J. English.

"Boiler Plate."

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I see you use the words "boiler plate" when referring to your local contemporaries. Would you kindly explain what is meant by the term, and oblige

A CONSTANT READER.

[Answer—The term is used in connection with newspapers that buy their matter ready-set in plates, and have it shipped to them daily. Some newspapers do very little type-setting, buying nearly all their matter in plate form. There are two concerns in Toronto that supply "Country" newspapers with a daily "News" service. One of these—the Central Press Agency—takes the matter that appears in the World and has it re-cast and shipped to many newspapers. Thus, you notice the telegraph news of many papers is so conspicuous by its similarity. This great family journal gets its late news direct by wire. It uses very little "boiler" plate—all its news service being set up and edited at home. Now that we are on the subject, we would suggest to our esteemed local contemporaries the advisability of throwing aside the habiliments of babyhood, and spending their money for typesetting at home. —Ed. Times.]

Governing Porto Rico.

New York, Jan. 17.—The Herald prints a despatch from Washington today which says that the question of tariff and legislation for Puerto Rico has caused such a division of opinion among Republicans in Congress that it may enter actively into the next campaign. The principal points of attack by the extreme protective wing of the party is the proposed free trade which would let in Puerto Rican sugars free of duty. President McKinley has also disagreed with some of the leading members of the House and Senate committees as to the measure of representation in the new Government which it is safe to give the inhabitants of the islands. The President is inclined to believe that the people have not yet attained the stage when it will be feasible to place in their hands the election of members of their general assembly, as is provided in the Foraker and Cooper bills.

Loss Half a Million.

Victoria, B. C., Jan. 17.—A large part of the business portion of Dawson City was burned last Wednesday night. The loss exceeds half a million dollars, according to a brief despatch received at Skaguay late on Wednesday night last.

The steamer Baralton brought the news to Skaguay before the details were received. Much suffering must have followed the fire, as the temperature at Dawson was 40 degrees below zero with wind blowing to make the more worse. The city had been entirely without the regular water supply for two weeks. The city mains having hurriedly been put in two years ago, were worn out in places. In consequence the pumping plant was shut down about Christmas, leaving the city dependent upon the old method of hauling water from the Yukon river. Between December 1 and 21, eighteen fires occurred in Dawson, being caused by overheated flues. Wednesday night's fire was stated to be under control when the steamer left Skaguay.

"The forward movement of Ladysmith began on Wednesday, Jan. 10, from Frere and Chieveley.

Lord Dundonald mounted brigade with the fifth brigade under Gen. Hart comprising the Dublins, the Connaughts, the Inniskillings and the Border regiments proceeded northwesterly to Springfield. The position had previously been thoroughly reconnoitered. A few miles out of Frere Lord Dundonald passed targets erected by the Boers to represent a force advancing in skirmishing order. Evidently the Boers had been firing at these from the adjacent hills. Lord Dundonald pushed on and as the main column advanced it was noticed that Springfield was not occupied by Boers and that the fifth brigade had taken possession. The British transport extending for several miles and comprised some 5000 vehicles.

ROBERTS' OFFICIAL STORY.

London, Jan. 18.—The War Office has received the following despatch from General Roberts, dated Cape Town, to-day:

"I have received a telegram from General Buller stating that one brigade and a Howitzer battery have crossed the Tugela river at Potgeiter's Drift. Five miles further west, at Trichard's Drift, General Warren has thrown a pontoon bridge over the river. By this part of his force crossed yesterday. The remainder is expected by this morning to be on the north bank. Warren hopes he will be able to turn the enemy's position, which five miles off to his right front is being strongly entrenched."

THE TIDE HAS TURNED.

London, Jan. 18.—The rumors from Cape Town that Ladysmith is already relieved are apparently ahead of the facts. In any case, Lord Roberts, whose reports were despatched this morning, was not aware of it, and his dates prelude the possibility that the troops mentioned in his despatch have so soon reached the beleagured town. Though there are some discrepancies in the telegrams, the whole tenor of the news points to General Buller's second advance having begun with good prospects of success, but it is generally recognized that with an enemy so recourceful as the Boers have proved themselves to be, it is idle to indulge in over-confidence. The net result, so far as known, in that Gen. Buller occupies two commanding positions north of the Tugela River, there by securing at least two crossings by which he can bring up necessary reinforcements.

The officials of the War Office here are satisfied that the tide has turned and that news of a more hopeful character from a British point of view will hereafter be the rule, instead of the exception. That the British advance in a northeasterly direction will be fiercely resisted is fully anticipated. The Boer force is probably superior to the British and the despatches show the burghers occupy strong positions.

There is some doubt as to whether the Sproenkop occupied by General Warren is identical with Spionkop. If so, the British are within a few miles of Acton Homes, the scene of the earlier conflicts between General White's forces and the invading Free Staters, whence there is a good road direct to Ladysmith.

CABINET FACING A CRISIS.

London, Jan. 18.—The prospects of the Government at the re-opening of Parliament continue to be discussed with interest. It is not longer doubted that the Cabinet will stand or fall together. If Sir Charles Dike's proposed amendment is carried the Government will take it as a vote of censure, and appeal to the country, trusting to the voters recognizing the danger of re-organizing the Cabinet in the midst of the present crisis.

A coalition government is declared to be out of the question, and it is thought that the people will decline to entrust the conduct of the war to the Liberals under any circumstances.

Little Chance of Conciliation.

Mr. George Smalley cables the London Times, quoting American opinions on the actions of what he calls "the Conciliation Committee," which in desirous of repeating the Majuba surrender. This ludicrously unimportant gathering is headed by Silas Kitto Hocking, a popular religious novelist, but it has attracted no atenfion here, and is not likely to have the slightest influence on public opinion, though it threatens to call a public meeting to pass resolutions demanding an end to the war, on the ground that Great Britain's action is unjust.

WARREN'S PASSAGE OPPOSED.

London, Jan. 18.—While General Warren's force was crossing the Tugela River, the Boers occupied a thickly-wooded plantation a mile north of the river, and sent several volleys into the advance guard. The British replied and the artillery opened on a neighboring kopje. As the British pushed across the river, the Boers found their position uncomfortable, and retired to the hills. Immediately after the pontoon bridge was completed, the whole British force crossed. It is thought probable that a combined forward movement has since developed. In the meanwhile the naval guns on Zwart Kop had been persistently shelling the Boer entrenchments facing the kopjes occupied by Lyttleton's brigade.

IN TWO PLACES.

London, Thursday, Jan. 18.—The second edition of the Daily Telegraph publishes a despatch from Spearman's Farm, which says that Gen. Lyttleton, after crossing the Tugela, seized with little opposition a line of low ridges a mile from Potgieter's drift.

Howitzers were carried across the river during the night.

The naval guns and Howitzers effectively shelled the Boer position from Mount Alice near Swartskop.

General Warren crossed the river six miles further west, near Wagon Drift, in the face of a hot and heavy fire from the Boer cannon and rifles. He has effected a most satisfactory lodgment two miles further, towards Sproenkop.

A despatch to the Times from Spearman's Farm, filed at the same hour as the Daily Telegraph's despatch, says that General Warren is now crossing the river without opposition, though the Boers are holding a position five miles from the river.

A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company says that the difficulties in crossing the swollen river are great. The wagons are quite covered.

It is noteworthy that none of the telegrams from Spearman's Farm mention Generals Buller, Clery, Barton or Hart.

The Pietermaritzburg correspondent of The Daily Mail, telegraphing late Wednesday evening, Jan. 17, says—

"Arrivals from Estcourt report that there was fighting on the Tugela to-day. The result is not known here."

The War Office announced at midnight that no further news had been received. A large crowd of enquirers, including the Duke of Norfolk, left disappointed.

RELIEF OF LADYSMITH.

London, Jan. 18.—A Cape Town special despatch dated to-day says it is persistently reported there that Ladysmith has been relieved.

GALLANTRY OF CAVALRYMEN.

Spearman Farm, Natal, aJn. 17, 9.10 p m.—Lord Dundonald, with the Mounted Brigade, pushed suddenly forward on Thursday last and seized the Springfield bridge. The, hurrying forward, he took a very strong positio nat Zwartkop, commanding Potgieter's drift, finding the Boers totally unprepared for the British advance.

A number of the enemy were bathing in the river when Lord Dundonald's force appeared.

General Lyttleton's brigade was sent to hold the position.

The whole British force, with the exception of a force to garrison Colenso, advanced without delay.

General Hildyard's command is now at Springfield.

The South African Light Horse desired to bring the punt, or ferry boat to the south side of the river, and six men of that command therefore swam the river and brought the boatover under Lieut. Carlyle.

After a wait of four days the British advance was resumed yesterday, General Lyttleton's brigade crossing Potgieter's drift in the evening and holding the kopje on the British right.

Yaquis Make a Stand

El Paso, Texas, Jan. 18.—The Indians of Sonora, the only race in all Mexico, that was able to survive the Spanish invasion and preserve its individuality, are making their last stand against the Mexican Government. Thus far it seems the Mexican soldiers have been found inadequate to cope with the Yaquis.

A proclamation has been issued by the ruler of the Yaqui nation, addressed to "The American People," and is in part as follows—

"The Yaquai nation has begun its struggle for independence. It will no longer tolerate the Mexican army in Sonora. The nation has established a provisional government, the officers of which are at Babisga."

He Married a Gould.

Paris, Jan. 18.—The Matin to-day says it is rumored on the bourses that Count Boni de Castellane, husband of Anna Gould, has lost 2,000,000 francs by unlucky industrial speculations.

The Marquis de Castellane, father of Count Boni de Castellane, denies most emphatically the story that Count Boni has failed to meet his obligations, due, to bourse transactions, for the simple reason, he adds, that his son has never taken part in the alleged speculations. The Marquis explains that the fact that Count Boni and his wife are on their way to America has been taken advantage of and furnished the opportunity for false rumors.

"LOCHABER NO MORE."

A Mournful Word-picture Descriptive of the Funeral of Gallant Gen. Wauchope and His Brave Soldiers of the Highland Brigade.

London, Jan. 18.—Some of the most brilliant work in the way of descriptive writing ever done by British war correspondents has been appearing in the London papers during the past few days. After tracing the terrible loss suffered by the Highland Brigade at Magersfontein the Daily News' correspondent thus writes of the burial of General Wauchope—

"Three hundred yards to the rear of the little township of Modder River, just as the sun was sinking in a blaze of African splendor, on the evening of Tuesday, the 12th of De., a long, shallow grave lay exposed in the breast of the veldt. To the westward the broad river, fringed with trees, runs murmuringly; to the eastward, the heights, still held by the enemy, scowled menacingly; north and south, the veldt undulated peacefully; a few paces to the northward of that grave fifty dead Highlanders lay dressed as they had fallen on the field of battle; they had followed their chief to the field, and they were to follow him to the grave.

"How grim and stern those men looked as they lay face upward to the sky, with great hands clutched in the last agony, and brows still knit with the stern lusts of the strife in which they had fallen. The plaids dear to every Highland clan were represented there, and as I looked out of the distance came sounds of pipes. It was the general coming to join his men There, right under the eyes of the enemy moved with slow and solemn tread, all that remained of the Highland Brigade. In front of them walked the chaplain, with bared head, dressed in his robes of office: then came the pipers with their pipes, sixteen in all, and behind them, with arms reversed, moved the Highlanders, dressed in all the regalia of the midst the dead general, borne by four of his comrades. Out swelled the pipes to the strain of "The Flowers of the Forest," now ringing proud and high, until the soldier's head went back in haughty defiance, and eyes flashed through tears like sunlight o steel, now sinking to a moaning wail like a woman mourning for her first born, until proud heads dropped forward until they rested on heaving chests and tears rolled down the wan and scarred faces, and the choking sobs broke through the solemn rythm of the march of death.

"Then once again the pipes pealed out, and 'Lochaber No More' cut through the stillness like a cry of pain, until one could almost hear the widow in her Highland home moaning for the soldier she would welcome back no more.

"Then, as if touched by the magic of one thought, the soldiers turned their tear-damped eyes from the still form in the shallowy grave towards the heights, where Cronje, the 'Lion of Africa,' and his soldiers stood. Then every cheek flushed crimson and strong jaws set like steel, and the veins on the hands that clasped the rifle handles swelled almost to bursting with the fervor of the grip, and that look from those silent armed men spoke more eloquently than ever spoke the tongues of orators. For on each frowning face the spirit of vengeance sat, and each sparkling eye asked silently for blood. God help the Boers when next the Highland pibroch sounds; God rest the Boers' souls when the Highland bayonets charge for neither death, nor hell, nor things above, nor things below, will hold the Scots back from their blood feud.

"At the head of the grave, at the point nearest the enemy, the general was laid to sleep, his officers grouped around him, while in line behind him his soldiers were laid in a double row wrapped in their blankets. No shots were fired over the dead men resting so peacefully, only the salute was given, and then the men marched campwards as the darkness of an African night rolled over the far-stretching breadth of the veldt."

AUSTRALIANS WERE AMBUSHED BY BOERS

Nineteen of Them Surrounded by the Enemy Near Norvell's Farm.

PUT UP A GALLANT FIGHT AGAINST GREAT ODDS.

Upon Being Surprised They Make for a Kopje, Intending to Make a Stand, But Find the Boers There Before Them.

One Killed, Several Wounded.

Rensberg, Cape Colony, Jan. 17. — A patrol composed of sixteen men of the New South Wales Lancers and South Australians were ambushed yesterday by the Boers and overwhelmed after a severe fight. Two of the detachment have escaped and arrived in camp.

This morning a patrol visited the scene of the fight and found one dead Australian and one wounded man. A number of dead Boer horses were also found, showing that the Australians made a gallant fight before surrendering.

It appears that when the Australians encountered the first body of Boers and found their retreat cut off they galloped for a nearby kopje, hoping to beat off the Boers, but on arriving they found another force of burghers concealed there.

Later six more of the Australians returned. The rest of them were captured.

BOERS SHELL WOMEN

London, Jan. 18.—The following despatch has been received from Mafeking, under date of Jan. 3:

"The enemy began a renewed and vigorous bombardment Jan. 1st, and deliberately fired six 9-pounder shots into the women's laager, killing a little girl, and wounding two children. The strategical position is unchanged."

Col. Baden-Powell sent a strong protest to Commandant Snyman against shelling the women's laager.

"Two mules killed by a shell were eaten by the Kaffirs."

GATACRE WARNS THE BOERS.

Sterkstroom, Wednesday, Jan. 17.—General Gatacre has warned the Boer commandant that if their women are not removed they must take their chance of being shot in the event of an attack. All is quiet here.

STORMBERG IN POOR STATE.

Molteno, Jan. 18. — Montmorency's scouts reconnoitered yesterday to within three miles of Stormberg, the Cape police in support. The scouts captured a considerable drove of horses belonging to a rebel farmer. During the retirement of our men the Boers fired heavily at long ranges, but without effect. Our scouts had an excellent view of the enemy's position. There is good reason to believe that the Stormberg garrison is much reduced. Possibly the commander has shifted his ground to obtain fresh pasture but it is more probable that he has moved towards Colesberg to oppose General French. The enemy, if not weak, must have been very unenterprising, since our patrols were in touch with them from 9 in the morning until 5 in the evening without experiencing any pressure.

HUNDREDS OF FOREIGNERS.

London, Jan. 18.—Acorrespondent of The Daily Mail at Lourenzo Marquez says: "Numerous foreigners arrive here in French vessels, they entrain at a station outside the town, and leave at a station before the Transvaal is reached. Then they walk across the border and rejoin the train. Hundreds have passed through in that way since the outbreak of the war.

SOLOMON WAS LOYAL.

London, Jan. 18.—The Cape Town correspondent of the Daily Telegraph telegraphing January, 16, says:

"Attorney-General Solomon who went to meet Lord Roberts and Lord Kitchener, informed his colleagues in the Cape Cabinet that if none of them went, he would not refrain from going All declined. Mr. Schreiner the President, sent his secretary. Mr. Solomon was hooted by the crowd, out his action is now approved. Lord Roberts and Lord Kitchener have taken buildings for permanent offices."

SMALLPOX IN BOER CAMPS.

London, Jan. 18.—The Durban correspondent of the Standard telegraphing Tuesday, says: "The Government has cancelled the orders calling out the rifle associations for active service.

"It is reported that smallpox has broken out in the Boer camps in Natal."

HIGHLANDERS WERE HEROES

London, Jan. 18.—The correspondent of the Daily News gives a graphic account of the way in which disaster over took the Highlanders at Modder River.

"During the night it was considered expedient that the Highland Brigade, about 4,000 strong, under Gen. Wauchope, should get close enough to the lines of the foe to make it possible to charge the heights. At midnight the gallant but ill-fated men moved cautiously through the darkness toward the kopje where the Boers were most strongly entrenched. They were led by a guide who was supposed to know every inch of the country, out into the darkness of an African night.

"So onward, until three of the clock on the Monday. Then out of the darkness a rifle rang sharp and clear, a herald of disaster—a soldier had tripped in the darkness over the hidden wires laid down by the enemy. In a second in the twinkling of an eye, the searchlights of the Boers fell broad and clear as the noonday sun on the ranks of the doomed Highlanders, though it left the enemy concealed in the shadows of the frowning mass of hills behind them. For one brief moment the Scots seemed paralyzed by the suddenness of their discovery, for they knew that they were huddled together like sheep within 50 yards of the trenches of the foe.

"Then clear above the confusion rolled the voice of the general, 'Steady, men, steady!'—and like an echo to the veterans, out came the crash of nearly a thousand rifles not 50 paces from them. The Highlanders reeled before the shock like trees before the tempest their best, their bravest, fell in that wild hail of lead. General Wauchope was down, riddled with bullets, yet gasping, dying, bleeding from every vein, the Highland chief raised himself on his hands and knees and cheered his men forward. Men and officers fell in heaps together.

"The Black Watch charged, and the Gordons and Seaforths, with a yell that stirred the British camp below, rushed onward to death or disaster.

"The accursed wires caught them round the legs until they floundered like trapped wolves, and all the time the rifles of the foe sang the song of death in their ears. Then they fell back broken and beaten, leaving nearly 1,300 dead and wounded, just where the broad breast of the grassy veldt melts into the embrace of the rugged African hills, and an hour later the dawning came of the dreariest day that Scotland has known for ag eneration past.

"Of her officers, the flower of her chivalry, the pride of her breeding, but few remain to tell the tale, a sad tale truly, but one untinted with dishonor or smirched with disgrace, for up these heights under similar circumstances, even a brigade of devils could scarce have hoped to pass. All that mortal men could do, the Scots did, they tried, they failed, they fell, and there is nothing left us now but to mourn for them and avenge them.

"In vain all that day Methuen tried by every rule he knew how to draw the enemy; vainly the Lancers rode recklessly to induce those human rock limpets to come out and cut them off. Cronje knew the mettle of our men, and an ironic laugh played around his iron mouth, and still he stayed within his native fastness, but death set ever at his elbow, for our gunners dropped the lyddite shells and the howling shrapnel all along his lines, until the trenches ran bloody, and many of his guns were silenced.

"When at 1.30 p.m. of Tuesday we drew off to Modder River, to recuperate, we left nearly three thousand dead and wounded of grim old Cronje's men as a token that the Lion of England had bared his teeth in earnest."

Thousands Revel in Wad Riot.

Rio Janeiro, Jan. 18.—More than 20,000 drivers of all kinds of vehicles struck yesterday. A small faction of monarchists, headed by Curo Reto, a brother of Carlos Alfonso, and Mallino Reis, attempted to take advantage of the situation. Numerous groups attacked different points, tearing up the street car rails and destroying cars. Several thousand of rioters, in front of the President's palace, raised cries of "Long live the monarchy! Death to the republic!" A small force of cavalry dispersed the rioters with difficulty.

The city to-day has the appearance of martial law having been proclaimed The horse cars and other vehicles are partly working. The police during the first hours of the disturbance were extremely weak and inefficient, but were reinforced by regular troops, especially cavalry, and order was re-established.

New Steamship Service

Ottawa, Jan. 18.—Tenders have been invited for a monthly steamship service including the carrying of mails, between Halifax and Kingston, Jamacia, calling at Bermuda and Turk's island. The service is to commence in the month of July next and to continue for a period of five years. The steamships employed are to be of not less than 1,600 tons net register, with accommodation for at least 30 first-class passengers, with proper accommodation for the transport of mails, with a speed capacity of not less than thirteen knots per hour, and fitted with adequate cold storage accommodation, on terms to be arranged with the Minister of Agriculture, similar to those accorded steamships running between Canada and Great Britain.

Scalded to Death.

Hamilton, aJn. 17.—Percy Carroll, the four year old son of Matthew Carroll, of Hannah street, was fatally scalded this evening. The little fellow suffered from convulsions, and his mother, who was ill, told her husband to give him a hot bath. Carroll says he poured out the water, and felt it to see if it was too hot, after which he was removed to th ehospital where he died an hour after his arrival. An inquest will be held by Coroner Griffin to-night.

SEND HORSES TO ENGLAND.

The greatest want the British forces will experience in the war now going on is not men, but horses. If more help is called for, Canada would serve the cause best by sending forward a couple of thousand remounts. No doubt it would be a most acceptable contribution to the war. England is making large purchases of horses and mules in the United States. For years there has been a decline in European sources for horses required for cavalry and artillery. Outside of Australia and India there is no place, save the United States and Canada, for England to look for horses. The Persian gulf sources of supply have been absorbed by Russia, and horse breeding in tropical India has not been a success. The nations of Europe cannot spare horses for military service, if they were ever so much inclined, having use, immediately for all they can raise. Twenty-five or 30 years ago England depended upon Australia as a reliable source of supply for artillery horses and cavalry mounts. A great draft was made upon the country, not alone by Great Britain, but Russia and France sought that market for horses. In consequence there has been an increasing scarcity of animals of the right stamp. Some years ago a British officer of the Remount Service was sent to Australia with the object of ascertaining the resources of the Australian studs. He reported that the number of horses good enough for the army fell far short of the number required. There was not enough to supply the army of India, much less all the other English dependencies. Years ago Australian horse-breeders learned that if their horses were good enough for army purposes in England they were equally as desirable as omnibus horses for the London and other companies. The demand for London alone for omnibus horses is 20,000 a year. This requirement established a market in itself. With other countries practically closed for horses of useful quality, the demand on Australia more than kept pace with the supply. Then when it became apparent to the Australian farmer that the rearing of sheep paid better than horse-breeding he disposed of the best mares for working instead of keeping them in the stud, and this is the one great reason why good horses of every class have become scarce in Australia.

A SUGGESTION FOR WEST PETERBORO'.

It is said that Mr. J. B. McWilliams will be the Liberal candidate at the next election for the Dominion Parliament in West Peterborough, and that Mr. James Kendry, the present member, will be his opponent. The Times has a suggestion to make in this regard—In the recent municipal election at Cheltenham, Eng., Councillor Bence, the retiring representative of the ward, recognizing the impossibility of personally canvassing every elector and the equally unsatisfactory method of inviting them to public meetings, condensed his claim to their support in a speech into the gramaphone, which was afterward used by his canvassers in the house-to-house visits and in the houses of refreshment in the evenings. Mr. Bence polled twice as many votes as his opponents. This idea is respectfully referred to the West Peterborough candidates for their consideration. If Messrs. McWilliams and Kendry will meet in some suitably secluded spot and deliver a speech apiece to some waiting phonograph they will be able to do their spouting for them, thus leaving them more time to devote to the more useful work of electioneering wherein speeches cut no ice.

The idea might be still further enlarged and the programme enlivened by a few songs which Capt. Garvin might warble between the speeches.

Some of the more lurid chunks of Mr. McWilliams' and Mr. Kendry's eloquence might be reserved for a phonograph specially strengthened for the purpose.

GLIMPSES OF SOUTH AFRICA.

In Peace and in War—A Splendid Lot of Views.

Southern Africa, that enormous expanse of tropically verdant territory extending from the Lambesi River to the Cape of Good Hope, has for a century or more lain dormant to the eyes of the civilized world. Only within the past two decades has public attention been drawn to the wonderful natural resources and mineral wealth of this wild and rugged land, and yet, within this period, marvelous creation of brilliant modern cities have supplanted the desert lands, and haunts of savage tribes. The steady march of civilization, the all-pervading ambition to accumulate the wealth of diamonds and gold that lay beneath the crust of this benighted land, each has borne its part in the metamorphosis and heralded to the world the wonderful possibilities of that "Dark Continent" for the energy and enterprise that the 20th century will bring to light.

In no other country of the world has progress been marked with such adversity and strife as Africa. From the time the early Dutch settlers landed in the Cape Colony up to the present, there has existed almost a constant state of warfare; the natives disputing the advance of the Dutch and they in turn resenting the inroads of civilization. In spite of this, so strenuous were the efforts of the colonists in their determination to turn to account the beauties and resources of the land of their adoption, that today they enjoy the fruits of their successes in a paradise of tropical vegetation, a salubrious climate and surrounded by the highest advantages of intellectuality and luxuries of civilization.

Cape Town is the metropolis and seat of government of the Cape Colony. Its historical past and present is firmly linked in the traditions of the early Dutch and the Huguenots. True, the old forts and buildings of distinctly Dutch architecture still remain, but magnificent edificies of the most modern type, beautiful botanical gardens and the public improvements are evidences of the wonderful advance of civilization.

Port Elizabeth is the Liverpool of South Africa. It is a great commercial center, coupled with some of the largest shipping interests in the world; a city of the most modern type, essentially English in character, and possessing some of the largest as well as the most architecturally magnificent buildings and public institutions in South Africa.

Natal is the beautiful, tropical Garden Colony. Its luxurious vegetation and glorious climate, its wide avenues of trees and fine buildings, the native Zulu servants and the picturesque costumes of the Orientals, lend an ear of peace and tranquility, while the marks of civilization and progress are in evidence at every turn.

Johannesburg, the Golden, with its fine architectural creations, public institutions and parks, possesses many attractions that easily place it as the foremost city of South Africa. Its great industry, mining, the apparently inexhaustible veins of gold-bearing quartz, in which upwards of seven hundred millions of dollars are invested, has been the attraction for the thousands and thousands of "Uitlanders," whose "grievances" are substantially the cause for the cruel war between Briton and Boer, the battles of which have been ranked as the "bloodiest of the century."

So great has been the interest manifested in South Africa and the progress of the war, and so eager the thirst for information, coupled with the demand for a Pictorial History incident to the scenes of warfare, that the publication of "Glimpses of South Africa" has been undertaken upon a scale of grandeur, fidelity and completeness never before thought of, involving as it has an expense of extraordinary magnitude. In order that the work might be absolutely reliable and thorough in its character, the publishers have contracted for its authorship with Mr. Wymble Flemming, an Afrikander, whose authority upon South African matters is world-widely acknowledged. This gentleman,—born in the Cape Colony, having travelled over nearly every inch of the country south of the Lambesi River and lived in South Africa for nearly thirty years, with an extensive newspaper experience in Africa, England and America, the author of many interesting sketches of South African life and scenery, formerly connected with the consular service at Port Elizabeth, whose comments on the war have been so favorably received by the American press, and whose magnificent collection of photographs will appear in this work,—will present South Africa as it is today, with views of everything of public interest, including most of the important scenes of battle and a graphically illustrated description of each stage in the progress of the war.

This great work is published in serial form, and when complete will comprise the most magnificent collection of photographic reproductions of the British-Boer war and South Africa obtainable in this country. Portfolios distributed by "The Morning Times. For particulars see announcement on another page of this issue.

India Rubber Industry.

The bulletin of the Royal gardens, Kew, states that the falling off in the production of India rubber at Lagos is due to the reckless way in which the trees are being exhausted. There is a want of control over the collectors, who tap young trees and destroy whole rubber forests by overworking, so that this industry, which is an important sourse of wealth to the colony, is in danger of extinction. A similar disaster occurred in Madagascar, and now active steps are being taken to preserve the industry by the establishment of plantations of rubber producing plants.

South African Social Affairs.

The ladies of Kimberley are no doubt giving bombardment porch parties and bombardment teas.

Family Peacemakers.

More family troubles are adjusted by the magistrates in this city than the average person would willingly believe. There is hardly a day passes that every member of the minor judiciary is not called upon by a determined husband or wife, usually the latter, to issue a warrant. Nine cases out of ten the applicant is considerably excited and is eager to invoke the aid of the law in settling some trifling controversy. By calm argument and assurances the visitor can usually be persuaded to give the offender of her or his peace and happiness another chance, and a home is perhaps saved from being broken up.—Philadelphia Call.

Glimpses of ...South Africa..

IN PEACE AND IN WAR

By WYMBLE FLEMMING

a Native Afrikander, born in Cape Colony—Lived in Africa 28 years—Travelled extensively in all parts of Africa—Familiar with every inch of ground where fighting is going on—Large experience as a newspaper correspondent for Cape, English and American papers—Author of many sketches on South African life—For many years connected with the American Consular Service at Port Elizabeth, now temporarily residing in America while preparing the literary portion of this volume

The developments of the war in South Africa, its serious conflicts, the deeds of heroism of its participants, the great massing of Boer Armies and the unprecedented forward movement of British troops to the Cape, coupled with a universal desire for information concerning a country of which very little is known, have intensified public interest in the subject to an extent hitherto unequalled. With characteristic enterprise, this paper will supply the demand for South African literature that present conditions have created. To this end we now offer our readers the first number of a magnificent art series to be issued in weekly parts under the title of "GLIMPSES OF SOUTH AFRICA in Peace and in War." Illustrating and describing the current military events of the day and the sights and the scenes throughout all South Africa by aid of camera, pencil and pen, presenting a pictoral history of the

RAN A RACE WITH DEATH.

Narrow Margin by Which a Man on a Railway Bridge Won.

A high trestle bridge more than a quarter of a mile long, supporting the single track of the Nickel Plate railroad, spans the valley of Grand river, east of Painesville, O. The bridge is little wider than the distance between the rails, and the ties are placed eight or ten inches apart, the space between being open to the river below.

A young man who crossed recently had a thrilling experience on the bridge. He had just passed the center when a fast train rounded the curve behind him. As the engine whistled he quickened his pace. With every step the train was rushing nearer, and there was not a moment to lose.

Once the young man stumbled and seemed about to fall, but quickly regained his balance and hurried on. As he reached the place for which he had started the train was close behind, and he had just time to swing himself over the side of the bridge as the locomotive thundered by. The ends of the ties were slippery with grease from dripping axle boxes, and his foot slipped wide as he left the track. His right hand, stretched blindly out before him, touched a round iron bar, bracing two parts of the bridge, and, with a grip like that of a drowning man, his fingers clasped around it. For a moment he swung in empty air. In another his left hand had found a place beside his right, and his feet touched the welcome edge of a brace below. With bleeding fingers clutching the slender iron bar that vibrated widely from side to side, moments seemed hours.

At last the train passed, and the young man was able to climb slowly to the track above. Unnerved by the trying experience, he lay for a moment stretched across the rails and, then rising to his feet, with blanched face and unsteady limbs, made his way to firm ground.—Cleveland Leader.

THE MILL RUNS ITSELF.

Economical Way of Doing Business on a Connecticut Farm.

Joe McCormick of the International Pulp company tells a delicious story of paper making in Connecticut, which shows that operating a mill is not such a serious matter as these big proprietors would have us believe. Strolling along the countryside in haymaking time, Mr. McCormick happened on a little paper mill which buzzed merrily in a shady dell, with everything clean and sweet around it. A look in the office showed no one there, and the visitor then wandered over the mill, hoping to find some one to whom he could talk business. The machine was humming along, and it seemed impossible that there should be no one in attendance. But even shouting failed to bring forth signs of life, and Mr. McCormick was about to leave when he spied some men in a hayfield some distance away.

"I say," he called out to the nearest one when he got within hearing, "who runs this mill?"

"I do," was the reply.

"Well, who's the owner?"

"Why, I am, to be sure."

"Do you mean to say that the mill runs itself?"

"Cert. We start her up at 6 in the morning, and she runs till 6 in the evening. This mill's been weaned, stranger; she don't need a nurse. While I'm getting in hay she puts half a ton of paper on the roll. Gee up, Bess!"—Paper Trade Journal.

Table Talk.

Rather curiously Roxane in "Cyrano de Bergerac" belongs to the modern type which dates from the days of the Hotel de Rambouillet and has always had its votaries in France. To those precieuses mere conversation was une betise. They liked declamations; discussion, not on the right of woman to the ballot, but whether she should be held a little higher than the angels or consent to be beloved. This phase of preciosity led up to the French salon, where that hothouse fashion of preparing an intellectual bill of fare for guests found its most acceptable phase.

Mme. Campan, whose advice may be said to have formed a whole generation of charming women, used to prescribe the subject of talk for dinner tables, just as certain coteries of women prescribe it today. This was her system: "With 12 at table, talk voyages and literature; with eight, the fine arts, science, invention; with six, politics or philosophy; with four, sentiment, romantic adventure; with two, talk of yourself; egotism belongs to the tete-a-tete."—Ellen Olney Kirk in Lippincott's.

BILLS OVER A CENTURY OLD

They Show Tea to Have Been a Cambridge Student's Favorite Drink.

There is a bill for groceries, etc., furnished for an undergraduate at Cambridge in the year 1788. The bill contains one or two items of furniture. Apparently the undergraduate took over rooms already furnished at a valuation, and certain articles had to be bought new, such as a hearth brush, a pail, a mop and a "Holland gotch." One knows not what this means, but it cost 2 shillings 9 pence (48 cents).

The undergraduate would seem at first sight to have consumed tea in a most reckless manner. On Oct. 24 he is charged 2 shillings for Hyson and 1 shilling 6 pence for Congo. On Nov. 1 he is charged 2 shillings for tea and on the same day, which looks odd, 6 shillings 6 pence for tea. On the 9th of the month he buys a new teapot, the old one, one supposes, worn out with hard service. However, this tea lasts him till the end of the term, so that his tea costs him for the two months no more than 11 shillings, or $2.75, and as the price of tea at this time varied from 8 shillings to about 25 shillings we may conclude that he got through no more than a pound during the term.

In other words, this young man took for breakfast a slight repast of weak tea and bread and butter. Dinner was then served at 12, so that breakfast was only what the Indians call a "chota hasri." On sugar he spent 4 shillings, which means six pounds at 8 pence a pound. On candles he spent 24 shillings 8½ pence, or about 3 shillings a week. He burned wax candles, mold candles and "wax twist." Salt was a shilling a packet. On two occasions he bought sand. Was, then, the floor of his room sanded? It would seem so.

SOME COVETED SCRAWLS.

Rare Autographs For Which Immense Prices Have Been Paid.

The most prized autographs in the world are those of Shakespeare. Only seven are claimed to exist, three signatures to his will (each with a different spelling), two to conveyances of property, one in the folio edition of his plays (doubtful) and one in a Tudor translation of Montaigne. This last is in the British museum and cost over 3,000 guineas.

One thousand guineas was the price given by the late Mr. Alfred Morrison of Carlton House terrace for an autograph letter written by Marie Stuart to the archbishop of Guise. This and two other letters (one to the pope and the other to the king of France) were written by the unfortunate queen of Scots on the morning of her execution. The letter to the French king was destroyed during the days of the terror, while that to the pope is still preserved at the Vatican.

The well known bookseller Bernard Quaritch gave £1,000 for an autograph of Columbus, which was exhibited at the World's fair at Chicago. A Chicago autograph dealer is said to have offered to give $100,000, or over £20,000, for a genuine autograph of Shakespeare if brought to him within a year of making his offer. It was a safe bluff, for since the tragic fate of Chatterton no forger has cared to tackle the quaint scrawl of the Bard of Avon.—Collier's Weekly.

Gunner Wm. Wallace, of the second Canadian contingent, whose death from pneumonia at Kingston is noted in the contingent news, was formerly a resident of Peterborough and will be remembered by many friends here who will rgrt to heear of his untimely death.

THE ARCTIC MOSQUITO.

It Is About the Most Terrible Insect Pest in the World.

"Nothing that has ever been written about the arctic mosquito begins to come up to the real thing," said a guest in the St. Charles corridor the other evening. "I went up the Yukon river in the summer of 1896, representing the Alaska and Dominion Trading company, and we struck mosquitoes as soon as we got into the hills. They are twice as large as our familiar bayou species, and their sting is like the prod of a hot needle. They sweep along the valleys in dense clouds, and if they catch a man unprepared they are liable to blind him before he can escape. I heard stories of children being stung to death and can readily believe them.

"Whenever we went ashore we wore heavy hat nets and took the utmost precaution, but were certain to suffer more or less. One of our party cut the tongues out of his shoes, and a narrow line of sock was exposed under the lacing. Next day he was bitten there at least a hundred times, and his feet were so terribly inflamed that the shoes had to be cut off.

"Another man, a fireman in the boat crew, got drunk on Alaska whisky one afternoon and lay down to take a nap in a corner of the engine room. I noticed him a little later and was horrified at the solid brown mass of mosquitoes that had settled on a small exposed section of his cheek and throat. In an hour his face was swollen out of all resemblance to anything human, he was unable to swallow and was burning with fever. It was a week before he was able to be about. I saw a number of cattle near Fort Hamilton that had been made stone blind by stings near the eye.

"The arctic foothill mosquito is without doubt the most terrible insect pest in the world."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Loss Half a Million.

Victoria, B. C., Jan. 17.—A large part of the business portion of Dawson City was burned last Wednesday night. The loss exceeds half a million dollars, according to a brief despatch received at Skaguay late on Wednesday night last. The steamer Farallon brought the news to Skaguay before the details were received. Much suffering must have followed the fire, as the temperature at Dawson was 40 degrees below zero with wind blowing to make matters worse. The city had been entirely without the regular water supply for two weeks. The city mains having hurriedly been put in two years ago, were worn out in places. In consequence the pumping plant was shut down about Christmas, leaving the city dependent upon its old method of hauling water from the Yukon river. Between December 1 and 29, eighteen fires occurred at Dawson, all being caused by overheated fires. Wednesday night's fire was stated to be under control when the steamer left Skaguay.

The Patriotic Fund.

Ottawa, Jan. 17.—Mr. J. M. Courtney Deputy Minister of Finance and treasurer of the patriotic fund, has received a subscription of $2,000 from the Molsons Bank and $15 from Mr. Chas. H. Cunnigham, bringing the total received up to date $29,733.66. To this must be added $15,000 donated by the C.P.R. and $5,000 by the Bank of Nova Scotia, notice of which has been received by the treasurer. This makes the total contributions to the Canadian contingent Patriotic Fund to date $49,733.66 This is higly satisfactory, as the association was only organized by his Excellency a few days ago.

BOERS AT COLESBERG HARASSED BY BRITISH.

General French Coutinues to Administer Daily Checks on the Enemy.

MORE MILITIA BATTALIONS TO BE MOBILIZED.

Mafeking Still Holds Out, and There Was no Liklihood of Capitulation Six Days Ago—Troops Now Orders Are Considered to be Sufficient.

London, Jan. 17.—General French still continues to administer daily checks to the Boers who are fighting the fight of desperate men to prevent their being surrounded and cut off from their line of retreat. Yesterday a battle was aged around Coleskop, a steep and rock eminence near Colesberg which dominates the left flank of the enemy, and is evidently of vast importance judging by the efforts the Boers made to capture it and the British to retain it. General French has performed a feat performed frequently in British annals, and has planted artillery on the top of an almost impossible eminence, from which the kopjes occupied by the Boers can be searched and kept clear. The Boers yesterday used a fifteen-pounder captured from General Gatacre, but this was silenced by the British gunners, who played upon the Boer positions all day. French has now two guns on the summit of Coleskop and is apparently in a strong position, though he would do well to remember Majuba and provide against a repetition of that disaster which was caused by occupation of a hilltop which Colley thought impregnable. Now that two shiploads of reinforcements have been sent to General French it is likely that we may shortly hear of an advance on his part which will result in the crushing defeat of the Boers.

FRENCH MAKES HEADWAY.

Rensburg, Cape Colony, Jan. 16.—The Boers opened an artillery duel this morning, using a captured British fifteen pounder, which the British gunners ultimately silenced. The British kept up a searching fire all day long on the Boer Kopjes and also dragged up another gun to the summit of Colekop.

REINFORCEMENTS FOR FRENCH.

London, Jan. 17.—General French's success though consoling to the British is recognized as being only a side issue. The country is grateful to learn that the British losses in this engagement were only six men killed and five wounded.

NO FURTHER REINFORCEMENTS.

London, Jan. 17.—The War Office has wired to countermand the departure from Egypt of a number of officers who were previously ordered to South Africa. The Daily Chronicle, commenting upon this and upon other news related to it says: "There are some curious reports in circulation, apparently with some authenticity behind them, which point to the stoppage of the despatch of further reinforcements when the troops now mobilized shall have embarked. The new cavalry brigade is not to leave England at present."

FIVE NEW BATTERIES.

London, Jan. 17.—The War Office has issued orders for the formation of five new batteries.

Seventeen more militia battalions will be embodied in the course of a fortnight. These are fourteen infantry battalions and eleven cavalry regiments in the country. The War Office has placed an order for 32,000,000 cartridges in cases. The Yeomanry Committee announces that it has accepted 3,000 out of the 10,000 which it wishes to raise and still has 20,000 applicants to be examined.

MAFEKING STILL HOLDS OUT.

Lorenzo, Marquez, Jan. 17.—Six days ago Mafeking was still holding its own with no likelihood of capitulation. The garrison has a sufficiency of cattle and tinned meats. The former, however, are not in good codition. The scare leading to the surrender of Vryburg was carefully engineered by local members of the Bond, who plotted for the Boers to occupy the town, with the result that the waverers were induced to join the enemy. As to the importation of field guns via Delagoa Bay, it is openly stated at Johannesburg that twenty were smugled through. A Boer agent was severely bitten recntly. He bought a quantity of goods which arrived at Lorenzo Marques, and now finds that there is no chance of getting the goods or a refund of the substantial sum he paid for them.

ADMIRAL TAKES A COURSE.

London, Jan. 17.—Rear-Admiral Lord Charles Bersford is attending the Naval Signalling School in H.M.S. Victory at Portsmouth, for a course of instruction preparatory to taking up his post as second in command of the Mediterrean Squadron.

A Fireman's Tragic Death.

Montreal Jan. 17.—Capt. Philip H. Gibson, acting sub-chief, and one of the most popular members of the Montreal fire brigade lost his life yesterday under terribly shocking circumstances. Capt. Gibson returned from a call by a false alarm about half past eight, and was proceeding to his private apartments over No. 2 station on St. Gabriel street. When he reached the top of the stairway on the second story he stopped to take off his heavy boots. He leaned against the balustrade, overbalanced himself and fell down the well of the staircase, some twenty-five feet to the ground. The Notre Dame hospital ambulance was at once sent for, and the injured man was conveyed to that institution in a few minutes, but he died while still in the ambulance. Deceased had sustained a fracture of the base of the skull and a large scalp wound.

The Synod Enthusiastic

Montreal, Jan. 17.—There was an impressive outburst of loyalty at the opening of the Diocesan Synod of the Church of England, which convened in Synod hall this afternoon. His Lordship Bishop Bond, in closing his opening charge to the delegates, referred to the South African war. He said that Great Britain was fighting not for conquest or gold, but freedom, justice, law, and civilization, and the cause must triumph. They must grieve for their aged Queen, whose beneficient reign was closing in bloodshed, and that they would all pray that peace would soon be restored and England's arms victorious. Bishop Bond's remarks evoked the greatest enthusiasm, and when he closed all the delegates rose to their feet and sang the National Anthem amidst the greatest enthusiasm.

Will Release the Bundesrath.

Berlin, Jan. 17.—An official telegram from London says the British Government has declared that now the inquiry nito the seizure of the Bundesrath is concluded, her release may be expected immediately and a satisfactory settlement of the pending difficulties may be regarded as certain. Measures it is added, will also be taken to prevent a recurrence of similar incidents.

The Foreign Office officials informed the correspondent of the Associated Press that Great Britain admits no contraband of war was found on the Bundesrath, and promises that the steamer will be released to-day or to-morrow.

Rosebery has Resigned.

New York, Jan. 17.—A special to the World from London, says Lord Roseberry has resigned the presidency of the Eighty Club, in which he succeeded Gladstone. This club was founded in 1880 to utilise the energies of young Liberals at the universities and in the professions, and to train them for parliament. Lord Roseberry's resignation is regarded in political circles as an indication that he desires to place himself in a position where he can accept office in a reconstructed Unionist Ministry.

THE WRITERS.

Michael Davitt, during his days in parliament, did nearly all his literary work in the house writing room, where silence is enforced, sitting invariably in the same seat.

Paul Bourget has announced his intention of paying a second visit to this country. He will come next spring and gather material for a novel dealing with American social life.

Theodor Mommsen, at the age of 82 years, has published a new work, "Roman Criminal Law," as a companion to his great "Roman Constitutional Law." It is a volume of 1,078 closely printed, large octave pages.

Bjornstjerne Bjornson lately saw for the first time the statue of himself set up before the National theater in Christiania. He turned red in the face and demands that it be removed, as it is a libel on his personal appearance.

THE PARIS SHOW.

The Paris exposition catalogue will contain 100,000 names.

The parks of Milwaukee will be part of the exhibit of that city at the Paris exposition. A series of photographic views of the public parks of that city will be shown.

It took a bid of 275,000 francs to secure the privilege of letting out seats for the Paris exposition of 1900. For the 1899 exhibition the successful bid for the monopoly was 39,000 francs.

Governor Mount of Indiana is personally supervising an elaborate exhibit for his state at the Paris exposition. One of the features of this will be a series of large photographs to show the progress of the "good roads" movement in Indiana, where there are now 60,000 miles of graded and graveled highway.

Anarchy in Venezuela.

Paris, Jan. 17.—A despatch from Caracas is published here saying anarchy prevails in Venezuela. Owing to their refusal to advance the Government the money the directors of the banks of Caracas and Venezula, including a Frenchman, M. Montauban, and other foreign notabilities have been arrested and thrown into the fortress. The representations of the French charge d'affairs, it is added, have been disregarded, and the French colony at Caracas energetically demands that the French Atlantic squadron be despatched to the coast of Venezuela.

Nothing in the Statement.

Paris, Jan. 17.—The statement in the London Morning Post, that the Washington Administration has received letters from France, Germany, Great Britain and Russia demanding knowledge of the intentions of the United States as to the "open door" in China, and the future of the Philippines, was news to the Foreign Office officials here. They said it was the first time they had heard of any such action.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES

A QUEER EXPLOSION.

HOW A MOUNTAIN LOCOMOTIVE CAME TO AN UNTIMELY END.

There Was Neither Fire in Her Furnace Nor Water in Her Boiler, and Yet She Managed to Blow Up in the Most Approved Style.

Mr. Henry Alquist, a prominent railroad man, relates the story of a curious wreck, the facts in which he will vouch for.

"It is such a remarkable thing," said Mr. Alquist to a reporter, "that I fear many will be inclined to brand it as 'pipe.' I have been railroading now for over 20 years, and never in all my varied experience have I seen such a unique and complete wreck as the one I speak of—that of engine 1,129 of the Rio Grande Western. Railroad men will tell you that locomotives seldom explode nowadays, but 1,129 did and in a very peculiar way.

"At the time this wreck occurred I was holding down the job of train dispatcher at Soldier Summit, Utah, and a tough old job it was. Never been there, I suppose? Well, Soldier Summit is a station on the top of one of the Wasatch divides, a bleak and lonely place, where the Rio Grande Western has a roundhouse and coal chute located. At the summit are long snowsheds covering the tracks. These sheds protect the line from the winter. And it is only due to this method that a train ever gets over the mountain.

"On both sides of the mountain the line winds down in a succession of winding curves to lessen the grade. Running off from the railway are switches, which, diverging from the grade, run up into the hills and gradually come to a dead level. These switchbacks, as they are called, are so constructed that they can be thrown from any point on the grade. And if a train breaks in two while ascending the steep grade the runaway cars can be switched on to one of these spurs, where the breakaway finally stops after it has run up the spur as far as the momentum attained in its descent will take it.

"All heavy trains have an extra locomotive before the grade is tackled. These are called helper engines and are kept in roundhouses at each side of the mountain with steam up.

"One night I got word from Clear Creek, a town in the western valley, that the 9:20 freight would be 30 minutes late on account of having to pull out a crippled engine, 1,129. She had burned out her flues and had to be hauled to Grand Junction for repairs.

"That night about 10 o'clock, after I had passed down the Salt Lake express, I heard the freight coughing up the long grade from Clear Creek. There was a snowstorm raging, and the wind howled around the station like the mischief. When the overdue 9:20 pulled into the shelter of the big snowsheds on the wind swept summit, the first thing I asked was, 'Where's the dead engine?'

"'Behind the doghouse!' shouted the 'con.' But as I held my lamp above my head I failed to see it. I was just about to call his attention to it when, during a lull in the storm, we plainly heard the familiar rattle of the rails as the runaway engine flew at lightning speed down the mountain. No. 1,129 had broken loose and was tearing down the grade to destruction.

"I jumped and pulled the lever which opened the spur switches. This I knew would prevent a smashup, as the engine would run up on the switchback and come to a stop. But I was too late. Almost at the same instant I threw the lever a terrific explosion was heard from far down the mountain. The runaway had exploded."

"I thought you said a moment ago, Mr. Alquist," interrupted The Scimitar man, "that the locomotive was a 'dead one?' If she had no fire under her boiler, how could she explode?"

"That was the only thing I couldn't understand myself," the railroad man replied. "I could easily see how the dead engine could break loose on that grade, and I could understand not hearing its descent during such a howling blizzard, but the explosion floored me. The only theory which in any way solved the mystery was that the old kettle was blown up by compressed air.

"You see, when the engine broke loose from the freight and started down the mountain the pistons in the cylinders began to act as air compressors. During the rough trip up her throttle probably jarred open, and as the speed increased with every revolution of her drivers her boiler soon filled with compressed air. It was not long before those flying pistons had worked up a pressure of nearly 500 pounds to the square inch, which came in faster than it could escape by the safety valve, and before the old machine reached Clear Creek her boiler let go."

Wanted to See the President.

The Washington Star says that a big, gawky country lad went to the White House the other day just as the president had gone out for a morning stroll.

"I wants ter see the president," he announced to the first man he met.

"Well, there goes the president now," said the man addressed, pointing to the president's retreating form.

"Dern my time!" the young man ejaculated. "He walks just like any other man," and the fellow struck out so that he could get close enough to see the president well.

Warwick castle is held by many to be the most beautiful seat in England. The large baronial hall is a magnificent room. It is decorated with the most perfect specimens of armor, furnished in a luxurious manner, and masses of flowers and huge palms abound on every side.

LOVE-CHARMS.

The love-charm still lingers, the last link to the old days of ignorance and superstition when charms were believed to be powerful to cure disease and defeat death. The day of charms is gone, although some sweet miss now and again procures a love charm, not knowing that the greatest love charm of all is the beauty of perfect health. And this charm is in reach of every woman. When from the drains caused by feminine disorders, girls lose the beauty of form and fairness of face which men admire, they may cure the trouble and renew strength and beauty by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It overcomes all the ills peculiar to women. It imparts strength to delicate organs, stops the drains that sap vitality, restores the color to the cheek and roundness to the form. It brings health back and health itself is beauty. It is impossible for the face to be fair or the figure shapely if there are pains, irregularities, displacements, drains, or weakness in the organs of womanhood.

"I had female weakness very badly," writes Mrs. O. S. Adams, of Fargo, Cass Co., N. Dak. "I had to be in bed part of the time. I was tired all the time, could not do my housework; had fainting spells, nervous headache, backache and pain in my left side, when I would lie down; had pains and aches all over. I commenced taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and had not taken two bottles when I was able to be around again and to do my work, with no pain. I am now feeling better than for many years."

Don't you want a reliable doctor book? By sending 31 one-cent stamps to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., to cover cost of customs and mailing only, you will get by return mail a free copy of his great book, "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser," illustrated, 1008 pages, in paper-covers. Cloth bound, 50 stamps.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure biliousness.

Samoa's Talking Man.

Samoa's talking man, or "tulafali," is a character. All the affairs of state of the village in which he holds office are carried upon his shoulders. In ordinary he is the chief adviser, persuader, convincer and restrainer of the leading chiefs.

Having the gift of eloquence, he makes the most of it. He enjoys immunity from many things. He cannot be spoken of in ordinary terms. If it should be necessary to speak of his eyes or his mouth or his limbs, special honorable words must be used, words which attach to him alone and have never been applied to the personal parts of ordinary men.

As he stands to deliver his soft, persuasive, mellifluous oratory, with staff of office in his hand and his fly duster thrown over his shoulder, any one can see that he is a man of great importance, or if this is not apparent from his attitude it may be gathered from the attention paid to his utterances by gray haired chiefs and by youths and maidens. If the talking man is a clever fellow and understands his business, he is the chief ruling power in his tribe, although the nominal headship is always vested in a chief or patriarchal figurehead.

Slow Suicide.

A source of great evil among all workers is the widespread habit of eating a hearty meal hurriedly when the body is in a state of exhaustion. Too often, alas, the evil is enhanced by the fact that the food is innutritious, badly cooked and clogging in itself. This is one species of slow suicide, causing a long train of evils which are usually attributed to overwork. Now, it were better to go without food than to take it under these conditions. Your dog knows better than to eat when he is tired, and if you will watch him you will notice that he is always reluctant to be enticed into play after eating. Left to himself he will take a nap, or at least drop care for awhile and rest. Humanity might raise its standard of health by following the example set by the instincts of the brute creatures.—Health Culture.

His Opportunity.

"An operation for appendicitis," the surgeon assured the sufferer, "is rather a serious thing, of course, but it is not necessarily an alarming one, and it will demonstrate, moreover, just how much fortitude you have."

"Yes," replied the patient; "I suppose it will show just what's in me. Go ahead."—Chicago Tribune.

Picking Out the Waiters.

The safest plan to pursue at a reception where the waiters and male guests are clad in swallowtails is to jam your hands 'nto your trousers pockets and jingle a few coins when you meet a stranger. If his eyes begin to bulge and his hand commences to travel toward you, he's a waiter. This is a straight tip.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

A Generous Gift.

Mr. George Matthews, president of the George Matthews Packing Company, has sent $100 to the National Patriotic Fund. Mr. Matthews accompanied the splendid subscription with a letter in which every word was patriotic. Mr. Matthews has a son in the first contingent.

County Maps.

Only a few copies of the splendid new map of Peterborough County left. Mounted on canvas with wooden rollers, $2; paper 50c, Times Bookstore.

A Lecture.

Dr. Langstreet, the noted single tax advocate, delivered a lecture in the Y.M.C.A. Hall, last night to a fair audience. The single tax idea is gradually and surely coming to the fore. The lecture was exceedingly interesting and frequently applauded.

A Successful Institution.

The success of the Peterborough Business College, under the capable management of Principal Pringle, is almost phenomenal. There is one hundred students on the roll, with an average attendance of 85. Mr. Pringle will be obliged to enlarge his premises. The splendid work done by this popular institution is having results.

Died in Chicago.

Mr. Daniel Hoolihan, a native of Peterborough, died in Chicago from appendicitis. The deceased was only 23, and was the son of Mrs. Daniel Hoolihan, 460 Donegal street. There is much sympathy for friends and relatives of the deceased. The funeral will take place on Saturday morning at nine o'clock, from the family residence.

Death of Rev. Dr. Angel.

It is with profound sorrow the Times is obliged to chronicle the death of Rev. Dr. Angel, son-in-law of Mr. Wm. Cluxton, which sad event occurred at Wilmington, Delaware. A few days ago the deceased contracted a cold which developed pneumonia. Rev. Dr. Angel had just removed to Wilmington from Harrisburg, Pa., having received an unanimous call to the pulpit of St. Andrew's Episcopal church in that city. For eight years previous he had been Rector of St. Stephen's Episcopal church in Harrisburg. It is about ten years since the deceased left Peterborough, where he had labored as curate with the late Rev. Mr. Beck, Rector of St. John's. Whilst residing in town his many sterling traits endeared him to all with whom he came in contact, and the news of the brilliant career, so suddenly cut short, will be received with universal sorrow. He leaves a widow and two children.

AT THE POLICE COURT.

The Case Against Mr. George Stevens Dismissed.

The case of cruelty to animals again st Mr. George Stevens, Ashburnham's hustling junk merchant, was dismissed by Police Magistrate Dumble yesterday.

During the trial it was shown that the horse, which was thin and rakish, was receiving the same class food as other horses that were fat and plump. The court could not understand this, and asked Mr. Stevens to explain.

Mr. Stevens pointed to Police Constable McGinty, and Chief Rosel, and asked why the former was not as fat and plump as the latter.

This settled it, and the case was dismissed.

James Wilson was fined $2 for furious driving.

Mr. Will Pearson's Death.

Mr. Robert White, of the White House, received a despatch from Montreal, announcing the death of Mr. Will Pearson, son of Mr. W. J. Pearson, the well-known horse buyer, who was at the White House when the sad event took place. There are no particulars as to the cause of death. The young man was employed in the C.P.R. in Montreal, was an athlete, being captain of the Trinity Hockey team, and was about 21 years of age. The Times extends its sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. Pearson in their irreparable loss.

Preparing for an Emergency.

Mr. Dickson Jewett Snowden, of the Snowden House, acting under instructions from the chief of the commissariat department of the Gold Lake Hunting Club, is buisly engaged these days in training carrier pigeons. The idea is that when the club goes north next year on its annual hunt, it will be able to keep in close touch with the brewery as regards the condition of the buttermilk tank. The idea it will be noted, is a long-headed one. It would be a sad thing if, through some unforseen circumstance, the supply contained in the tank should run short, even for a day. With a daily pigeon service all risk of such an appaling calamity will disappear.

A Pleasant Time.

A very pleasing event occurred last night when Bros. A. J. Johnston, A. McFarlane, G. H. Johnston, D. H. Moore, John Sawers, W. J. Green, John Brownlee and Wm Hinchcliffe were presented by their brethren of Peterborough Lodge, No. 111, I. O. O. F., with Veterans' jewels. The event took place at the conclusion of the regular business. Happy speeches were made by officers of both local lodges, and a very pleasant evening was spent.

Suggestions for Dairymen.

At a meeting of the Eastern Dairymen's Association held at Madoc last week, one of the subjects discussed was the practical hadling of cheese.

Mr. James Whitton advised patrons against hiring makers who claimed to make a pound of good cheese from less than ten pounds of milk. From ten and one-half to eleven pounds of milk are required for a pound of cheese.

Mr. Kerr stated that too high or too low a temperature would spoil good cheese in the curing.

Mr. A. E. Bailey, of Campbellford, spoke strongly against the practice of hauling whey back to the farm in milk cans. He described the average whey as so much "hog slush," and, amid loud applause, declared that the Association should petition the Legislature to bring in a bill to prohibit the carrying of whey in milk cans.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

Lacrosse

The athletic world of Canada seems surcharged with electricity just now. There are rumors flying around of the wholesale transferrence of lacrosse players to the professional ranks. It is said that one well-known senior lacrosse club will have all its last year's twelve in the professional ranks before another week is out. The officials of the executive committee of the Canadian Amateur Athletic Union are the only ones who seem to be in the secret, and they won't tell until they are ready.

Midwinter seems to be a strange time to hold lacrosse meetings, but there is to be a special meeting of the Canadian Lacrosse Association of Jan. 31st, to reconsider the protest of the Tecumsehs against Markham. There does not seem to be much use in working up old scores at the starting of another year. Most people know that all those clubs like Orillia, Markham, Orangeville and "sich" have three or four semi-professionals in their teams.

Hockey.

We are glad to see that something is being done to purge Canadian sport of the taint of professionalism, however disguised the latter may be. On Wednesday night the executive of the O.H.A. held another seance, with the following members present:—J. Ross Robertson, the President, in the chair; Messrs. Nelson, Lionel King, McFadden, J. S. Robertson, and Sec. Beaton. The Parkdale's protest against Guelph was gone over again and the Nationals were expelled for infringment of the residence rule, in playing Carmichael, Howell, and Mitchell. This gives Parkdale the round.

The executive called down Variety for the slovenly way they have been arranging their matches.

The goal nets are to be given their first trial in the O.H.A. to-morrow in the Barrie—Toronto Simcoes game.

Peterborough Colts go to Cobourg on Monday night with seven goals to the good. They ought to win out.

McCord of Wellington II. will replace Carruthers on the forward line of "them Wellingtons."

We are in for four days mild weather which won't do the ice any good.

The seniors had a practise last night Their next match is with the Wellingtons here next Wednesday night, and on the 29th they play Osgoode in Toronto.

The Ring.

Joe Choynski has a busy time ahead of him. He is matched to fight Jack McCormick at Milwaukee, Jan. 18, 10 rounds; Stockings Conroy, 20 rounds, Youngstown, O., Jan. 23; Jack Bonner, six rounds, Chicago, Feb. 9, and Kid McCoy, 25 rounds, New York, Feb., 20.

The Turf

There are three Peterborough horses at the Port Perry races, but they seem to be out classed.

To Correspondents

R.P.,—You are wrong. In euchre only the player who assumes the responsibility of the trump, by either ordering it up, taking it up, or making it, can play it alone; and a euchre counts two points only.

C.L.,—In splitting openers it is only necessary that the opener place the discard where he can readily refer to it in case of subsequent dispute it is not required that he should expose his hand by calling attention to the fact that he had split openers. We know that some local players claim otherwise, but they don't know it all.

Well Satisfied.

Mr. Wm. Collins, secretary of the Peterborough Poultry Association, received a letter from Mr. T. A. Brown, secretary, of the Ontario Poultry Association, in which the latter said—"Every account will be paid before this reaches you. Am well satisfied with the way things were carried out in connection with the late show in Peterborough, and I shall never forget the kind expressions and acts towards myself." Mr. Brown says that the only mishap was the loss of a white or Holland turkey, the property of Mr. Luxton, Georgetown.

Carbolic Acid and Quinine.

New York, Jan. 17.—Wholesale druggists have forced up the price of carbolic acid one hundred per cent., this step being taken on receipt of news that the British Government has forbidden the further export of the acid, as all the output of English manufactories is needed for the making of lydite shells.

Quinine has advanced 20 per cent, partially because of the prevalence of influenza in Europe, but more so because of the large quantities needed for the armies in South Africa.

Will Expel Roberts.

Washington, aJn. 17.—The special committee of the House of Representatives to investigate the case of Brigham H. Roberts, of Utah, to-day reached a final conclusion. On the polygamous status of Mr. Roberts the committee was unanimous and agreed upon a formal statemen tof facts. On the question of procedure to be adopted the committee was divided. The majority, consisting of all the members except Littlefield, of Maine, and De Armond, of Missouri, favored exclusion at the outset. Messrs. Littlefield and De Armond will make a minority report favorable to seating Roberts on his prima facie rights and then expelling him.

They Threaten Conners.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 17.—Prominent vesselmen from all ports of the lakes are arriving in this cityto be in readiness to-day for what promises to be one of the most important conventions of the lake Carriers' Association ever held. The important question to be decided is the awarding of the contract for the handling of grain at Buffalo next year, which involves a threatened clash between labor and capital.

The Longshoreman's Union is preparing to make a strong fight against awarding the contract to W. J. Conners, who has had it for several years. The Union Executive will confer with the lake carriers on the matter and will practically deliver an ultimatum to the effect that if Conners is given the contract again the union will declare a strike of longshoremen at all ports, thereby tying up the carrying trade of the lakes.

To be Friends Again

Madrid, Jan. 18.—In the Senate yesterday the Premier, Senor Silvela, announced that negotiations were in progress with the United States for the conclusion of a treaty of peace and friendship, and also a treaty providing for extradition and the resumption of normal relations. He added that preliminary steps had already been taken with a view to the conclusion of a commercial treaty.

Is a big Estate.

Montreal, Jan. 18.—It is said that when the late W. W. Ogilvie's will is probated the estate will be found to be worth at least $5,000,000. Messrs. C. McNider, of the Bank of Montreal, and McMurchy, of the Ogilvie Company, are executors, the third having been Mr. Hugh McLennan, who died a month or two ago.

The annoucement is also made that the milling interest will be run by a joint stock company. The new company will be known as the Wm. W. Ogilvie Milling Company, and will be incorporated shortly. The president of the new company will be Mr. Albert E. Ogilvie, the late Mr. Ogilvie's eldest son.

THE Canada Business College.

CHATHAM, ONT.

CANADA'S GREATEST SCHOOL OF SHORTHAND AND BUSINESS

PUBLIC SCHOOL TEACHERS SHOULD NOTICE

This institute has prepared over seventy teachers for other Business Colleges and Commercial Schools in Canada and the United States, more than twice as many as all other Business Colleges in Canada, combined, have so placed.

The proprietors of five of the leading business colleges in Western Ontario, who are to-day among our strongest opponents in the field of Shorthand and Business training, received THEIR training under the Principal of this institution. Besides these there are five others holding leading positions as teachers in Business Colleges in Ontario.

Since Sept 1st, seven of our pupils have accepted positions as teachers in Business Colleges and Commercial Schools in Canada and the United States; another is now negotiating for a similar opening in a Business College in a leading American city, and there are five unfilled calls of this kind on hand still.

DOES IT NOT PAY TO ATTEND THE BEST? You must decide.

126 of our pupils secured good positions in seventeen months, and the good work of placing our students still continues.

London, Jan. 20.

The Times has the following despatch dated Thursday, from Pietermaritzburg—"General Buller's wagon train is 19 miles in length and embraces 400 wagons and 5,000 animals. As some of the drifts are narrow and muddy, only one wagon is able to cross at a time. The officers are betting two to one that Ladysmith will be relieved to-morrow (Friday.)

London, Jan. 20, 4.30 a.m.

Every hour that General Buller delays his combined attack makes his position stronger. The transports continue to arrive at Durban and fresh troops are being sent up the line to reinforce those in front of Colenso. It appears that Gen. Buller's troops north of the Tugela number at least 22,000 and possibly 25,000, with 60 guns. His total forces forming a great outcurve south and west of Ladysmith, probably number 40,000.

While General Buller's forward operations, which began on January 10, develops rather leasurely, the Boers appear to be fully aware that they must meet a strenuous assault. Balloon observers have roughly estimated that 10,000 Boers are using spade and pick in strengthening the positions which nature has rendered easy of defense.

Military critics in touch with the War Office think that news that general fighting has begun may be expected at any hour. It is not thought that one day's fighting will settle the fate of Ladysmith, but rather that there will be two or three days of continuous fighting.

Cape Town, Thursday, January 18

A number of Canadians, including two experienced scouts, have arrived here and have offered their services for scouting purposes. They have paid their own expenses and say that there are hundreds of others anxious to follow them.

Spearman's Camp, Friday evening, Jan 19

Sir Charles Warren and Lord Dundonald are continuing a cautious advance, hourly expecting battle. There has been slight artillery firing heard at Ladysmith and at Chieveley. The natives report that the kopjes are full of Boers.

BULLER'S LINE ADVANCES.

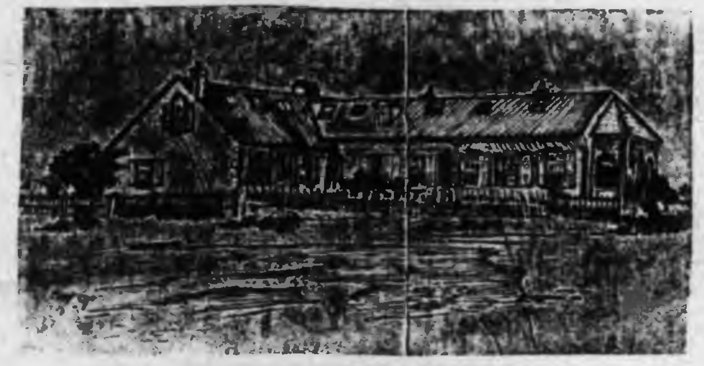
London, Jan. 19.—The following despatch, dated Spearman's Camp, Natal, 9.20 o'clock last night, is published by an afternoon paper:

"The War balloon made two ascents to-day, locating the Boer positions, which they had masked by refusing all day to return the fire of our guns.

"Lyttleton's brigade was pushed forward to-day and is close to the Boer trenches. The two armies are now in touch and began an exchange of rifle fire to-night.

"The howitzer battery and the big naval guns kept up a hot fire on the Boer trenches all day long, dropping lyddite shells all along the enemy's front.

"Under cover of this firing Buller pushed his line out ready to attack, but not a shot came from the Boer guns."



LONGWOOD, ISLAND OF ST. HELENA

Napoleon's prison, where, is suggested, Kruger may be confined when caught.

THE BOERS ENTRENCHMENTS.

London, Friday, Jan. 19.—A despatch to the Standard from Spearman's farm describes the Boer position as revealed by a reconnaissance on Jan. 12. The enemy were strongly entrenched on a series of low kopjes close to the river and extending to Ladysmith. Their second main line of defence was at the edge of a long plateau which was fortified and flanked by a lofty hill called Abejmana. The position was further strengthened by the sinuous course of the Tugela river, which, after flowing beneath the precipitous slope of the Tabamyama mountain, winds about until it forms a sort of peninsula over which the Ladysmith road passes to the plateau.

A despatch to the Telegraph, dated Spearman's farm, Jan. 18, says: "A howitzer battery bombarded the Boer lines occasionally during the night. firing was resumed this morning. All's well."

BOER POSITION TURNED.

London, Jan. 19.—General Buller was criticized by some military men for planning the first battle with two points for a passage of the river, and not making simultaneous attempts at both crossing places. He has again selected two drifts, five instead of two miles apart, but was enabled to send troops over at each crossing on the same day, Major-Gen. Lyttleton waiting at Potgieter's for Major-Gen. Warren's engineers to lay their pontoons at Trichard's Drift.

The first operation may have veiled the second and more important one, but it is probable that neither escaped the enemy's observation. The success with which each passage of the river was attended was due to the hills on the southern bak, where the British artillery was stationed to command the lower line of kopjes opposite. These kopjes were occupied by the British troops after the passage of the river. If Major-General Hilyard's brigade follows Major-General Lyttleton's across Potgieter's Drift there will be two divisions beyond the Tugela, about six miles apart, but separated by a long loop of swollen river and confronted by an enemy strongly entrenched in a line of hills five miles away. The first defensive line of the Dutch allies running 17 miles from Springfield to Hlangwana Mountain, has been turned, but there has been a concentration of the Boer forces on a new line westward, and it is uncertain whether Major-General Warren has gone up the river far enough to flank the entrenchments and whether both divisions will not be compelled to attack them in front in order to break their way through.

ARTILLERY REINFORCEMENTS.

London, Jan. 18.—The artillery reinforcements for South Africa, which it was announced a week ago would be sent, will begin sailing on January 21 Seventy-two guns, 3,710 men, and 2,210 horses will sail between January 21 and 27, which it is believed will be a record performance.

CANADIANS BUILD A RAILWAY.

London, Jan. 18.—The Standard's special correspondent at Modder River says to-day: "Otez la depechez vous," "Say, there, bring her over," and similar commands and exhortations in English and Canadian French greeted my ears at Orange River station while a train was being boarded by the Gordons who were going to the front. The Canadians had arrived the day before from De Aar, and in one day had laid and completed a mile and a quarter of railway and built a new platform. Railway makinkg under a South African sun in December is no play, and the sight of these sons of the north handling sleepers and rails with the greatest despatch and enthusiasm, working as white men seldom work in South Africa, was an object lesson for the thoroughness of spirit and patriotism animating all ranks and sections of the British force now fighting the Boers.

BOERS GET A NEW GUN.

Mafeking, Jan. 3.—Via runner to Mochudi.—The enemy has received from Pretoria a new gun and three wagon loads of ammunition. The bombardment has in consequence been more vigorous since. The gun fires shells charged with a chemical liquid which ignites in the air. The weapon has so far effected no damage, with the exception of a few minor fires. The resistance of the garrison is goading the Boers to commit atrocities. They have concentrated their fire for the last two days on the woman's laager and hospital Several children have been killed and women have been mutilated by bursting shells. Col. Baden-Powell and Major Adams have deposed the chief of the Baralong tribe tribe, who had quarters at Mafeking. He spread false reports that the authorities are endeavoring to make the natives slaves. The tribe has been given over to the two chief councillors and a better feeling is already established. There is no longer any doubt that the Boers used explosive bullets in the Game Tree fight.

ANOTHER ARMY DIVISION.

London, aJn. 19.—Formal orders have been issued to mobilize the eighth division of the British army.

A FIGH NEAR ACTON HOLMES.

London, Jan. 19.—General Buller has telegraphed the War Office from Spearman's Camp, under date of last evening as follows:—

Lord Dundonald with a body of mounted troops came into action this afternoon with a force of Boers west of Action Holmes. After a fight he occupied several kopjes which he is still holding. Field Cornet Heilbrun and twenty Boers were killed and fifteen prisoners taken. Two British soldiers killed and two wounded.

A WARNING TO GREAT BRITAIN.

Herr Moeller Says That Englishmen Must Take Care Lest They Incur the Enmity of the Civilized World.

Berlin, Jan. 19.—In the Reichstag today the debate on Herr Moeller's joint interpellation of the Government regarding the seizure of German steamers by British warships was opened. Herr Moeller said vigorous expression must be given to the indignation felt at the fact that the subsidized line to which the seized vessels belonged had observed the strictest neutrality, and expressed the opinion that the matter should furnish the opportunity of defining the rights of mail steamers. The unloading of the Bundesrath, he added, could have been effected with a few days delay, and showed want of consideration for international courtesy, and it should be made incumbent upon the British officials to announce whether and to what extent their views in regard to those rights had been changed. The action, the speaker continues, appeared arbitrary, and it was Germany's duty to demand security for her ships in the future from all maritime nations. Germany, he pointed out, was so neutral that even her arms factories had been prohibited from supplying the belligerents. The present case afforded a rare spectacle of the unity of all parties. Great Britain had not always maintained the neutrality marking Germany's present attitude, and Englishmen should take care not to draw on themselves the hatred of the civilized world. This statement was greeted with loud cheers.

WILL LEAVEN THE YEOMANRY.

London, aJn. 19.—Advices from Cape Town say Mr. Webster Davis, assistant Secretary of State for the Interior at Washington, sails from Port Elizabeth on Monday for Delagoa Bay.

It is understood that the Imperial Yeomanry will be leavened before that force goes to the front, with considerable detachments of experienced colonials acquained with Boer tactics.

ANOTHER RUMOR ON 'CHANGE.

London, Jan. 19.—It was rumored on the Stock Exchange this morning that after eighteen hours fighting Ladysmith had been relieved and that Gen. Warren had been killed. Nothing was obtainable, however, tending to verifty the rumor, and it had no appreciable effect on stocks.

ROBERTS' LAST DESPATCH.

London, Jan. 19.—4.30 p.m.—The War Office has made public despatches from Field Marshal Lord Roberts, dated today, recording the scouting movements in Cape Colony, including the ambushing of the Australians when two of the latter were killed and fourteen were reported missing. He adds—"A Boer deserter states that the enemy suffered severely in attacking French's advanced post Jan. 15. Seventy Boers are still unaccounted for."

FLAMES OF REBELLION.

London, Fridy, Jan. 19.—The Cape Town correspondent of the Times, discussing Afrikander disloyalty, says—

"I believe the sympathy of every Dutchman in South Africa is with the two Republics, and that a general rising is still quite possible. However, there I snothing to implicate the Bond party as a whole in an officially organized conspiracy against the Imperial Government, although the Bond leaders have winked at or pandered to sedition in order to preserve their popularity. The British failures and the appearance of the Boers on British territory have fomented rebellion, but even now a decisive British victory would prevent its further spread."

HIGHLANDERS DEFEAT BOERS.

Modder River, Cape Colony, Thursday, Jan. 18.—General Methuen, who is in robust health, personally directed another strong reconnaissance yesterday. The Highlanders succeeded in driving the Boers from the brush river bank by long range volleys. The Boer fire was inaffective.

BRITISH SHELL THE BOER CAMP.

London, Jan. 19.—Sir Ellis Ashmead Bartlett, M. P., who has arrived at Rensberg, Cape Colony, expresses satisfaction with General French's disposition of his troops. He visited Coleskop yesterday while the shelling of the Boers camp was proceeding with such success that it is announced on good authority that 16 Boers and 36 horses were killed.

IS ADVANCING.

London, Jan. 18.—General Roberts sends lthe following to the War Office—"Gatacre reports that 300 men of all ranks have been moved from Bushman's Hoeck to Hoperberg, and the 74th Field Battery and one company of mounted infantry from Sterkstroom to Bushman's Hoeck. Otherwise there is no change."

RECONNAISSANCE IN FORCE.

Modder River, Jan. 17.—In Methuen's demonstration on Tuesday almost the whole force took part, the object being to draw the enemy from Kimberley and discover his strength. Practically the entire army moved to Gugersfontein Hill, under the protection of artillery. We plainly saw large numbers hurrying from Jacobsdal to strengthen the great number already holding the trenches. What effect our downpour of luddite had upon their position it is impossible to say, but the accuracy and marksmanship of our gunners was certainly impossible to exceed. There were no casualties on our side.

CHANCE FOR COL. HUGHES

Likely to be Given a Command With the Strathcona Rifles.

Ottawa, Jan. 19.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier has received a long ciper cablegram from Lord Strathcona giving the High Commissioner's views in respect of the organization of the Strathcona force. It gave a complete outline of the basis upon which the force is to be raised. The first Minister sent Lieut.-Col. Pinault, Deputy Minister of Militia, and instructed him to take immediate steps towards recruiting the three squadrons of 125 men apiece, who with the necessary staff will form Lord Strathcona's contribution to the Imperial forces. The same machinery that was used in organising the western battalion of the Canadian Mounted Rifles will be used in getting the Strathcona Horse together, that is, the officers of the mounted police will perform the major portion of the duty Recruiting stations will also be opened in British Columbia at points to be designated by the Militia Department. In the case of the Strathcona Horse, as in that of the mounted civilian section the preference will be given to men who can supply their own horses. The animals will be purchased at a valuation by the same boards as bought the mounts for the mounted rifles.

Lord Strathcona will have a great deal to say regarding the selection of the officers. All he intends to do, however, is to recommend certain officers who already possess military experience. Officers to serve in the Strathcona Horse continue to pour into the militia department.

Col. Hughes, now at Cape Town, without military employment, is known to be an intimate friend of the High Commissioner, and is generally thought that the colonel will be remembered when the officers are being appointed for the Strathcona Horse.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

Hockey.

This is not very good hockey weather, as we prophesied yesterday morning.

Ernie Watson went to Belleville yesterday to referee the Lindsay-Belleville match in the intermediate series.

Lionel King did not come to town last night. He comes down to-day.

"Cully" Robertson is banking on "them Wellingtons" to win the senior series. We shall see.

Lillie is going on the forward line of the Wellingtons. They are bound to "get thar."

Mr. W. H. Cavanagh, of Medicine Hat, N. W. T., has received a permit to play hockey with Peterborough, qualifying under the rule allowing bona-fide students to play in the place where they attend school. The Colts need him on the defence.

As there were four or five games scheduled in the various leagues of the O. H. A. for decision last night and to-night, this soft weather will cause the schedule to look like thirty cents.

The nets are used in the St. Nicholas rink in New York hockey matches. Soft weather has no effect on the ice there, as it is artificial ice, anyway.

There are six clubs in the New York City League, with Canadians on all teams but one, and the hockey is of the gilt-edged variety, although rougher than we allow it in Canada, tripping and bumping being indulged in to an alarming extent. The Crescents are in the lead, having won 3 and lost 0. On this team we see the name of Dobby, Wall, Kennedy, Harty and Garvin, all of whom learned the game in Canada.

The Skates.

The U. S. National Amateur Skating contests will take place next Friday and Saturday at Newburg, N. Y. The Canadian Amateur Skating Association hold their meet at Montreal on Feb. 3.

Basket Ball.

The first game in the middle series at Y.M.C.A. hall was played on Thursday night, with the following teams—

J. McMaster, C. Kemp, forwards; F. Campbell, centre; F. Howson and Bert. Turner, backs.

R. Lee, H. VanEvery, forwards; C. Seymour, centre; J. Lundy, R. Dobbin, backs.

Campbell's team beat Dobbin's 3 to 2.

What will be the nature of the next question sent in to this department for an answer by the editor? The idea of the sporting editor being asked to explain "Why are there so many old maids in Peterborough?" We admit, there are lots of old maids in town, but the man who asked the question must bear in mind that old maids are like "Topsy"—they were not born, they growed. Their environment has a lot to do with their career. Peterborough seems to be an old maid's paradise; and you wonder at that, too, for there are a thousand or more young men of marriageable age in town; but at the same time you can find house after house, on street after street, chuck full of old maids. The girls either aim too high or think too much of "prestige," the latter a very intangible quality, and one which does not help the owner of it mentally, morally, or even socially—but you ask why are there so many of them here? Well, the only reason the sporting editor can give is that Peterborough is a nice town in which to live.

Provincial Boundary Line

Ottawa, Jan. 19.—The commissioners for the delimation of the provincial boundary lines about the head of Lynn Canal, Messrs. O. H. Tittmann, of Washington, W. F. King, Dominion Astronommer, held their first meeting yesterday afternoon at Mr. King's office. They will meet again to-day to discuss their plans of operations for marking their lines on the ground during the coming session.

THE LIME JUICE CLUB

A Long Way After The Lime Kiln Club

The President looked down on the bald head of Tiedup Garley for a minute, and then began:

"Gentlemen, they say that every man's house is his castle, and I am the last one to bring up a brother's domestic matters in the Club, but the tears of a wife and the hungry wails of the children are crowding me to say a few words at this meeting. Last night the wife of Bro. Limber Smith knocked at my door. I kicked out the dog, chased out the cat, threw the boot-jack under the bed and my boots under the table and told her to come in. She was weeping like a green bay tree. My better half helped her to a seat on the wood-box, and after the first convulsions had passed away, the woman told us that she and the children hadn't a bite to eat for two days, and the cook stove was as cold as a crow bar. Bro. Smith was at home and in the best of health, and while the children were crying for bread he was lying on the floor, pursing about the war in Africa, and spellings out all the big words. I went over there and seen it with my own eyes. I don't say that he has broken any of the laws or rules of this club but I do say that a man who will lie down on his back to read when the fire is out and the cupboard empty is not fit to sit here alongside of hard working men."

"Hear! Hear!" came from all parts of the Hall, and in about two minutes Limber was divorced from the Club by a unanamious vote.

A Painful Report.

Bro. Anvil McCann, Chairman of the Committee on Heridetary Privileges, with business in his eye, arose and announced that he was ready with his monthly report. Two weeks since his committee had been informed of a dastardly attempt to to wrest one of the most cherished hereditary privileges from the members of this Great Club, and he has sent to Lakefield to secure all particulars. He was now ready to report that a member of the local branch in that town had invented and brought out a machine known as "The Dead Give-Away." It was an explosive torpedo, made up to resemble a spring chicken, and its position on the roost at night was so natural that a person who eaten 10,000 hens would be deceived. It had been brought out on the quiet, and before the members at Lakefield knew what was up the place was full of shattered constitutions. Large orders had poured in on the inventor, and one firm in Peterborough had telegraphed for 50, besides orders had been sent in from Apsley, Norwood, Keene, Douro and other places where branches of the club are known to exist. In six months every hen roost in the country would have its torpedo chicken, and the 10,000 members of this club throughout the country might as well prepare for a change of diet, unless something could be done. He would urge prompt and speedy action. Every day of delay put fifty additional torpedo chicken on the market.

"I have never said that the members of this Club were even the victims of suspicion when a henroost was robbed," replied the President, "but yet it seems to me that this torpedo business ought to be squelched. They may accidently go off and kill all the hens; they may blow up little children who go out after eggs; they may explode when we are mending the henhouse; they may get mixed in with the poultry at the market and be the means of separating four husbands and loving wives. The Committee on Emergencies will therefore meet with the Committee on Hereditary Priveleges and take such action as is deemed best."

Historic Spots.

Bro. Ed. Brown caught the President's eye and at once launched out in a speech 27 feet long in favor of asking the co-operation of the Town Council in preserving to future generations the histroic spots in Peterborough. The speaker went on to suggest that such places as the following be marked:—

The hole into which ex-Ald. Langford crawled when the vote was counted at the close of the poll on Jan. 1st.

The spot on the Market Square on the 5th of September 1880, where three men and four dogs accidently met and formed the Lime Juice Club. (Sensation.)

The hole in the floor which ex-Alderman McWilliams made when he tried to sit on the mayor's chair and missed it.

The spot on which Mayor Kendry stood after his election when he was reported to have said, "Come, boys, let us smile." (Great uproar, during which Ald. Sawer slid down the back stairs in disgust and left for home.)

When Bro. Brown sat down the President was seen to scratch his head in a very thoughtful manner, when Bro Slabs arose and said—

"Perhaps the worthy President of this Club don't exactly know what histroic spots means. If so, I'll——"

"What!" interrupted the President; "I don't know what historic spots are Mister Slabs, do you imagine that I was brought up in Lindsay, or that I know no more about these things than a town Council'or knows about economy?

"I simply threw it as a suggestion," was the humble reply, as the brother sat down and endeavoured to squeeze himself in behind the stove out of sight.

"Don't throw out any more suggestions Mister Slabs! When the time arrives that I can't point out all the historic spots in Peterborough, I'll resign my position in the Club. The Secretary will make a note of the fact that the Club will cooperate with the Town Council in preserving these spots. If any member of this Club happens to run across a new historic spot that I don't know of a postal card will reach me at my house up tal card will reach me at my house or he can drive up in Frank White's coupay."

New Rules.

The Secretary then announced the following new rules, which will be rigidly enforced until further notice —

1. No member shall address the meeting without having both shoes on.
2. No more than forty dogs will be allowed in the Hall at any meeting. The other seventy-five or eighty shall be tied up in the alley or left in the ante-room
3. Members shall not introduce political or religious discussions while in the Hall.
4. Members are strictly forbidden the use of the Club's stove polish to shine their boots with.
5. On rising to address the chair, members will face the chair.

The President Speaks.

"Before we separate I would like to say," remarked the President, as the powerful electric light fell on Bro. Harry LeBrun's garnet necktie, "that you can entertain a wolf in sheep's clothing. Yesterday, while I was out looking for a job for him, he dodged my better half and made off with all my fishing tackle and I haven't caught him yet. (Loud sob by Bro. Jamfed Jones.) The idea of a man stealing fishing tackle at this season of the year is bad enough in itself, but to steal it from a family that has warmed his heels, clothed his back and filled him up with bacon and potatoes is something that I can't get over right soon. I shall go right on trusting folks same as before, but in the sweet bye-and-bye there will be a close board fence eighteen feet high before me and such people as can't eat two meals a day and pay a hundred cents on the dollar. We will now listen to the Harmony Club.

A Remonstrance.

The four athletic young men comprising the Harmony Club now ascended the platform and rendered the following touching lines written expressly for the occasion by Bro. Alf. Tyrell.

Don't you come a-talking about about your melancholy days;
January's just as handsome and as jolly as can be,
And the woods are all a-singing while the breeze he comes and plays
The essence of the country on the branches of the trees!

Don't you come a-mourning about the leaf that has to fall;
When he hears the music playing he don't want to miss the chance,
Because he feels the frosty tingle that invigorates us all,
So he just cuts loose, he does, and joins his neighbors in the dance!

During the excitement which followed nine lamp chimneys were broken, and fourteen new cracks appeared in the ceiling. The balance of the business was placced in the refrigerator, and the meeting went home.

IS MARS PEOPLED?

Such a Claim Advanced by a German Scientist.

"Is Mars inhabited?" has been asked very often during recent years and has engaged the serious attention of many astronomers and especially of M. Camille Flammarion, a noted French scientist and author.

Some new light is now thrown on this subject by Professor Ernst Haeckel, an eminent German philosopher, in a book entitled "World Problems. After pointing out that men have been studying the heavens for more than 4,500 years and have only been studying themselves for the last half century he says we may safely assume that the many fixed stars whose light requires thousands of years to reach us are suns and are surrounded by planets and worlds similar to those we know. We may also assume, he holds, that thousands of these planets have arrived at the same stage of development as our world, and it naturally follows that on them the same conditions of life prevail as on this earth, and there is no valid reason why human beings should not live there as they do here.

Professor Haeckel takes care to explain that there are doubtless many planets the temperature of which is such that life, as we understand the term, cannot be sustained on them. He thinks it very probable that there are types of animals and plants on some planets which are not to be found on the earth. According to him it is very likely that the biogenetic process exists on Mars, Venus and possibly some other planets of our system, as well as on planets of other solar systems, but plants on these planets have reached a higher stage of development than has been reached by animals and plants of this earth.

If we assume that Mars is inhabited—and Professor Haeckel seems pretty well satisfied that it is—we must assume, he holds, that the men and women whose home is on the planet are not such as we, but of a far higher type. They may resemble us exteriorly, but they are free from our physical defects and excel us in strength and gracefulness. It is in the intellectual sphere, however, that their superiority is most clearly shown. If there are human beings on these planets, says Prof. Haeckel, it is extremely probable that they far surpass ordinary men and women in intelligence.

They Threaten Conners.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 17.—Prominent vesselmen from all ports of the lakes are arriving in this cityto be in readiness to-day for what promises to be one of the most important conventions of the lake Carriers' Association ever held. The important question to be decided is the awarding of the contract for the handling of grain at Buffalo next year, which involves a threatened clash between labor and capital.

The Longshoreman's Union is preparing to make a strong fight against awarding the contract to W. J. Conners, who has had it for several years. The Union Executive will confer with the lake carriers on the matter and will practically deliver an ultimatum to the effect that if Conners is given the contract again the union will declare a strike of longshoremen at all ports, thereby tying up the carrying trade of the lakes.

LEPROSY IN RUSSIA.

Great Care Taken to Prevent the Pest Crossing the Nation's Border.

St. Petersberg, Jan. 20.—Only by the exercise of the greatest care and vigilance is leprosy, the curse of the east, kept out of the Russian empire. There is always a dread that the sly white pest may cross her bordeers and occasionally, though not often, it creeps into homes of the aristocracy. At a certain grand ball given St. Petersburg in 1896, there was among the guests a young and beautiful unmarried countess. A gentleman asked one of her relatives to introduce him, received an assent, and danced with the lady several times. Later, as they stood in an exposed portion of the ballroom, the gentleman said—"This draft is injurious. You should be careful of yourself, for I see there is a slight eruption on one of your shoulders. Oh, it isn't marked enough to spoil your beauty. But, I, you know, am a physician. Have you, by the way, any other little spots like this elsewhere on your lovely skin?" "Yes," replied the lady, "I have a few. And I wish, doctor, that you could give me some medicine for them." "It would afford me great happiness to do so," was the gallant reply. That night the countess did not return home. All search for her resulted vainly. It was not until many weeks afterward that her agonized parents received a letter which told them that their daughter was in the X——leper asylum, and that all attempts to see her must prove futile. The parents begged piteously to her own home, in a tower which she alone would occupy. Anything was preferable for them to the living death which they felt now to be her doom. But no entreaties availed. The gentleman who had danced with the young countess at the ball had been a disguised police agent, and she will end her days in the terrible lazar house whither he had her conveyed, among others accursed like herself.

India Rubber Industry.

The bulletin of the Royal gardens, Kew, states that the falling off in the production of India rubber at Lagos is due to the reckless way in which the trees are being exhausted. There is a want of control over the collectors, who tap young trees and destroy whole rubber forests by overworking, so that this industry, which is an important sourse of wealth to the colony, is in danger of extinction. A similar disaster occurred in Madagascar, and now active steps are being taken to preserve the industry by the establishment of plantations of rubber producing plants.

South African Social Affairs.

The ladies of Kimberley are no doubt giving bombardment porch parties and bombardment teas.

His "Dear Old Jim."

"Corbett is my friend and benefactor," says Mr. Jeffries. "I was once his sparring partner, and he treated me as a gentleman. Hence I have gladly agreed to fight him as a return for favors. I am bound by all the ties of friendship and gratitude to give him a chance to fight me." Was there ever such a touching instance of devotion? Mr. Jeffries will reward his old patron and benefactor by beating him into pulp and knocking his head off. One can fancy him saying, as he puts his terrible right into his friend's ribs, "Dear old Jim!"—Kansas City Star.

The Billing and Cooing.

Uncle George—You do not appear to think it necessary to spend so much time at home as you did when you were first married. I suppose the billing and cooing are all over now.

Harry—There doesn't seem to be much of a let up in the billing, and, as for the cooing, I am dreadfully afraid of it. It is sure to mean a new hat or a new gown or a new something.—Boston Transcript.

Skin.

Each average human being has about 15,000 square feet of skin to look after and nearly 3,000,000 oil and sweat glands. The outer layer of skin is constantly wearing off and must be constantly removed to allow the new skin beneath to form fresh, white and beautiful.

What Men in High Places Say

DOCTORS, LAWYERS, MINISTERS, EDUCATIONALISTS AND POLITICIANS JOIN FORCES AS ONE MAN.

And Put the Great Seal of Their Approval on Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder as the Greatest of Healers.

Personal Experience is the best evidence, and a man's Own Signature Seals His Faith. Hundreds of Canada's Most Illustrious sons are its Heartiest Endorsers.

Perhaps no ailment to which flesh is heir brings men down to a more common level than catarrh and catarrhal affections. When it is rated that ninety in every hundred are subject in a lesser or greater degree to the ravages of this universal disease, the high, the low, the rich, the poor, must naturally come within its grasp. And it is not to be wondered at that such a galaxy of Canada's best men as have done so are willing, having themselves been sufferers, to "let their light shine" that others may be warned of the malady, and herald to the world the efficacy, the quick relief, the absolute cure they have proven to be in so splendid a compound as Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder.

Thus it is considered no breach of etiquette on the part of the professional men no indignity on the "bench," nothing unparliamentary on the part of the lawmaker, and no discredit on the pulpit, to say the good honest things that many of these men in high places have attested to over their own signatures.

Here are a few names of prominent Canadians who have used and are believers in Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder—The Right Reverend Dr. Sweatman, Lord Bishop of Toronto; Rev. Dr. Lantry, of the Anglican Church; Rev. Dr. Withrow, editor of the Canadian Methodist Magazine; Rev. A. R. Chambers, Toronto; Rev. William Galbraith, Toronto; Hon. George Taylor, George H. McDonnel, M.P., Dr. Godbout, M.P., Robert Beith, M.P., Hon. David Mills, M.P., H. Cargill, M.P., James H. Metcalfe, M.P., and a hundred more as prominent public-spirited men.

Too many people have detailed with this dreaded disease, experimenting with worthless, untried and irritating so-called cures, only to find disappointment and a deep seating of the malady which means years of misery if not checked. Why not trust the man's testimony whom you think worthy to represent you in the House of Parliament — the man you would trust as your spiritual adviser—the man you would trust the education of your son to—to be your adviser in the matter of your health. Take warning, and if there is a hint of the catarrh taint apply Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder without delay. It will save you suffering, heal you surely, absolutely and permanently, whether you have been a slave one month or fifty years. It relieves cold in the head in ten minutes.

DR. AGNEW'S CURE FOR THE HEART gives relief inside of 30 minutes, and no heart trouble so hopeless it will not cure.

DR. AGNEW'S OINTMENT heals "pimply" faces and other skin affections. Cures piles in from 3 to 5 nights.

DR. AGNEW'S LIVER PILLS, smallest and cheapest pill made — 20 cents for 40 doses.

CANADA'S GREATEST SCHOOL OF SHORTHAND AND BUSINESS

PUBLIC SCHOOL TEACHERS SHOULD NOTICE

This institute has prepared over seventy teachers for other Business Colleges and Commercial Schools in Canada and the United States, more than twice as many as all other Business Colleges in Canada, combined, have so placed.

The proprietors of five of the leading business colleges in Western Ontario, who are to-day among our strongest opponents in the field of Shorthand and Business training, received THEIR training under the Principal of this institution. Besides these, there are five others holding leading positions as teachers in Business Colleges in Ontario.

Since Sept 1st, seven of our pupils have accepted positions as teachers in Business Colleges and Commercial Schools in Canada and the United States; another is now negotiating for a similar opening in a Business College in a leading American city, and there are five unfilled calls of this kind on hand still.

DOES IT NOT PAY TO ATTEND THE BEST? You must decide.

236 of our pupil's secured good positions in seventeen months, and the good work of placing our students still continues.

HIGHLANDERS WERE HEROES

London, Jan. 18.—The correspondent of the Daily News gives a graphic account of the way in which disaster overtook the Highlanders at Modder River.

"During the night it was considered expedient that the Highland Brigade, about 4,000 strong, under Gen. Wauchope, should get close enough to the lines of the foe to make it possible to charge the heights. At midnight the gallant but ill-fated men moved cautiously through the darkness toward the kopje where the Boers were most strongly entrenched. They were led by a guide who was supposed to know every inch of the country, out into the darkness of an African night.

"So onward, until three of the clock on the Monday. Then out of the darkness a rifle rang sharp and clear, a herald of disaster—a soldier had tripped in the dark over the hidden wires laid down by the enemy. In a second in the twinkling of an eye, the searchlights of the Boers fell broad and clear as the noonday sun on the ranks of the doomed Highlanders, though it left the enemy concealed in the shadows of the frowning mass of hills behind them. For one brief moment the Scots seemed paralyzed by the suddenness of their discovery, for they knew that they were huddled together like sheep within 50 yards of the trenches of the foe.

"Then clear above the confusion rolled the voice of the general, 'Steady, men, steady!'—and like an echo to the veterans, out came the crash of nearly a thousand rifles not 50 paces from them. The Highlanders reeled before the shock like trees before the tempest their best, their bravest, fell in that wild hail of lead. General Wauchope was down, riddled with bullets, yet gasping, dying, bleeding from every vein, the Highland chief raised himself on his hands and knees and cheered his men forward. Men and officers fell in heaps together.

"The Black Watch charged, and the Gordons and Seaforths, with a yell that stirred the British camp below, rushed onward to death or disaster.

"The accursed wires caught them round the legs until they floundered like trapped wolves, and all the time the rifles of the foe sang the song of death in their ears. Then they fell back broken and beaten, leaving nearly 1,300 dead and wounded, just where the broad breast of the grassy veldt melts into the embrace of the rugged African hills, and an hour later the dawning came of the dreariest day that Scotland has known for ag eneration past.

"Of her officers, the flower of her chivalry, the pride of her breeding, but few remain to tell the tale, a sad tale truly, but one untinted with dishonor or smirched with disgrace, for up those heights under similar circumstances, even a brigade of devils could scarce have hoped to pass. All that mortal men could do, the Scots did, they tried, they failed, they fell, and there is nothing left us now but to mourn for them and avenge them.

"In vain all that day Methuen tried by every rule he knew how to draw the enemy; vainly the Lancers rode recklessly to induce those human rock limpets to come out and cut them off. Cronje knew the mettle of our men, and an ironic laugh played around his iron mouth, and still he stayed within his native fastness, but death set ever at his elbow, for our gunners dropped the lyddite shells and the howling shrapnel all along his lines, until the trenches ran bloody, and many of his guns were silenced.

"When at 1.30 p.m. of Tuesday we drew off to Modder River, to recuperate, we left nearly three thousand dead and wounded of grim old Cronje's men as a token that the Lion of England had bared his teeth in earnest."

Good Prospects.

The Spokane Stock Report says—W. O. Applequist, secretary of the Great Western Mining Company, informs us that the shaft which they are sinking on that property has gained a depth of between 40 and 50 feet. They have been sinking on the lead, which has been gradually increasing in width, now showing 6 1-2 feet. A strong body of carbonates has lately been encountered, giving a width of 18 inches and appearing to be continuous. It is the intention of the company to sink to the 100-foot level before drifting is commenced. The property is looking most satisfactory, and work will be continued all winter. A large amount of good shipping ore which has been taken out in the process of development is now on the dump, and it is probable that a shipment will be made in the near future.

Origin of Diamonds.

The origin of diamonds, which for so long has been a disputed question appears to be explained by a recent discovery near Kimberley.

In both the Indian and the Brazilian diamond fields the gem occur, like a pebble in certain gravelly strata, but has not been traced back to any rock that gives any indication of its genesis. After the discovery of diamonds in the river sand of some South American rivers a peculiar material of a brownish buff color, which turned to a dark bluish tint, was found. It became darker as the miners dug down. The diamonds lay in this material, together with several other materials, such as garnets, iron ores, augite, olivine, etc. Excavations, begun systematically, were eventually carried on on such a large scale that near Kimberley they reached a depth of more than 1,400 feet. Here the rock is about as hard as ordinary limestone. The blue ground is found only in limited areas. The rocks around are of dark shades, banded with hard sandstone, in which sheets or dikes of basalt or some material which was once in a molten condition are occasionally found. The blue ground fills a sort of shaft of colossal size in these other rocks and is itself cut up by similar dikes. The opinions of geologists differ as to whether the gems are produced where they now lie or have been formed of some volcanic explosions. Experts now tend to the belief that the blue ground in which diamonds were found is not the true birthplace. The bowlders are often watermarked and may have rested for ages in an ancient gravel at the very bottom of sedentary rocks of the district. In course of time volcanic explosions shattered the rocky floor in which the diamonds were imbedded, of which the bowlders were only samples, and dispersed it, together with the overlying materials. It is believed that this is the true explanation of the formation of the diamond bearing blue ground.

Tea Drinking and Cold Feet.

Professor Hutchinson, F.R.S., reports the case of a lady who could not take tea because it made her feet icy cold and wet with perspiration. She thought that the soles were chiefly affected and that the hands were also made cold, but not so markedly as the feet. Mr. Hutchinson had long been familiar with the fact that tea made the feet of some persons cold, but did not know that cold prespiration attended it. He believed the coldness to be caused by contraction of the arteries, inasmuch as the feet shrank. Alcohol had usually an opposite effect.

Sing While Marching.

A German army doctor has discovered that singing possesses health giving properties. He claims that it intensifies the respiratory movements, thus rendering the lungs capable of dealing with more air. This increases and strengthens the action of all the organs of the body. Appetite and thirst increase, and the more frequent movements of the diaphragm materially aid digestion. German foot soldiers are therefore encouraged to sing on the march.

Electric Bell Substitute.

A substitute for an electric bell has been devised by a deaf couple. Not being able to hear the bell themselves, and having no servant, they have fixed up an arrangement by means of which when the button at the front door is pressed, the electric lights all over the place light up and remain so until the button is released. By a reversal of the arrangement, all the lights are switched off when the button is operated after dark.

PETERBOROUGH, JANUARY 19, 1900

SLANDERS OF THE BRITISH IN SOUTH AFRICA

One source of strength enjoyed by the British Empire at this crisis is derived from the magnanimous sympathy of the most intelligent and responsible citizens of the United States. All the really great newspapers of that country stand by Great Britain in her struggle to prevent her South African colonies being torn from her hands. There are, however, some criticisms of the old land and of the British settlers in the Transvaal appearing in American papers that are extremely fatuous, and highly calculated to stir up strife with Great Britain, as well as create disaffection in the Dominion. Take as a specimen, a viciously scornful attack on the British residents at Johannesburg, made by the Springfield "Republican."

They are charged by that paper with cowardice for not raising a civil war, and defending their own against the Boers. They are accused of being "fortune hunters"; of having no permanent stake in the country; of being mere gypsies without any intention to become settlers; of lacking in courage to resist oppression. As to their being "fortune hunters" there is no question, but that is to their honour rather than shame, for all commerce is conducted by "fortune hunters," and to this class every country owes its development, its trade, and its wealth. California was founded by fortune hunters drawn there by the gold mines, to similar attractions the United States owe a large section of their area and population. But, says "The Republican," it is criminal for the British to be "fortune hunters" in the Transvaal!

As to their not having a permanent stake in the country, the city of Johannesburg witnesses to this being false. That city was built by English settlers. It is the noblest city in all Africa and rivals many on this continent. Gypsies do not build magnificent stores, residences, public edifices, &c. Yet the British, who built and who populate Johannesburg, are compared to tramps who have no stake in the country. As to the charge that the British were too cowardly to rise in revolt "in defence of their own," two things may be said. If they were, as represented mere nomads, or tramps, they had nothing worth fighting for. But they had costly stores, warehouses, houses, banks, &c., worth defending. How could they rise in revolt when they had no arms, and no opportunity for organization? Their city was and is under the shadow of a fortress equipped with canon, pointed at the streets. At the least sign of revolt the Boers could have demolished Johannesburg and killed its citizens. It is true they might have organized a mop, walking-stick and broom brigade, which the "Republican" thinks could have effectively resisted a battalion of Boer riflemen, for it declares they ought "to have stayed to the bitter end defending their own." The "Republican's" clients, the Boers, took good care to prevent a rising of the British at Johannesburg by keeping them without weapons and in terror of cannon pointed at their stores and dwellings. The men, women, and children expelled from that city were driven out by armed Boers who looted their warehouses, residences and banks.

Those who sympathize with such barbarities as the British in the Transvaal have suffered to do so because the Transvaal is a Republic, as though a Republican Government were justified in committing any outrage on liberty and civilization. History, however, tells us, that a Republic has often been a brutal despotism. But the Boers and their sympathizers seem to treat history with the same scornful contempt they show for freedom and for humanity. The intellect and the heart of the American people take no part in slanders of the British in South Africa. The Union Jack and "Old Glory" are now to closely entwined to be riven apart by insane appeals to national animosities which are an affront to civilization.

SIGNS OF THE NEW CENTURY.

Many who do not particularly believe in portents see many circumstances in the social, educational and business life of the present era which to them foreshadow the coming twentieth century as the most remarkable in the development the world has ever witnessed. This probably would be true in any case, the ordinary trend of events clearly pointing that way, but the visions of these seers are rather based upon certain exceptionable happenings altogether out of the usual line and for which no satisfactory explanation is at hand other than that they should be accepted as prognostications of remarkable things to come.

One of these extraordinary occurrences thus taken to prefigure the mighty future close upon us has just come to light to a town in Pennsylvania, whose claim to a high position on the pinnacle of fame cannot henceforth be justly disputed. In that place on Christmas Day last, bidding defiance to immemorial history and laughing the whole army of the world's jokers from the birth of time out of court, a man married his mother-in-law! To render the unique incident still more impressive in its message to the pending ages the groom had only recently been divorced from the bride's daughter.

The serious-minded may be disposed to smile indulgently when comets are received by the credulous as harbingers of war, and mildly commiserate those who assert the Candlemas hedgehog is a more reliable weather bureau than any the government ever built. No fault perhaps is to be found with this spirit of levity, for it is well known that neither can show unclouded title to the character of portents. But with this latest prodigy the case is different. It is not, it is true, so great a variation as were implied in the sun choosing the West for its morning visit, but it is nevertheless such a violent reversal of what had come to be considered the established law of nature that those who observe in it much that is phenomenally significant of future possibilities are not to be rashly blamed.

A Business Basis.

Belleville is getting municipal affairs down to a business basis and with gratifying results. The Intelligencer tenders the city fathers some pertinent wisdom worthy of the serious consideration of Ottawa's aggregation. It says: "Levy the rate that is needed, and then keep inside the appropriations, but don't try to make ten dollars do eleven dollars' worth of work. Striking a low rate and then trusting to luck to get through is simply obtaining a reputation under false pretences."

25 CTS. vs. DOCTOR—Some people have spent fortunes seeking to repair the inroads of disease which have had origin in the simplest of beginnings—food fermentation and indigestion—a disordered stomach—the money's gone—the physician has failed to cure—but Dr. Von Stan's Pineapple Tablets have proved the little "specialists" in a thousand cases—and a box of 60 of them have made a cure—costs just 35 cents. WOMAN STOPS A WEDDING.

Alleged Wife From Chicago Interrupts the Ceremony.

Reading, Pa., Jan. 19.—A wedding was rudely interrupted here to-day by an irate woman, who claims the groom as her husband. Jacob Simon, an employee of a hat factory, was engaged to be married when the employees went on a strike. As his nuptials were close at hand he decided not to go out. Arrangements were completed for the wedding, the guests were present and as the ceremony was about to be performed a woman entered the house and announced that she was Mrs. Jacob Simon, of Chicago. The wedding was at once postponed.

Simon was frantic, saying he did not know her. He has begun an action against Jacob Tischerlerman for $5,000, on the ground that Tischerlerman lured the woman from Chicago to testify against him; that the woman was not his wife and it was a conspiracy to disgrace him for not joining the strike.

Farewell to Canada's Loyal Sons.

Written for the Times.

Farewell brave sons of Canada;
May God protect you in your trip,
And quickly may you reach South Africa
On the bold and staunch Pavorian ship.

And there carry in triumph the grand old flag,
Which a thousand years has braved battle and breeze,
And trample down the Transvaal rag,
And capture the peasant troops at your ease.

For we know you are noble, stalwart and brave,
And ready for battles fierce array
And will the glorious old Union Jack wave
And show our oppressor British freedom must sway.

And will wipe out the stain of Majuba Hill.
And plant forever the flag of the free,
And show the burgher we mean no ill
All our Empire asks is liberty.

And to uphold the honor of our grand old flag,
Which has never bowed to foreign foe
For it is blessed by God as the colored rag.
To stand as prosperity, and peace where 'er it go.

Queer Cards of Shrewd Lawyers.

Not all men of the legal profession are content with the severe inscription on their cards to which etiquette and custom usually confine them. An Ohio lawyer who makes a specialty of collections calls attention to this fact by a novel device printed on his cards and letter heads. On a great red splotch intended to represent a drop of blood are the words, "Claims collected in cold blood," the capital "C" for the three first letters of those words being of sufficient size to encircle the other words.

In Maryville, Mo., a lawyer presents his portrait on his card, with the suggestive motto: "He that is not with you is against you. See me early."

A Scotch Scheme.

The following appears in a Glasgow paper. It would be interesting to know whether it has led to business. If so, the supply of grand pianos in Scotland must be considerably in excess of the demand.

"Lady having large drawin room would gladly store grand piano in return for use; references given."—London Truth.

The fir tree is the commonest of all trees, being found in every part of the world.

FAIR MILLBROOK.

Latest Budget of News From Peterborough Southern Suburb.

The Sabbath School of St. Thomas church held a very successful entertainment in the school room, on Friday evening, which was largely attended, and reflects great credit on part of the teachers and King's Daughters, who took such an interest in the scholars, from the little tots up, in perfecting them in melody, recitation and dialogue.

The boys brigade, under the skillful supervision of Mr. Fowler, also contributed to the success of the entertainment, by a drill and singing the patriotic songs in which they put the full emphasis of young patriots full of devotion.

Personal.

The Rev. Archdeacon Allen went up to Peterborough, Saturday evening to officiate in the pulpip of the Rev. Mr. Davidson, who preached an able sermon in St. Thomas' church.

Mr. G. Grean went up to Peterborough on a business trip Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Leach left Wednesday for Halifax, to see Canada's loyal sons leave their native land.

Miss A. Carveth went up to Peterboro' Wednesday, to visit her friend, Miss McFarlane.

Mr. L. F. Clarry, barrister, Hastings, came up Wednesday for a short visit.

Miss Ethel Richardson spent Saturday with friends in Peterborough.

Messrs. E. J. Rose, of Rose Hall, and R. Ross, of Gilead, Government delegates, made some very interesting and valuable speeches on agriculture and dairy at Farmers' Institute meetings in some of our neighboring villages, and will no doubt prove very instructive to the farmers.

A sleigh load of our prominent citizens drove out to the Port Perry races, Wednesday and report good races and a pleasant trip.

One of our young ladies, in the person of Miss L., was heard to remark Monday that "the moon light drives are so enlightening that the vacubular cells of almativeness are enlarged to a great extent by blissful recollections of pleasant winter evenings."

Miss N. Hetherington returned home Monday, after a pleasant visit with friends in Rochester, N. Y.

Mr. W. Gillott, of Toronto, came down Monday to spend a short visit at his old home.

Miss Ada Porter left Saturday to visit friends at Fraserville.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Percy, of Lindsay, returned home Monday, after a pleasant visit under the parental roof.

Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Chambers, Oshawa, are visiting Mr. Chambers father, Mr. D. Chambers.

A Sporting Event.

Rumor states that a large number of a prominent sporting club of one of our sister towns spent a very entertaining and jubilant evening in the city hall at Fraserville last week.

The Rink.

Our young people owe Messrs H. A. Maddock and C. Tait, two of our most enterprising citizens, great credit for the trouble they have taken in at last securing a rink for to make the weary winter nights more enjoyable by a pleasant skate. The owners have decided to let the building gradually fall down than accept a fair offer. The above named young men have taken the trouble of hiring a man to keep an open rink on the pond and putting up electric lights and running the risk of it, paying, as the charge is very small, being only sufficient for keeping it clean. It seems very disgusting to think that a bright town like ours, with an up-to-date rink would have to let it stand as a shadow for the simple reason that the owners were not satisfied to accept anything smaller than a Klondyke nugget about six inches square.

A Bad Accident.

What might have been a serious accident took place last Saturday. Mr. Wm. Armstrong, a well known produce dealer, drove into town with one of his zebra thoroughbred steeds and tied it, as he supposed, securely to a post in front of the Post Office, but was greatly startled to be acquainted of its sudden departure. Mr. Armstrong's story is as follows—Upon hurrying to where the animal was tied, he could see nothing of the nasty little thing, only a black streak going up the road at a pace exceeding that of a falling star. We are glad to report that no bones were broken, and that the damage done was slight.

United Sons of Rest.

One of the most noted meetings of this successful order of world wide reputation was held in its magnificent hall Tuesday evening.

The reason for such a large gathering being that the Hon. Richard McBride, President of the Lime Juice Club, Peterborough, was to make a speech on "Our Empire at Stake," which he did in such an eloquent manner that he made the blood boil of every member, from H. A. Maddock, to the Dutch German who sat in the first seat behind the audience. When His Honour Wm. Barlo marched up the aisle from the lockers, or ante room assisted by his aide de camp, Thos. Hunter, he felt so enthused over the cheering and roars of applause, that he stepped the Irish jig to such perfection that the melodious voice of Bro. Geo. Fowler could be heard two blocks away, shouting "O'old Ireland forever!" and he only occupied his chair when peace reigned over the hall.

He then arose and opened the meeting in the usual manner and rebuked the members for the rumpus they indulged in during the time he was strengthening his nervous system before officiating at his important office. He then asked the Vice-President to call out the officers, who were found to be all on duty. The Secretary, Geo. Leach, was then asked to read the minutes of the previous meeting which he did so cleverly that he was advised that he would be given two degrees next meeting night free of charge.

The minutes of the previous meeting proved correct, with the exception of nomination for officers, which was voted to be left on the table till next meeting owing to the business to be transacted.

His Honor stated that the next order of business was "Good and Welfare," but before proceeding with the same he would ask the Janitor to take the horse and cutter in the shed and get some wood. He soon returned with his face a picture of woe, stating there was no such conveyance in the shed. To his great consternation the President said his aide would go down and show him, Kells, Fowler & Son's Wood Yard, also saw and horse, which he must make use of at once, as the broken barometer registered 460 degrees. The business was then proceeded with without further interruption.

Bro. Joe Curtain, after asking transmission from his post as sentinel, stated that as he had accepted the position as commercial traveller for John Labatt, London, he would with regret have to make his resignation, as he had been offered a munificent sum for this important position, owing to his capacity for carrying samples, thus saving trunks, grips and excess tickets.

Bro. W. Raper then moved that an oyster lunch be given to him on his departure, which was carried unanimously.

A communication was then read from Joseph Craig, professor of Entomology, asking that the society vote him the sum of 250 francs for a descriptive detail of his trip to the Prairie province, with all levations and vales marked. Mr. Craig's communication was then voted to be left on the table for further consideration.

Bro. J. C. Kells, L. B. Collins, H. A. Turner, W. T. Wood, then moved that our congratulations be sent to our City Fathers for the liberal purse sent to our gallant sons on their way to the dark continent, which was carried amid a perfect storm of applause.

Bro. A. Reynolds, of Fraserville, made motion that as this was also the night for changing the quarterly pass word, he would move that the present one "Ten Cent Turkey," be "Cock Fight," which Bro. Wes Hutchinson, of the same suburb seconded.

The President then stated as the principal business was over, he would call on Hon. Richard McBride to make a brief address, on his subject, "Our Empire at Stake." When His Honor arose and opened his mouth he took in enough air, which if compressed, would run a trolley to Japan. He stated amid attentive silence his subject and proceeded as follows —

"Now, brethren, or step-sons as I may properly call you, of this great order, as we stand with fixed attention upon some certain object how deeply we feel for our fellow countrymen in that far away land across the good-blue expanse, who may be standing with gun or bayonet in hand ready to fight one of the greatest battles in history. Although beyond a doubt by the help of our supreme ruler, Who, we so sincerely implore, to bring this war to a close, for we know it is only in cause of freedom and liberty that our gallant sons leave their happy homes for those veldts far away, perhaps, never to return. Let us feel gratified to know that the blessed ensign of St. George has been chosen by our Heavenly Father as protector and civilizer of the world, and that the only course we are asked to pursue is to sanction our love and loyalty for our Empire in our prayers, and where a weak spot of fear arises in our heart that it may be blotted out forever with the noble phrase "We Are the Chosen!" And if another nation such as France whose imprudence already is slanderous, or the Fenians, whose yellor journals makes stupendous boasts of raiding our country, rises to tramp on the lion's tail, they will quickly feel the monstrous teeth of England's navy (Applause.)

Now, brethren, as I am about to close my remarks, which in no way are elaborate on account of my patriotic loyalism, I wish you all to deeply impress on your minds that prayer and devotion can overcome any obstruction in the path of the right. But of course we are all aware to the fact of the doctrine teachings that there shall be wars and rumors of wars brought to jstice as the lambs are brought to the fold by the faithful shepherd.

I will now conclude by wishing you and our Empire success, freedom and liberty."

Mr. McBride's speech was inspiring and creditable. The meeting was then closed amid roars of applause.

The Society's poet, Mr. Jas. Elliott, then asked the President to call order, which was quickly done, while he read his farewell poem, entitled "Farewell Ye Noble Sons," which he substituted in place of the one "Millbrook's Gallant Sons." He kindly asked the members to not cricize his poem too minutely on account of his short time to compose the same, and proceeded as follows amid wildest enthusiasm.

SIX WEEKS IN PAIN DUNGEON

A Confirmed Invalid From Acute Rheumatism—South American Rheumatic Cure Gives Him His Liberty.

Geo. England, of Chatman, N. B. is a carpenter and ship-builder by trade. Through exposure to all kinds of weather he contracted a most acute form of rheumatism. His joints swelled and stiffened, and he was laid up in his bed for six weeks. After doctors had failed to relieve him he tried South American Rheumatic Cure, and to use his own words—"In 24 hours after I had commenced taking the remedy the pain all left me, the swelling subsides and today I am a cured man." Sold by Ormond & Walsh.

A Race With the Sun.

The London Daily Mail says if an aerial machine were capable of traveling at any rate up to 1,000 miles an hour a traveler in it, starting westward from London at a speed of 660 miles an hour, would arrest the progress of time. If he started at 10 a. m., it would always be to him 10 a. m. Should he find his unending day monotonous, he could reverse his direction and get a quick succession of short days and nights of some six hours' duration, but he could regulate the length by the speed of his machine. Suppose he traveled from London one night at 10 o'clock westward at a speed of 1,000 miles per hour. He would soon experience the sensation of seeing the sun rising in the west where it had set a short time before.

"The young man who gets cheated," said the corn fed philosopher, "thinks the other fellow wonderfully smart, but the elderly person who goes up against it admits himself to be a fool."—Indianapolis Journal.

The Weak Spot.

When a boiler explodes carrying death and destruction with it, every body says "Why: we thought it was strong enough; It must have had a weak spot somewhere!" When a man who has the outward appearance of being sound and strong suddenly falls a prey to disease, his friends exclaim: "why we thought he was all right: He must have had a weak spot somewhere."

The fact is, almost everybody has a weak spot somewhere. Death and disease are always looking for weak spots. If your stomach or your liver won't do its proper work, if your body fails to get its full nourishment from the food you eat, and your brain loses part of the sleep it ought to have, no matter how big your frame and muscular your limbs may be, you will give out; disease will find the weak spot, and nature will give way.

"I wish to say to the world that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has proved a great blessing to me as I firmly believe I should be in a very bad state now if I had not taken it," writes Mrs. Ellen E. Bacon, of Shutesbury, Franklin Co., Mass., in a courteous communication to Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y. "Prior to September 1897, I had doctored for my stomach trouble for several years, going through a course of treatment without any real benefit. In September 1896, I had very sick spells and grew worse; could eat but little. I commenced in September 1897, to take Dr Pierce's medicine and in a short time I could eat and work. I have gained twenty pounds in two months."

This glorious "Discovery" gives the stomach and liver power to do their natural work regularly and completely. It makes healthy blood and steady nerves. It builds up the weak spots sound and strong. It is the only medicine that can be relied upon to accomplish this promptly and thoroughly.

Constipation is nine times in ten the beginning and one of the first symptoms of dangerous diseases. When this tendency is present Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets should be used in conjunction with the "Discovery."

Too Small.

Uncle 'Zek'el Watson was accustomed to seeing good sized squares of cup cake, 'lection cake or gingerbread on the supper table, and when he had his first plate of ice cream in a city restaurant he looked with some disfavor upon the macaroons and small sponge drops which accompanied it.

"How do you like it?" asked his niece, who was doing the honors of the city for her uncle.

"The ice cream is first rate," said Uncle 'Zek'el. "I call it extry good. But when you come to these things," he added, lifting one of the sponge "lady fingers" and surveying it doubtfully, "I presume to say they're all right enough, what there is of 'em, but there isn't enough of 'em; just nothing but gape and swallow!"—Youth's Companion.

Books.

When I consider what some books have done for the world and what they are doing, how they keep up our hope, awaken new courage and faith, soothe pain, give an ideal life to those whose homes are hard and cold, bind together distant ages and foreign lands, create new worlds of beauty, bring down truths from heaven, I give eternal blessings for this gift.—James Freeman Clarke.

MATRON AND MAID.

Mrs. Joseph Chamberlain is not the typical American girl which some people represent her to be.

Mrs. Mary Lease has renounced her residence in Kansas and will hereafter make her home in New York.

The Duchess of Sutherland frequently attends meetings of socialistic women in company with Miss Margaret MacMillan, a socialistic lecturer.

Miss Mayme Jester, a niece of Buffalo Bill, is said to be the only female press agent on the road. She left the newspaper business to go into this new field.

Miss Emma Thursby has returned to New York and will resume work with her pupils at once. A recent report of her illness was unfounded, as she is quite well.

Dr. Cornelia de Bay of Chicago, a successful woman physician among the Dutch of that city and herself of Dutch descent, is about to give up her practice and go to the Transvaal as an army nurse.

Mrs. Julia Grant, widow of General Grant, will complete her personal memoirs before Christmas. She has been engaged on the work for nearly ten years. Society is interested in the appearance of Mrs. Grant's book.

Miss Anne M. de Beck, who heads the movement among Chicago women for the presentation of $5,000 swords to Generals Wheeler and Lee, has already had the designs for the swords worked out and announces that over half the necessary funds have been promised.

A young girl, Miss Emma M. Hery, is the superintendent of the Denver public schools. She was a newspaper woman and an active member of the Denver Woman's Press club. She is a Democrat and was elected on the straight ticket. Her opponent was also a woman.

It is rumored in Paris that Amelie Rives, now the Princess Troubetskoy, will settle there permanently and establish a literary salon for the purpose, primarily, of securing a French translation of her literary works and such other recognition as she thinks they deserve.

Mrs. John M. Thurston, the bride of the Nebraska senator, is described as of medium height, graceful, with changeful dark gray eyes, occasionally flashed with blue, perfect figure and mobile features. She was born in Tallahassee, Fla., 27 years ago and is a graduate of Wellesley.

Under the stimulating influence of Miss Grace King, the historian of New Orleans, the Louisiana Historical society is to establish in the Crescent City a historical museum. The society hopes to obtain by and by the Cabildo building, an old and historic pile now occupied by the state supreme court.

CHICAGO AND GRAND OPERA.

Chicago, having tired of grand opera, now proposes to become the world's art center, regardless of expense.—Grand Rapids Democrat.

One explanation of the failure of the grand opera season in Chicago is that the people are saving their money to buy automobiles.—Kansas City Star.

Mr. Grau says Chicago is a poor town for grand opera. The people out there will probably strike back by declaring that Grau is an all fired poor judge of packed meat.—Washington Post.

After losing a great deal of money Manager Grau has discovered that Chicago does not care for grand opera, her people being busy listening to the grunt of dying hogs and having no time to hark to the trills of a Sembrich.—Louisville Post.

Chicago is feeling rather mortified over the cold reception it gave to Mr. Grau. It would seem that Chicago is about on a par with Rochester as a "musical center" in the matter of giving welcome and support to great artists.—Rochester Democrat.

THE FRENCH PRESS.

Sober minded Frenchmen think that undue attention has been paid in England to the obscure draftsmen whose vulgarities have adorned the pages of the Parisian gutter press.—Philadelphia Record.

Considering all the abuse the English papers heaped upon France in the matter of Dreyfus, it is not surprising that the French papers should retaliate with unfavorable comments upon English policy.—Philadelphia Times.

The sort of cartooning to which Queen Victoria is being subjected in the comic papers of Paris is a reminder of the fact that there is no country in the world where that sort of journalism descends to such depths as in France. Its cleverness and keenness are impaired by coarseness and indelicacy.—Boston Herald.

Yaquis Make a Stand

El Paso, Texas, Jan. 18.—The Indians of Sonora, the only race in all Mexico, that was able to survive the Spanish invasion and preserve its individuality, are making their last stand against the Mexican Government. Thus far it seems the Mexican soldiers have been found inadequate to cope with the Yaquis.

A proclamation has been issued by the ruler of the Yaqui nation, addressed to "The American People," and is in part as follows—

"The Yaqui nation has begun its struggle for independence. It will no longer tolerate the Mexican army in Sonora. The nation has established a provisional government, the officers of which are at Bahiaqu."

HUMBLED THE SENATOR.

He Tried to Assert His Independence, but Failed Miserably.

The writer remembers a good many years ago when the late Ezekiel Clarke was a member of the state senate from Johnson county. It is well known that the senator or member from Johnson county is always expected to get a large appropriation for the state university. To fail would be political death. Senator Clarke was anxious to succeed and during the early part of the session voted for everything. If another senator had a bill, all he had to do was to go and whisper in Ezekiel's ear, and he would vote "aye."

One day, however, Ezekiel came into the senate with hair cut and a clean shave. He sat upright in his seat and began to slaughter right and left. State Senator George F. Wright looked across to where the senator from Johnson was sitting and inquired what change had come over the senator from Johnson county. The other senator replied that the appropriation bill for the state university had now passed both houses, and the senator from Johnson was going to make up for lost time.

Clarke kept on punching heads until the senator from Jefferson, Moses A. McCold, rose and solemnly introduced a bill for an act entitled "An act repealing the appropriation for the state university." A broad smile passed around the room, and everybody except the senator from Johnson saw the joke. But the spirit of levity passed away from Senator Clarke. He at once assumed his humble attitude, and the other boys voted him as usual during the remainder of the session.—Des Moines Capital.

Thousands Revel in Mad Riot.

Rio Janeiro, Jan. 18.—More than 20,000 drivers of all kinds of vehicles struck yesterday. A small faction of monarchists, headed by Curo Reto, a brother of Carlos Affonso, and Mallino Reis, attempted to take advantage of the situation. Numerous groups attacked different points, tearing up the street car rails and destroying cars. Several thousand of rioters, in front of the President's palace, raised cries of "Long live the monarchy! Death to the republic!" A small force of cavalry dispersed the rioters with difficulty.

The city to-day has the appearance of martial law having been proclaimed The horse cars and other vehicles are partly working. The police during the first hours of the disturbance were extremely weak and inefficient, but were reinforced by regular troops, especially cavalry, and order was re-established.

Will Expel Roberts.

Washington, aJn. 17.—The special committee of the House of Representatives to investigate the case of Brigham H. Roberts, of Utah, to-day reached a final conclusion. On the polygamous status of Mr. Roberts the committee was unanimous and agreed upon a formal statemen tof facts. On the question of procedure to be adopted the committee was divided. The majority, consisting of all the members except Littlefield, of Maine, and De Armond, of Missouri, favored exclusion at the outset. Messrs. Littlefield and De Armond will make a minority report favorable to seating Roberts on his prima facie rights and then expelling him.

Scalded to Death.

Hamilton, aJn. 17.—Percy Carroll, the four year old son of Matthew Carroll, of Hannah street, was fatally scalded this evening. The little fellow suffered from convulsions, and his mother, who was ill, told her husband to give him a hot bath. Carroll says he poured out the water, and felt it to see if it was too hot, after which he was removed to th ehospital where he died an hour after his arrival. An inquest will be held by Coroner Griffin to-night.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Soak flannels in cold borax water. If very soiled, make a slight lather. Souse up and down and rinse well. They must never be rubbed.

Scrubbing brushes should never be allowed to soak in water, either hot or cold. Shake them when finished with and stand them in the air to dry.

Shoes that are not in use need to be aired and cleaned once in a fortnight at least, or they will not wear as long as if they had been worn each day.

A broom that is plunged into boiling suds once a week will become tough, so that it will last much longer, will not cut a carpet and will always sweep like a new broom.

The Architect.

One must wonder why it really is that so little is said or thought about architecture, the grandest, the mother, of all arts, a great, a most useful, science, one in which a greater revolution has lately taken place and in which more progress has been made, with more stupendous results, than in any other, remarks a writer in The International Magazine.

Was it not Richelieu who, paraphrasing an ancient writer, said: "If it is versatility you seek, go find an architect. He must be an artist, or his buildings will offend the eye; an engineer, or they will crumble into trouble; a lawyer, or he will get his patrons into trouble; a doctor, or his buildings will be hygienically unfit to live in, and, last, but not least, he must be a gentleman, or we will have nothing to do with him."

Time to Give Up

An Iowa judge recently related an amusing incident that had occurred in his court when a colored man was brought up for some petty offense. The charge was read, and as the statement "The state of Iowa against John Jones" was read in a loud voice the colored man's eyes bulged nearly out of their sockets and he seemed overcome with terror and astonishment. When he was asked if he had anything to say or pleaded guilty or not guilty, he gasped out:

"Well, yo' honah, ef de whole state o' Iowa is ag'in dis one pore niggah I'se gwine to give up right now!"

They Threaten Conners.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 17.—Prominent vesselmen from all ports of the lakes are arriving in this cityto be in readiness to-day for what promises to be one of the most important conventions of the lake Carriers' Association ever held. The important question to be decided is the awarding of the contract for the handling of grain at Bufafalo next year, which involves a threatened clash between labor and capital.

The Longshoreman's Union is preparing to make a strong fight against awarding the contract to W. J. Conners, who has had it for several years. The Union Executive will confer with the lake carriers on the matter and will practically deliver an ultimatum to the effect that if Conners is given the contract again the union will declare a strike of longshoremen at all ports, thereby tying up the carrying trade of the lakes.

He Married a Gould.

Paris, Jan. 18.—The Matin to-day says it is rumored on the bourses that Count Boni de Castellane, husband of Anna Gould, has lost 3,000,000 francs by unlucky industrial speculations.

The Marquis de Castellane, father of Count Boni de Castellane, denies most emphatically the story that Count Boni has failed to meet his obligations, due to bourse transactions, for the simple reason, he adds, that his son has never taken part in the alleged speculations. The Marquis explains that the fact that Count Boni and his wife are on their way to America has been taken advantage of and furnished the opportunity for false rumors.

He ate a hearty breakfast and lied down the street.

Smith's Inaugural.

he first person he met was Hank kins, a hugh cattle puncher from hern Texas.

So you are the man who has come run the town.

No," replied Smith, "but I have hired to keep order, and I am ng to try to do the best I can."

awkins was openly wearing two navies, and pointnig to them, he ed: "What are you goin' to do ut them?"

That is against the laws, and I will e to trouble you for the guns right ."

I won't give them up to any live n."

I ain't looking for trouble," said marshal, his steel gray eyes flash- , "but you will obey the ordinance" e a shot he leaped forward and ded a terrific blow on the forehead the big Hawkins, who promptly ssured his length on the sidewalk. the twinkling of an eye Smith was top of him with the guns in his nds.

I will give you ten seconds to start the city limits," was the ruling. ter a glance at the determined face the marshal the cowboy lit out for high grass. Smith leisurely pock- d the guns and sauntered down e street as if he had nothing to do.

Smith Wins the Crowd.

"Wyoming Frank" was another of e town's terrors. He boasted that he uld make the new marshal take ter. The same day that Hawkins subdued, Frank and some of his onies gathered in front of the Texas loon and waited for the marshal. ank defiantly wore a 44-caliber re- lver. Smith told him to take it off. ank refused and went into the sa- on, whither the rest of the gang had treated. Smith followed. Frank ggested that Smith take the gun om him, whereupon Smith's right ot out and took the terror under e jaw, partly turning him around in me to receive another under the ear hich laid him out in the floor amid e deathly stillness of the assembled ng, too frightened and awed to go the assistant of their friend. The arshal seized the man's guns and ounded him over the head. Then as rank struggled to his feet he kicked im toward the rear door amid the ers of the others. Frank sneaked t into the darkness and disappeared.

Smith made a little speech: "I am oing to have order in this town, and want every man to obey. If he don't ey, I will make him. I shall treat veryone fairly. You must all give up ur guns and they will be taken to he mayor's office, where you can find hem when you want to leave town."

For a moment there was silence. hen a faro dealer, a leader among the ports spoke up: "That is the nerviest t I ever saw. Here, Mr. Marshal, is y gun." He handed it to Smith, and ll the others followed his example. They were glad of a chance to get ut of the predicament at the least possible loss of self-respect. "I can't carry them all," laughed Smith, and o a compromise was proposed. The aloon keepers were to be the custodians of the weapons, and the cowboys were to leave them off during their stay in the town.

How He Met His Death.

Smith was killed while attempting the arrest of a murderer three miles northeast of Abilene. Two Scotchmen had trouble with an Irishman about some of the latter's cattle destroying their corn. There were no fences and disagreements of this sort were common. They killed the Irishman and took refuge in their cabin, defying the authorities. The sheriff and his posse went out and did not dare go near enough to the cabin to make the arrest, coming back to town. Smith volunteered to take two men, and bring in the murderers. When they came near the cabin one of the Scotchmen was in the rear chopping wood. The other was inside, and he cut loose with a gun, firing a shot into Smith's breast. The deputies fled, and Smith, with his true nerve, leaped into the dark and filthy little cabin and had nearly handcuffed the murderer when the Scotchman outside with his axe, and with a shingle blow completely severed Smith's head from his body. The wound from the rifle was of itself fatal, and his desperate fight after receiving it showed how undaunted he was. His murderers met speedy justice for their deed.

GLIMPSES OF SOUTH AFRICA.

In Peace and in War—A Splendid Lot of Views

Southern Africa, that enormous expanse of tropically verdant territory extending from the Lambesi River to the Cape of Good Hope, has for a century or more lain dormant to the eyes of the civilized world. Only within the past two decades has public attention been drawn to the wonderful natural resources and mineral wealth of this wild and rugged land, and yet, within this period, marvelous creation of brilliant modern cities have supplanted the desert lands and haunts of savage tribes. The steady march of civilization, the all-pervading ambition to accumulate the wealth of diamonds and gold that lay beneath the crust of this benighted land, each has borne its part in the metamorphosis and heralded to the world the wonderful possibilities of that "Dark Continent" for the energy and enterprise that the 20th century will bring to light.

In no other country of the world has progress been marked with such adversity and strife as Africa. From the time the early Dutch settlers landed in the Cape Colony up to the present, there has existed almost a constant state of warfare; the natives disputing the advance of the Dutch and they in turn resenting the inroads of civilization. In spite of this, so strenuous were the efforts of the colonists in their determination to turn to account the beauties and resources of the land of their adoption, that today they enjoy the fruits of their successes in a paradise of tropical vegetation, a salubrious climate and surrounded by the highest advantages of intellectuality and luxuries of civilization.

Cape Town is the metropolis and seat of government of the Cape Colony. Its historical past and present is firmly linked in the traditions of the early Dutch and the Huguenots. True, the old forts and buildings of distinctly Dutch architecture still remain but magnificent edifices of the most modern type, beautiful botanical gardens and the public improvements are evidences of the wonderful advance of civilization.

Port Elizabeth is the Liverpool of South Africa. It is a great commercial center, coupled with some of the largest shipping interests in the world; a city of the most modern type, essentially English in character, and possessing some of the largest as well as the most architecturally magnificent buildings and public institutions in South Africa.

Natal is the beautiful, tropical Garden Colony. Its luxurious vegetation and glorious climate, its wide avenue of trees and fine buildings, the native Zulu servants and the picturesque costumes of the Orientals, lend an ear of peace and tranquility, while the marks of civilization and progress are in evidence at every turn.

Johannesburg, the Golden, with its fine architectural creations, public institutions and parks, possesses many attractions that easily place it as the foremost city of South Africa. Its great industry, mining, the apparently inexhaustible veins of gold-bearing quartz, in which upwards of seven hundred millions of dollars are invested, have been the attraction for the thousands and thousands of "Uitlanders," whose "grievances" are substantially the cause for the cruel war between Briton and Boer, the battles of which have been ranked as the "bloodiest of the century."

So great has been the interest manifested in South Africa and the progress of the war, and so eager the thirst for information, coupled with the demand for a Pictorial History incident to the scenes of warfare, that the publication of "Glimpses of South Africa" has been undertaken upon a scale of grandeur, fidelity and completeness never before thought of, involving as it has an expense of extraordinary magnitude. In order that the work might be absolutely reliable and thorough in its character, the publishers have contracted for its authorship with Mr. Wymble Flemming, an Afrikander, whose authority upon South African matters is world-widely acknowledged. This gentleman,—born in the Cape Colony, having travelled over nearly every inch of the country south of the Lambesi River and lived in South Africa for nearly thirty years, with an extensive newspaper experience in Africa, England and America, the author of many interesting sketches of South African life and scenery, formerly connected with the consular service at Port Elizabeth, whose comments on the war have been so favorably received by the American press, and whose magnificent collection of photographs will appear in this work,—will present South Africa as it is today, with views of everything of public interest, including most of the important scenes of battle and a graphically illustrated description of each stage in the progress of the war.

This great work is published in serial form, and when complete will comprise the most magnificent collectoin of photographic reproductions of the British-Boer war and South Africa obtainable in this country. Portfolios distributed by the Morning Times. For particulars see announcement on another page of this issue.

A QUEER SENSATION.

HOW IT FEELS TO BE HELD UP AT THE POINT OF A REVOLVER.

Curious Phenomenon That Causes Each Man in a Roomful to Believe That a Weapon is Pointed Straight at His Own Head.

"If you will take my word for a little experience I had recently, perhaps I can make clear to you how it is possible for three bad men to hold up a roomful of fairly brave men and get away safely with their money," said a merchant from the state of Washington who was a guest at the Lotos club one night recently. "I was in such a hold up not long ago, and I have ceased jeering at fellows who have been through similar experiences. I was one of 70 men who were held up in a big gambling hall, and as I am not a regular patron of such places I kept quiet about it at home. The gambling house is one of the best known in the west, and on the night of the hold up it was filled with a representative crowd. A search would have disclosed the fact undoubtedly that many of the men present were armed. No trouble in recent years has occurred in this place, and there was no reason to anticipate any. It was nearly midnight when the door opened and three men, masked and each holding two revolvers, entered the room.

"'Hands up, quick!' shouted the foremost man.

"I was sitting at a faro table when I heard this command, and as I looked up I found a revolver pointing straight at my head. When I compared notes with the other seventy odd men later, I found that each one had the same experience. There were only six revolvers, and yet each man in the room was willing to swear that one of them was pointed at his head all the time. The crowd was simply paralyzed with fright. For two or three seconds not a man moved. Then over in one corner a Leadville sport brought his hand around to reach his hip pocket.

"'Stop that or I'll shoot,' said one of the masked men, covering him with his revolver. 'Hands up, now; quick! We mean business.'

"Every man in that room did hold his hands up. There was no hesitation then. It was my first experience in that kind of game, but it was not until I was able to take my hands down that I realized how tiresome the operation was. There we stood, each man with his hands stretched high above his head, held up in a room on a busy street when an outcry would bring help at once. It was a pretty sure thing, however, that no one would make the outcry. The three masked men had eyes for every move, and their revolvers pointed all ways at once. It is easy for a man who has not been through such an experience to suggest that if several men had only made a break these fellows would have run. I can honestly say that the barrel of the revolver into which I looked seemed to me to be as large as a sewer pipe. I even thought that I could see the end of the bullet, and I was awfully afraid that the man who held the revolver might get nervous and shoot me by accident. I tried to look pleasant to appease him. All this had taken perhaps a minute and a half when the spokesman shouted to us:

"'Line up against that wall with your backs to me, and the man who takes his hands down will get shot. Quick now, gentlemen, if you please. Obey orders, and you won't get hurt.'

"We lined up as directed like a lot of schoolboys.

"'Now then, my friend here will relieve you of your valuables without your assistance,' said the spokesman. 'Don't move, because there are two dead shots behind you. Keep quiet, and it will soon be over.'

"It was a very cool piece of work, I can assure you. One of the three went straight down the row, taking each man's watch and money. He didn't get as much as he expected, and as near as we could estimate later the total haul was under $5,000. There was over $100,000 in the safe which the robbers overlooked. When we had been cleaned out, the spokesman said:

"'Now, gentlemen, we are sorry to inconvenience your further, but we shall have to request you to stand just as you are for five minutes more. Don't cut the time short, or you will get hurt.'

"The side door opened at this instant, and we heard the order 'Hands up, Chink, or you are a dead man!' It was one of our Chinese servants who was returning with a tray filled with drinks. He promptly dropped his tray, smashing all the glasses and threw up his hands. We heard no other sound for five minutes. Each man counted the seconds to make sure that he shouldn't take down his hands ahead of time. The proprietor was the first man to move. As soon as he felt that it was safe he turned and found the robbers gone. He picked up a heavy chair and threw it through the window. It carried the sash with it, and the crash that followed attracted general attention in the street below. The proprietor stuck his head out of the window and profanely shouted such details of the hold up as might put the people in the street on the track of the robbers. It was useless, however. The fellows walked out quietly, took off their masks and disappeared without leaving any clew. We all piled out of the place to aid the search. When we found out that a chase was hopeless, most of us came back to the gambling room to talk it over. When we entered the place, we found the Chink standing in the ruins of his glasses with his hands still above his head. The proprietor told him to take his hands down. The Chink wouldn't do it, and two men who pulled his arms to his side had all they could do to hold him. He had looked in the big barrel of one of those small revolvers, and he hadn't forgotten it.

"Now this was an actual experience, and some of your New York papers had accounts of it. If I were mixed up in an affair of that sort again, I would raise my arms just as quickly. It was expediency and not a yellow streak that made that crowd act as it did."

Never Caught Alive.

In Lake Derwentwater, in England, there is a species of fish called vendace, which are never caught alive. They are said to frequent the deeper parts of the lake and are never met with in the rivers. One or two dead specimens of the breed which have been found in the lake are treasured as curiosities.

Fertile Peru.

Though in the torrid zone, Peru possesses such diversity of elevations and climatic peculiarities as to be able to produce almost any product known to man.

A DOCTOR FOR TEN CENTS—HUTCH.

A great many people run to a physician for every ailment they experience—this is not an unusual principle. The ignorance we all are in concerning our own anatomy is such that we feel the advice of one skilled in such matters should be sought. A very natural human weakness sometimes magnifies the trouble and produces anxiety when there is no cause. Look at it this way. The stomach is the primary organ of the body. A diseased stomach produces ills we in our ignorance sometimes fancy are local in character. A healthy stomach will soon relieve distress. Hutch Tablets will impart vigorous vitality to your stomach. A treatment of Hutch will permanently cure the disorders of the more remote organs of the body. That is why Hutch is called the doctor for ten cents. Its work is not confined to one organ alone, but its beneficent, healthful influence is experienced throughout the entire system.

Notwithstanding the bad walking and unfavorable weather the band concert last night was liberally patronized. The music was all that could be desired, and the frequent rounds of applause indicated that it was appreciated.

Wedding Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Foord celebrated the 15th anniversary of their wedding on Monday evening last by entertaining a number of their relatives and friends. The gifts received, commemorative of the crystal wedding, were very handsome and in great variety. A very pleasant evening was spent in social enjoyment.

Large Order for Paper.

The Times' bindery received an order from a western house for 5,000 letter copying books, requiring half a train load of tissue copying paper. The first instalment of this paper arrived yesterday and consisted of a couple of hundred reams. It was purchased direct from the manufacturers in Massachussets. When the Times gets into larger premises, as it will do soon, we hope to double the number of our employees.

New Readers

We have just received a neat little book of new readings in Scotch and English for social gatherings. The selections are from the works of Mr. John Imrie, Toronto, and are up to date. For sale at the Times Bookstore.

From Corporal Tom Miller.

A letter was received yesterday by Mrs. F. W. Miller, from her son, who is a corporal in the Scots Guards, fighting under General Methuen in South Africa. Corporal Miller says that his regiment has been in four engagements that the worse is over, and that there is only one more battle to fight before reaching Kimberley. In his regiment there have been eighteen killed and seventy-eight wounded, whilst in his company there have been only two that met death. He asks his mother not to worry about him, as he feels that he will come through safely.

Bitten by a Dog.

A peculiar accident occurred at the Post Office yesterday at one o'clock. Dr. Young's big mastiff attacked the Doctor's horse while the latter was standing at the post office. The dog which had been in the cutter, made a jump at the horse's head as soon as he jumped out of the cutter, and although the horse shook him off, he attacked the horse again and again. Onlookers interfered, at the risk of being bitten, and after the whip had been freely used, the infurated beast was cowed. The wounds on the horse's forelegs were dressed by Dr. Poole, V.S.

MARRIED IN QUEBEC.

Marriage of Mr. A. J. E. Hall and Miss Tottie Hartley.

The Quebec Chronicle publishes the following paragraph, which will be of interest to the many friends in town of Miss Tottie Hartley and Mr. Adam J. Hall:—

"Another romantic incident occurred here last night in connection with the departure of the troops of the second contingent. Adam J. Hall, of Peterborough, Ont., a trooper in A squadron, Mounted Rifles, was wedded to Miss Tottie Hartley, also of Peterborough, who is a sister-in-law of Mr. W. R. Russell, civil engineer, of the Montmorency Electric Light and Power Company. It appears that Trooper Hall and Miss Hartley had been engaged to be married, but had parted at Peterborough with the intention of waiting until the war was over. Determined, however, to have another parting with her brave soldier boy before leaving, and to visit her married sister here at the same time, Miss Hartley came on to Quebec yesterday. Trooper Hall was unaware of the fact until invited to dinner by her brother-in-law when his agreeable surprise may be imagined and when the two faithful lovers resolved upon an impromptu wedding, with the approbation of their friends and with the assistance of Rev. Mr. Love, they were made man and wife at Mr. Russell's hospitable residence."

Mr. Pearson's Sad Death.

The particulars of the death of Mr. W. L. Pearson, son of Mr. W. J. Pearson, who is so well and favorably known in Peterborough has come to hand. The Star says:—"William Leslie Pearson, twenty years of age, son of Mr. W. J. Pearson, of No. 228 Logan Park avenue, took a dose of Paris green while suffering from mental depression yesterday morning, and died in the afternoon at four o'clock, despite all the efforts made to save his life. Coroner Mahon held an inquest over the remains this morning. A verdict of "Suicide while in a moment of mental responsibility,' was returned by the jury." Mr. Pearson and family have the sincere sympathy of very many in Peterborough and surrounding district.

A Pleasing Affair.

The pupils of St. Paul's Church Sunday School were given a very enjoyable sleigh ride yesterday evening. At five o'clock the junior classes were taken out and driven around town for an hour and at seven a couple of dozen sleighs took the older scholars out for a couple of hours. At six o'clock, after the return of the little ones, refreshments were served in the school room. The scholars thoroughly enjoyed the outing.

A Good Suggestion.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—It occurred to me that it would be a good idea for the C.L.A. minstrels to give an entertainment in the Opera House in aid of the Patriotic Fund. These minstrels put up a good show, and are composed of some of our best young men.

I am sure Mr. Bradburn would give the Opera House at a reduced rate, and the printing and advertising could also be had for very little.

As "everybody reads the Times," I make my motion through its columns.

BRITISH CANADIAN.

From Atlin.

The Times is in receipt of a copy of the Globe, Atlin, B. C., of Dec. 23, sent by our old friend, Mr. C. W. Sawers. From the paper we copy the following—"The Atlin Whist Club, which numbers some sixty members, held their first meeting last Thursday evening at the residence of Mr .C. W. Sawers. It was a most enjoyable affair. Mr. Sawers served the members with a choice lunch and did the honors of the evening with all of the evidences of a veteran in the art of entertainment."

40th Anniversary Sale.

In a little wooden shop, with a square clapboard front, situated where Hall & Hayes law office now stands, the well-known boot and shoe business of R. Stenson first saw the light of day sixty years ago. Twenty years later Mr. J. T. Stenson succeeded to the business so successfully managed by his father, and has continued it ever since, a period of forty years. There is no other person in Peterborough to-day who was in business here forty years ago. Mr. Stenson is to commemorate the unique event by some especially attractive business features for the next two months, which it will be in the interest of all to know. Special features of the great sale will be that in addition to marking all goods away down in price, a rebate of ten per cent. will be repaid in cash to each purchaser. For instance, on a one dollar purchase, ten cents will be returned, on a five dollar purchase 50 cents, and so on. Mr. Stenson carries out exactly what he says in his advertisements. Call at once and get some of the bargains.

He also says that at the end of four years she will own the farm and will be charging him rent for living on it.

Mr. Joseph Succee was made the recipient of a handsome pair of beaver gauntlets by the members of his class in the George street Sunday school on Thursday evening. The presentation took place at the Y.M.C.A. Hall and was accompanied by a complimentary address read by Mr. Robert Cunningham. Mr. Succee made a suitable reply, thanking the class for their kind gift.

An Old Newspaper Man says about Grape-Nuts

Arthur M. Hull, manager of the St. Paul Globe, thinks advertisements are written to inform other people about food and its value, but are not intended for newspaper men themselves, and yet of all men, newspaper men require good nourishing food to rebuild the brain and nerve centers. (They will agree that this is not a joke.)

Mr. Hull says: "I wish to give you an unsolicited testimonial for Grape Nuts. I have used your Postum Cereal for about two years. I have seen your advertising for Grape-Nuts in the Globe as well as other papers; and have appreciated it from an advertising standpoint, but some way I never bought any until about a week ago. Since then I have practically lived on it. I think it is, without exception, the finest preparation of any food product that it has been my good fortune to taste, and my enthusiasm prompts me to write this note. Wishing you all kinds of success.

Populists Divided on Bryan

Lincoln, Neb., Jan. 18.—The fight between the Bryan members of the National Populist Executive Committee and the members who favor a straight populist nominee, is waxing furious. The committee meets next month and will then set a time for the national convention. Bryan has advised that the convention be held one month later than the Democratic convention, but the element opposed to him desire an earlier convention. Senator Allen has sent a letter to his populist friends advising them to vote for Kansas City as the place for the convention.

A Limit on Inheritances

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 18.—In opening the session of the State Bar Association today President Logan made an address on "The Limitations of Inheritances," in which he advocated a $10,000,000 statutory limitation on inheritances and gave as his reasons for advocating it the following—

"1. There is at the present day no good purpose to be served by giving a man power to transmit more than $10000,000.

2. The great power which great wealth cannot be intrusted as safely to those who inherit the wealth as those who acquire it by their own exertions.

"3. No vested right would be infringed and no injustice done to any one by the proposed legislation."

London, Jan. 19.—Sir Matthew White-Ridley, the Home Secretary, speaking at Blackpool last evening, said—"On behalf of my colleagues and myself, I would say that we all share the full responsibility, for the Cabinet, like the nation, has been united from the beginning. There is no doubt that, when the proper time comes for the Cabinet to justify its course, the justification will be sufficiently ample.

"What gives me the most pleasure is the determination of the country, no less than the Government, that, having a quarrel forced upon us, we must bring it to a successful issue.

"It is not the business of the press to criticize the actions of our gallant generals in the field. There is none of them who does not possess the full confidence of the country and the Government."

RITISH TROOPS ENGAGE WITH BOERS ALL DAY SATURDAY AND SUNDAY

eneral Clery's and Part of General Warren's Forces on Saturday Engaged Boers the Entire Day, Capturing Ridge After Ridge for Three Miles.

neral Warren Engaged All Day Sunday the Ground Was Very Difficult, Being All Up-hill, But Substantial Progress Has Been Made. About Three Hundred Reported Wounded in Saturday's Battle. Additional List of Casualties Received From Ladysmith.

London, Jan. 21.

War Office shortly after midnight ated the following despatch from Gen. ller, dated Spearman's Camp, Jan. (Evening)

eral Clery with a part of General arren's force has been in action from a.m. till 7 p.m. to-day. By a ju- cious use of his artillery he has fought way up, capturing ridge after ridge about three miles.

troops are now bivouacking on the ound he has gained, but the main po- tion is still in front of them.

casualties were not heavy. About hundred wounded had been brought by 6.30 p.m. The number of killed s not yet been ascertained."

London, Jan. 21.

eral Buller cables as follows to the ar Office—"Spearman's Camp, Jan. —General Warren has been engag- all day, chiefly on his left, which he s swung forward about a couple of iles. The ground is very difficult and the fighting is all the time up hill, is difficult to say exactly how much have gained, but I think we are mak- g substantial progress."

London, Jan. 21.

War Office has posted this de- patch from General Buller dated an. 21, 10 a.m.:

he following were wounded in action near Ventors Spruit yesterday:—Officers—Staff-Col. B. Hamilton and Major C. McGregor, Second Lancashire Fusiliers, Capt. R. S. Blunt and Second Lieuts. M. G. Crofton and E. J. M. Barrett; rst Border Rifles—Capt. C. D. Vaughan, and second Lieut. Murier

rst York and Lancashires: Second Dublin Fusilers; Capt. C. A. Heasley, since dead, and Major F. English; Seconds Gordons—second Lieut. P. D. Stewart and 279 non-comissioned officers and men."

Spearman's Camp, Jan. 21, 9.30 a.m.

en. Warren's engagement continues He has forced the enemy from three positions. The Lancashires and Irish brigades are advancing steadily The fire is very severe occasionally.

London, Jan. 21.

War Office has received the following from Lord Roberts, dated Cape Town, Jan. 21.—"General French reports a demonstration with cavalry and two guns toward Hebron on Friday, but otherwise his situation is unchanged."

A third supplementary list of the British casualties in the attack upon Ladysmith on Jan. 6 was published by the War Office to-day. It shows 28 non-commissioned officers and men killed and five dangerously wounded. This brings the total list of casualties in the engagement to 488.

London, Jan. 21.

The War Office has received the following from General Buller dated Spearman's Camp, Jan. 21, 6.55 a.m.: "In order to relieve the pressure on General Warren and to ascertain the strength of the enemy in the position in front of Potgieters Drift, Gen. Lyttleton made a reconnaisance in force yesterday. This kept the enemy in their trenches in full strength all day. Our casualties: Third battalion. King's Royal Rifles—Two killed, twelve wounded and two missing."

London, Jan. 22, 12.15 a.m

Yesterday was quite a record day at the War Office. As if anticipating important news, the authorities announced on Saturday that the lobbies of the War Office would be open throughout Sunday, and the knowledge that a great, critical battle was proceeding brought a continual stream of inquirers of all classes. Some gloomy forebodings were caused by the bulletin announcing that nearly three hundred had been wounded, but in general a cheery confidence was expressed in the success of General Buller's movement. On it being announced that further official despatches were improbable to-night, the crowd dispersed, expressing disappointment that the news was no better.

Mr. Chamberlain will dine at Osborne House with the Queen to-day (Monday) and will return to London to-morrow.

Durban, Jan. 21.

The Natal Advertiser has the following from Spearman's Camp dated yesterday:—"Gen. Warren's column attacked a lengthy Boer position on the norther ridge of Spoin kop. A heavy bombardment by a field battery preceded the advance. The Boers eventually replied with two guns, several machine guns and rifles. The British responded similiarly and long range firing became general lasting until dark.

"General Hildyard drew the Boers from a splendid position simultaneously by a demonstration on their frontal position drawing a feeble fire from their Nordenfelts and rifles. The British naval guns and howitzers shelled the trenches with excellent effect and many Boers were observed bolting. The British artillery completely silenced the Boer fire and at nightfall the British infantry occupied an excellent position."

OPINION OF THE TIMES.

London, Jan. 20.—The Times says:

Though we have no news of a decisive engagement between the Tugela and Ladysmith, the progress of the British troops appears to be unchecked. The relief of Ladysmith cannot be effected unless the troops which crossed the Tugela are able to push the enemy back or turn their right flank. Though little is heard of what Generals Roberts and Kitchener are doing at Cape Town, we may be sure that systematic preparations are being made for the campaign which will begin after the fate of Ladysmith is decided. It is known that Roberts and Kitchener are not the men to make light of the service of the colonists who are ready to act as mounted infantry and scouting horsemen. It is thought that the appointment of Col. Brabant as a brigadier foreshadows the organizating of a colonial division, but at the same time the need of further reinforcements of regular troops is not lost sight of, and it is not officially announced, no doubt the reference to the representation of Gen, Roberts, that the eighth division will be immediately mobilized.

Speeding and Volunteering.

A special service was held in St. Paul's cathedral last evening at which plan of General Buller however much correspondents differ as to the details of the British and Boer positions. It is certain that the flank of the Boers defending the line of the Tugela has been turned, for they have been compelled to evacuate Colenso and fall back over the river, a tacit admission on their part that Colenso is no longer of importance and that its defenders may at any moment be taken in the rear and cut off. No better evidence of the success of the British plans could be desired.

It is said that the Boers, having but one line of defence, are busily engaged in entrenching themselves in another position to the north and west. This position probably covers the road leading from Acton Holmes to Ladysmith with its right and the road from Colenso to Ladysmith with its left. The entrenchments along the Tugela, though they appear to be occupied by the enemy, are apparently only being held for a time in order to allow of concentration and entrenchment elsewhere. This being accomplished the full extent of the flanking movement will be seen and the British will attack to find that the enemy's line is deserted for the more secure one in the rear. The LORD DUNDONALD.

Who is in command of one of Gen. Buller's columns advancing for the relief of Ladysmith.

890 city of London volunteers —the second contingent to attend such a service were present.

Lord Mayor Newton and the sherif's of London with the Duke of Connaught, ware also in attendance.

Despite a drizzling rain, the line of march from the barracks was crowded and the enthusiastic people filled the cathedral and stood cheering outside.

After a service of song, Dr. Mandelll Crieghton, Lord Bishop of London, addressed the troops and congratulated them upon rising above their ordinary selves to do their duty to their country and to God, with whom rested the issues of every endeavor.

Th evolunteers then repaired to Linoln's and Gray's inn's where they were banquetted. Tod-ay they take their departure.

THE WAR SITUATION.

London, Jan. 20.—The crisis is momentous. Upon the fate of the battle now imminent and which may even be in progress depends the course of history. The defeat of Buller north of the Tugela would be ten times more serious than his reverse to the south. Behind the British runs a swollen and swiftly flowing river, difficult to pass under most favorable conditions, but which might prove the ruin of a retreating army. Moreover the enemy is now at Bay. Buller's plan to attack the Boers by seizing the roads through the passes necessary to their subsistence and retreat is a bold one, for it gives the enemy no alternative but that of desperate men, and under these conditions great deeds have been done. There is no mistaking the presence of Dundonald's force near Acton Holmes—it has probably been replaced by infantry ere this—is so dangerous to the Boers that the retirement is almost a necessity.

The second line of the Boers just spoken of, which is only about twelve miles from Ladysmith is not their best one. The situation of the garrison is a peculiar one. Immediately outside the town is a small circle of hills held by the British. Beyond this circle at varying distances is a circle of higher hills in possession of the Boers, with entrenchments facing inward and outward, so that behind the line which is now being constructed opposite Buller's force is a third. This, however, is so near to Ladysmith that the Boers when making their final stand upon it, would be liable to an attack from General White. It is not likely, however, that they will persist in the investment after the line against which General Warren is acting, has been carried, but will quietly trek to the north if Buller does not in the meantime cut them off.

BOERS ARE RETREATING.

London, Jan. 20.—A special despatch from Cape Town dated Friday, Jan. 19, 1 p.m., says:—

"The Ladysmith relief force is steadily working northward. Heavy fighting occurred yesterday. The Boers are retreating."

BATTLE MAB BE GOING ON.

London, Jan. 20.—The Leader's military expert says to-day:—"There is every indication that a big fight for the western roads leading to Ladysmith, will take place to-day, though it may have begun yesterday. All the artillery of Generals Warren and Hildyard were not across the drifts yesterday morning and the ammunition train and most of the heavier guns were probably still south of the Tugela. These indications as well as General Warren's longer march point to the serious effort being made to-day."

BOERS KILL CAPTIVES.

Ottawa, Jan. 20.—Father O'Leary, the Roman Catholic chaplain with the first cotigent, has written already a series of interesting letters of the movements of the Canadians. In a letter dated Dec. 11, received here to-day, and written on the battlefield of Belmont, he gives a graphic description. He has this to say of the disaster to Gen. Methuen's column.

Someone Blundered.

"The wounded have been passing here since yesterdvy in carloads, and those to whom we have spoken agree that a mistake was made, costing the lives of 1,600 of the bravest men the British army could boast of. Some of the Black Watch to whom I spoke gave me some particulars which history may never record. They were ordered to storm the trenches, in formation of quarter column, a most comp prehensive move, when one considers the enemy they had to cotend with.

"As they reached the barb-wire impedments, a perfect hail of fire burst forth from every direction, even fro mthe river. They fell, huddled together like sheep. In the front rank of the Black Watch only 12 files remained standing, after the first discharge. Another fellow described the vain of bullets as if they were being pelted with rice. The Black Watch lost 376 dead and wounded. Among them five officers killed and wounded.

Wauchope's Last Words.

"Several state that when the error was discovered Colonel Wauchope called out, "Move out on the right, men. There has been a mistake, but it is not mine this time." Then he fell, riddled with bullets.

Boer Inhumanity.

Father O'Leary concludes as follows—"The boys know the Boers take no more prisoners. They proved that in the last battle. After takin from the British prisoners their rifles and ammunition belts they told them to go, as they had no place for them. Hardly were they forty yards away when they opened a deadly fire on them, and few were left to tell the tale. This has excited our boys to such a pitch that they will yield their lives before being taken. As no mercy can be expected, they shall show none.

"The weather is beautiful, though betimes hot, and nights cold. There is nothing to remind us that we are in mid-December, and that at home the friends are enjoying themselves sleighing, tobogganing, etc. What would we not give for just one whiff of a 'Noreaster,' Canada's bete noir. We would gladly send in exchange a minature simoon, and even throw in a cloud or two of locusts and have some to spare.

"I left off just now to attend the funeral of another of our boys, who died from tonsilitis. He was from the Lower Pro-Pvinces.

"Four prisoners were taken last night, and as they were caught signalling they will be treated as spies and possibly shot to-day."

LADYSMITH SAFE AT PRESENT.

London, Jan. 20.—Telegrams from the front indicate that the northward madch of the relief column moving towards Ladysmith is proceeding slowly. The authorities here seem satisfied that now that General Buller's forces are within sight of Ladysmith the besieged place is safe at present from serious attack. No news of real importance has been made public up to 2.30 o'clock this afternoon, though ews of a battle was momentarily expected.

Advices from Cape Town said Field Marshall Lord Roberts had appointed Lord Stanley, member of Parliament for South-east Lancashire, and a former lieutenant of the Grenadier Guards, to be press censor.

Prince Francis of Teck has gone to the front.

MORE ENGLISH VOLUNTEERS.

London, Jan. 20.—The departure to-day of the second detachment of the London volunteers for South Africa led to a repetition of the scenes of enthusiasm of last Saturday along the whole route from Wellington barracks to Nine Elms station. The Londoners commenced assembling before daybreak, headed by several bands, and the volunteers, numbering 780 men, left the barracks at 7.45 marching in fours. For a time the people contented themselves with cheering as the column advanced in good order until it reached Great George street, where the friends, wives and sweethearts of the men insisted in joining them and marching arm in arm. Thus in the midst of constantly increasing enthusiasm the volunteers finally reached the station at 9.30, where the Duke of Connaught, the Lord Mayor, the sheriffs and other military and civic dignitaries had assembled. The volunteers were rapidly entrained for Southampton and steamed away to the strains of "Auld Lang Syne" and "God Save the Queen."

Large crowds met the volunteers at Southampton and gave them a ringing send-off as they embarked on the transports Aristo, Kinfauns Castle and Gaul.

YEOMANRY TO BE TRAINED.

London, Jan. 20.—The Duke of Marlborough left this morning for South Africa, where he will command a portion of the yeomanry cavalry. It is said that the yeomanry will not be sent to the fighting lines until they have had a month or so of practical training.

GENERAL TUCKER ARRIVES.

New York, Jan. 20.—A Cape Town cable to the World announces the arrival of Major-General Charles Tucker from India to take command of a brigade under Lord Roberts. Though he has been stationed recently in the Madras district of India, he knows South Africa and the Boers intimately. He views the British situation hopefully.

QUARRELLED OVER THE WAR.

New York, Jan. 20.—John Adams is at Harlem hospital suffering from a bullet wound inflicted by Alberto Bento. The men quarrelled over the Transvaal war, Adams taking the English side and Bento upholding the Boers.

STEELE MAY COMMAND.

Can be Detached From Mounted Rifles to Take Charge of Strathcona Horse.

Ottawa, Jan. 20.—Captain Paul Weatherbee, chief engineer of the Militia Department has gone to New Orleas to inspect the steamship Milwaukee before the charter with the Elder, Dempster Company is closed. In order to avoid disease the vessel will not take on water at New Orleans. Each of the transports is to be supplied with vaccine lymph and all the men of the second contingent will be vocinated.

Dr. McEachern, chief veterinary officer, has been requested by Lord Strathcona to superintend the purchase of horses by the Strathcona Rifles. The details of the organization of this body will be announced in a few days.

It is freely stated that Col. Steele will be detached fro mthe mounted rifles and be given command of the Strathcona Rifles.

Halifax, Jan. 20.—Rev. W. J. Cox, the Church of England chaplain, will sail by the Laurentian this afternoon Rev. Father Sinnett, the Roman Catholic chaplain, will sail by the Pomeranian, and Rev. W. G. Lane, the Methodist, will sail by the Milwaukee.

Inspection will take place at 10.30 o'clock this morning, and the Laurentian is under orders to sail at 2 o'clock in the afternoon with Batteries "D" and "E."

G. W. STEEVENS DEAD.

Famous War Correspondent Succumbs to Fever at Ladysmith

Ladysmith, Jan. 16, via Spearman's Camp.—Mr. Geo. Warrington Steevens correspondent of the Londou Daily Mail, died yesterday of enteric fever, and was buried at midnight.

George Warrington Steevens was the most brilliant of the war correspondents of present-day campaigns. He was but 30 years of age, having been born in December, 1869. He was educated in London and in Balliol College, Oxford, and is a B.A. Oxon. After completing his college course in 1893 he joined the editorial staff of the Pall Mall Gazette, and quickly made a reputation as a clever writer on naval subjects. In 1897 he transferred his services to the London Daily Mail. Mr. Steevens' most famous campaigns were those with the Turks in their invasion of Greece in 1897, and with Kitchener to Khartoum in 1898 Concerned both of these he published books which have become the standard accounts of the campaigns. During a visit to India in plague time. Mr. Steevens made a number of admirable sketches of Hindoo life. He had been shut up in Ladysmith since the investment of the town by the Boers on November 2nd.

WESTERN MEN ACCEPTED.

The British Columbia Corps for Africa Will Be Taken.

Ottawa, Jan. 20.—The Department of Militia is at present in communication with the Elder-Dempster Steamship Co., in regard to the steamer Montrose as a transport for the Strathcona contingent. The Numidian, of the Allan Line, is said to be too small to hold the necessary number of men and horses, while the Montrose is a very much larger boat an dcould easily accommodate them.

Something also must b edone with the Britiish Columbian contingent. The Province has offered to send one hundred men, outfitted and equipped and cost paid as far as Halifax.

The Dominion has accepted this offer byt has not yet been able to arrange for a transport. If the accommodation cannot be had on the Milwaukee, it is possible that th eBritish Columbia men will b esent by the Montrose. It is not likely that Lord Strathcona would object.

Morning Times
PETERBOROUGH, JANUARY 19, 1900

REMOUNTS FROM CANADA.

An exchange says —

"It is this question of transport that is going to be the gravest which the British will have to face, and that may be decisive of the campaign; particularly as this and next month are the two worst in the season for the horse sickness."

The Dominion Government should make an offer to the British War Office of two thousand horses fit for service as remounts, and, if acceptable, send them without delay.

LORD STRATHCONA'S NOBLE DEED.

Canada is profoundly impressing the British public. The Times says "How immense is the reserve strength on which England in a just cause can draw, is strikingly relieved in Lord Strathcona's munificent offer. It comes from one who is at once a Canadian citizen and a British peer." It adds—"There are not many countries in the world where individual citizens are found able and ready to prove their patriotism on so splendid a scale. Such an offering to the common cause of the empire would have been welcome from any quarter, but it is doubly welcome from the representative of the greatest self-governing colony."

THE ELIXIR OF LIFE.

The announcement in our London despatch a few days ago of the discovery of an elixir of life by Prof. Metchnikoff of Paris would, if true, be a remarkable Christmas gift by science to all humanity. Mankind has become a little incredulous as to discoveries of this nature, inasmuch as each century has produced similar elixirs, and three generations have still gone the way of their fathers in each hundred years. Eternal youth and eternal life—how many would not barter their souls for their possession! The old sailor that sought the fountain over unknown seas, the woman with the frosts just whitening her temples; the man who feels his grasp upon the coupon scissors growing feeble—all cling to youth and life with a passionate longing and relinquish them with poignant regret.

A few years ago the Brown-Sequard Elixir was vaunted as a specific against old age, but the aged and infirm are with us yet. No one speaks of it now.

The medical profession has within the limits of this century given us the means of notably lengthening the average of human life, but principally through great diminution in the mortality of children. Numerous remedies, too much neglected, may be looked upon, taken together, as a species of life elixir, such as life in the open air, the daily bath, careful diet, moderation in work and food and drink, and exercise. But old age still crowds out youth, only to succumb itself soon after. However, it is not for any one to say that an elixir to prolong life may not some day be found. Science has presented to the world some very startling facts and phenomena of recent years, so that it has come to be a sort of aphorism with some scientific men that if a thing is improbable it is all the more likely to be true! Certain agents may one day be discovered which will enable the physician to stimulate the cells of various tissues, brain, nerve, muscle, kidney, blood, and the like, to renewed activity when they seem about to degenerate and die. The physician can do this for brief periods already; a permanent form of stimulation is quite within the bounds of possibility.

Whether Prof. Metchnikoff has obtained any agent so valuable or far-reaching as apparently it is promised, is a question not easily decided when the limited data given us, and we must wait the full and final details as reported and proved by the magician himself, before we can pass upon the value of the Christmas gift to humanity just heralded.

Father Gosselin, of La Semaine Religieuse, is, of course, a little goose.

The African War.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—On this the beginning of the last year of the century the eyes of the whole world are turned to the two little South African republics in their wonderful stand against the British Empire—the greatest in the world.

We are assured that "a great event is impending" this week. That is construed to mean that Gen. Redvers Buller is once more to attempt the relief of Ladysmith, and once more test the power and prestige of the British arms. It may safely be assumed that relief must come to Gen. White in the next month or he will be compelled to capitulate, which would be a greater blow to British pride and British prestige that was the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown in 1781.

Undoubtedly the greatest strategic blunder of the campaign was Gen. White's attempt to hold Ladysmith. No place could be worse situated for defance, for it is in a valley commanded on all sides by ranges of hills. Moreover, after the fights at Glencoe and Elandslaagte it became of no strategic value, for while the railroad from Durban via Laing's Nek is the shortest route from the sea to the capital of the Transvaal, it is also the most defensible approach. The memories of Laing's Nek and Majuba Hill should have taught the British that this was not their true route to Pretoria, though it is probable that it was the humiliating smart of the memory of Majuba Hill that decided the authorities to attempt this route.

There can be no doubt that the true line of advance toward Pretoria was through the comparatively open country from Colesburg and Burgersdorp to Springfontein, in the southwest of the Orange State, and thence along the line of the railroad to Bloomfontein, the capital of that State, and thence to Kroonstad and finally to Pretoria.

Had Gen. White, after Elandslaagte, fallen back behind the Tugela at Colenso, or, better yet, behind the Mooi at Weston, and taken up a strictly defensive attitude, he would have saved the disaster of Nicholson's Nek and the loss of 2,500 men around Ladysmith, and so spared one half his column to the centre, for the advance on Bloomfontein.

It was the critical condition of Gen. White at Ladysmith that compelled Gen. Buller to abandon his original plan of campaign for an advance via Colesburg and Burgersdrop on Springfontein, as well as divert forces from Methuen, absolutely necessary to his success in relieving Kimberley. It would seem obvious that sound strategy would have indicated the hold of Lord Methuen at Orange River, on the strict defensive, and the sending of all his troops but one division from De Aar to Naauw Poort, to unite with French and Gatacre in the advance on the Orange Free State capital.

The advance in force on Bloomfontein via Colesburg and Springfontein would have relieved Kimberley and permitted a junction of Lord Methuen's force with the centre column, which, with reinforcements from White and Methuen, should have numbered not less than 50,000 men and, approximately, fifty or sixty guns. But for the attempt to hold Ladysmith, this central column would have embraced all of Gen. Buller's present force, about 20,000; one-half of White's force before his severe loss, say 6,000; the whole of French's and Gatacre's commands, not less than 12,000, and one-half of Methuen's force, not less than 8,000. This would make an effective army of about 50,000 men, after providing for holding bases and lines of supply. With Gen. White and nearly ten thousand men cooped up in Ladysmith, the hand of Gen. Buller, however, was forced and he was compelled to abandon his plan of campaign until Gen. White could be relieved.

Gen. Buller has already wasted some 1,200 men and eleven guns in one ineffectual front attack, and the Boers are stronger in position, in men and in guns now than in the battle of Colenso. We must conclude, therefore, that Gen. Buller has decided upon some other plan, which means a turning movement either above or below Colenso. This must imply more guns and better to replace those lost, wagon transportation to accompany the army, and pontoons for crossing the Tugela river. If he can force the Boers to leave their intrenchments along the Tugela, and fight upon an equal footing, he may possibly succeed. But he may find it is a long way from Colenso to Ladysmith. A serious defeat would be a disaster whose consequences are difficult to compute or measure. The New Year does not open auspicously for British prestige.

Jimmy and the Baby.

Jimmy's mother kept cows and sold milk. Jimmy himself had nothing to do with the cows, though sometimes he used to carry the milk pail to his mother's customers. The customers all liked Jimmy, with his round, freckled face and bashful grin, and they used to ask him how business was, for, although Jimmy was only 13 years old, he had a business. He made coffins—baby coffins—and sold them to the undertaker. They were nice pine coffins, with all the edges carefully joined. Jimmy received 50 cents for each one.

One day Jimmy stopped at the house of one of his mother's customers to leave some milk. A little boy met him at the door.

"We've got a new baby!" said the little boy. "Would you like to see it?"

Jimmy nodded. The little boy's aunt laughingly led Jimmy to the cradle where the new baby was. Jimmy gazed at the infant for some time, speechless with admiration or some such emotion.

"What do you think of it, Jimmy?" asked the aunt.

Jimmy grinned.

"I guess I'll have to make a nice little coffin when I go home," he said.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Boers Great Pioneers.

The Boer is the ideal pioneer. From the days of the great trek, in 1837, and even before that he opened up countries hitherto unexplored by a white man. A great deal of fuss has been made of mighty travelers, English and foreign, who have traversed Africa, to the vast pecuniary benefit of their publishers and with no small meed of fame to themselves, but there was scarcely one of the old voortrekkers and hunters of the forties and fifties who did not accomplish feats of endurance, pluck and lengthy travel which were ten times as trying.—London Mail.

Steel Combs.

A man who saw in a sidewalk showcase some steel combs and who wondered what steel combs could be used for found upon inquiry that they were used by furriers in combing furs. There was one of these combs that looked much like a comb of the ordinary kind, coarse toothed for half its length and finer toothed the other half. And then there was one comb that had teeth for half its length, the solid end serving as a handle.

There are other steel combs that are used for a similar purpose, as steel combs made to comb dogs with. The dog comb looks somewhat like the fine toothed comb in its general shape, but it is larger, toothed on one side only and coarser toothed than the so called fine comb. The untoothed side combs of this sort are used on various kinds of dogs, including, for instance, long haired dogs like the French poodle.—New York Sun.

LAYING UP A COMPETENCE.

Something That Practically Any Man Can Do Through Self Denial.

"There are some men of genius," said Mr. Nippingly, "who accumulate great fortunes by great strokes, but by far the greater number of fortunes, including those of moderate dimensions, and these form the great majority of all, are made by the very simple process of living within one's income and investing the surplus with more or less wisdom, but always where it will be safe.

"The older I grow the more amazed I am that more people don't lay up a competence for themselves, as most anybody can do, by beginning early in life to live within their income and sticking to that course faithfully. Did I do this myself? No. Am I, however, having learned the wisdom of this course, now making a beginning? I am obliged to say 'No.' I am still spending all I get and laying by nothing.

"There are some lessons that we all easily acquire, but never turn to our own advantage. One of these is of the benefits that arise from the exercise of self denial. We get from this at once the direct benefit of what we save, and self denial nourishes, strengthens and broadens the will and enables a man constantly to do and to earn more and more.

"There's simply nothing like self denial. It is the key to every one of life's treasures, and everybody has one of those golden keys in his possession, eager to help him and waiting only for him to bring it in use."—New York Sun.

An Amazed Woman.

A woman who had an Arabic glass cup of the fourteenth century and did not know its value took it to the British museum. After due consideration the expert, to her surprise, said that, though the museum did not want it, it might be worth $2,000. The woman shuddered, because she had been carrying in a crowded London omnibus a bit of glass worth so much money and it had miraculously escaped smashing.

Finally, wanting money more than Arabian glass, she sent the object to an auctioneer's. Fancy her amazement when, starting at $2,500, the Arabic cup went by leaps and bounds and was finally knocked down for the nice sum of $6,500.

Actually the Arabic cup was worth very much less, but it so happened that there were two rivals at the auction, who bid against each other.—China, Glass and Lamps.

Family Peacemakers.

More family troubles are adjusted by the magistrates in this city than the average person would willingly believe. There is hardly a day passes that every member of the minor judiciary is not called upon by a determined husband or wife, usually the latter, to issue a warrant. Nine cases out of ten the applicant is considerably excited and is eager to invoke the aid of the law in settling some trifling controversy. By calm argument and assurances the visitor can usually be persuaded to give the offender of her or his peace and happiness another chance, and a home is perhaps saved from being broken up.—Philadelphia Call.

Aggravating the Offense.

"You are charged, young man," the magistrate said, not unkindly, "with scaring the complaining witness nearly out of his senses by putting him through some mock ceremony of initiation. I can make allowance for exuberance of spirits among college students, but sometimes this exuberance is carried too far."

"It was this way, your honor," exclaimed the youth who appeared to be the spokesman—"we were out for a little lark, and we caught a jay."

"The fine will be $2 and costs each," said his honor, his face hardening.—Chicago Tribune.

Some Ready Made Law.

Bourke Cockran studied law under Judge Theodore L. Dwight. One day the professor asked a question which seemed easy, but was really difficult. With his magnificent voice Cockran answered the best he could, adding as a saving clause, "Such, I take it, is the common law."

The good old doctor gleamed benignantly through his spectacles. "That would be all right, sir, if you had made it uncommon law."—Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.

To make paper fireproof nothing more is necessary than to saturate the paper in a strong solution of alum water, and when thoroughly dry it will resist the action of flame.

The inhabitants of Cochin China much prefer rotten eggs to fresh ones.

Mr. R. P. Gough, of Toronto, has been in town for the past few days.

CHANCE FOR COL. HUGHES

Likely to be Given a Command With the Strathcona Rifles

Ottawa, Jan. 19.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier has received a long ciper cablegram from Lord Strathcona giving the High Commissioner's views in respect of the organization of the Strathcona force. It gave a complete outline of the basis upon which the force is to be raised. The first Minister sent Lieut.-Col. Pinault, Deputy Minister of Militia, and instructed him to take immediate steps towards recruiting the three squadrons of 125 men apiece, who with the necessary staff will form Lord Strathcona's contribution to the Imperial forces. The same machinery that was used in organizing the western battalion of the Canadian Mounted Rifles will be used in getting the Strathcona Horse together, that is, the officers of the mounted police will perform the major portion of the duty. Recruiting stations will also be opened in British Columbia at points to be designated by the Militia Department. In the case of the Strathcona Horse, as in that of the mounted civilian section the preference will be given to men who can supply their own horses. The animals will be purchased at a valuation by the same boards as bought the mounts for the mounted rifles.

Lord Strathcona will have a great deal to say regarding the selection of the officers. All he intends to do, however, is to recommend certain officers who already possess military experience. Officers to serve in the Strathcona Horse continue to pour into the militia department.

Col. Hughes, now at Cape Town, without military employment, is known to be an intimate friend of the High Commissioner, and is generally thought that the colonel will be remembered when the officers are being appointed for the Strathcona Horse.

Provincial Boundary Line

Ottawa, Jan. 19.—The commissioners for the delimation of the provincial boundary lines about the head of Lynn Canal. Messrs. O. H. Tittmann, of Washington, W. F. King, Dominion Astronommer, held their first meeting yesterday afternoon at Mr. King's office. They will meet again to-day to discuss their plans of operations for marking their lines on the ground during the coming session.

A Race With the Sun.

The London Daily Mail says if an aerial machine were capable of traveling at any rate up to 1,000 miles an hour a traveler in it, starting westward from London at a speed of 600 miles an hour, would arrest the progress of time. If he started at 10 a. m., it would always be to him 10 a. m. Should he find his unending day monotonous, he could reverse his direction and get a quick succession of short days and nights of some six hours' duration, but he could regulate the length by the speed of his machine. Suppose he traveled from London one night at 10 o'clock westward at a speed of 1,000 miles per hour. He would soon experience the sensation of seeing the sun rising in the west where it had set a short time before.

"The young man who gets cheated," said the corn fed philosopher, "thinks the other fellow wonderfully smart, but the elderly person who goes up against it admits himself to be a fool."—Indianapolis Journal.

Can Sell Liquor on Cars.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 19.—The Assembly Excise Committee yesterday reported favorably Assemblyman Apgar's bill, which amends the Raines law so that a foreign corporation operatig parlor or sleeping cars in this state may obtain liquor licenses. This will enable the Pullman Car Company, which has absorbed the Wagner Company, to sell liquor on its cars.

A PICKPOCKET'S RUSE.

The Trick by Which He Once Got a Woman's Purse.

Jack Piggott, the noted pickpocket, used to tell a funny story about the difficulty he had in picking the pocket of a fashionably dressed woman who was looking in at the window of Shreve's jewelry store. It illustrates the hardships that the light fingered gentry are forced to endure in the pursuit of their profession and when first related was considered amusing not only by Piggott, but by the many to whom he confided his experience.

It was a cold winter evening, and the lady on whose purse Piggott had designs stood looking at the holiday finery so temptingly displayed. Piggott said that he tried all the arts known to his craft for the extraction of the wallet, but all in vain, until, as a last resort, he fished a toothpick from his pocket and, reaching around, tickled the lady's ear. Instinctively she raised her hand to brush away the invading insect or whatever it might be and in so doing let go of her pocketbook that she was carrying in the pocket of her coat.

It was only an instant, but it was long enough for the expert pickpocket to get in his work, and when she put her hand back her money was gone, and in the crowd around her she could not identify the pale faced, fashionably dressed young man at her side as the person who had robbed her, and if she had accused him there would have been no proof against him, as the swag was at once passed to a pal who stood ready to receive it and run. Piggott was not even arrested for that crime, and the lady's ludicrous outcries furnished material for mirth long after.—San Francisco Bulletin.

Queer Cards of Shrewd Lawyers.

Not all men of the legal profession are content with the severe inscription on their cards to which etiquette and custom usually confine them. An Ohio lawyer who makes a specialty of collections calls attention to this fact by a novel device printed on his cards and letter heads. On a great red splotch intended to represent a drop of blood are the words, "Claims collected in cold blood," the capital "C" for the three first letters of those words being of sufficient size to encircle the other words.

In Maryville, Mo., a lawyer presents his portrait on his card, with the suggestive motto: "He that is not with you is against you. See me early."

A Scotch Scheme.

The following appears in a Glasgow paper. It would be interesting to know whether it has led to business. If so, the supply of grand pianos in Scotland must be considerably in excess of the demand.

"Lady having large drawin room would gladly store grand plano in return for use; references given."—London Truth.

A Limit on Inheritances

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 18.—In opening the session of the State Bar Association today President Logan made an address on "The Limitations of Inheritances," in which he advocated a $10,000,000 statutory limitation on inheritances and gave as his reasons for advocating it the following—

"1. There is at the present day no good purpose to be served by giving a man power to transmit more than $10000,000.

"2. The great power which great wealth cannot be intrusted as safely to those who inherit the wealth as those who acquire it by their own exertions.

"3. No vested right would be infringed and no injustice done to any one by the proposed legislation."

THE FOE OF OLD AGE.

PROF. METSCHNIKOFF AND THE FOUNTAIN OF YOUTH.

The Secret of Life Consists in a Knowledge of the Cells Which Compose The Human Body—Instances of Long Life.

The scientific world is now interested in the experiments and discoveries of Prof. Metschnikoff, the world's greatest bacteriologist. The modest statements which he has given out lead to the belief that he is on the way to solve the problem of prolonging human life. For ages physicians and philosophers have contended that the age of man should be greater than three score years and ten. According to the law of Floureous, warm blood animals live just five times the period necessary for their long bones to complete ossification. This period applied to man makes his age limit 100 years, which is believed to be correct, unless accident occurs to prevents it.

The Statements and Theories.

of Prof. Metschnikoff are not based on idle dreams, hopes or prophecies, but upon years of careful experimenting which has rendered discoveries that are accepted by the scientific world and has placed the discoverer in the front rank of scientists. He has proven that all life forms are groupings of simple cells, and that each class of cells performs a distinct office. He discovered that the office of certain of these cells was to devour other cells that threatened the health of the human organism. They are the "policemen" of the body. Every day people inhale thousands of disease germs but if the blood is in healthy condition the devouring cells or "policemen of the body" pounce upon and destroy them. This is why many people go through a period of epidemic of pestilence unaffected, while others suffer lingering sickness and often death. Carrying his researches farther, the professor found that the stronger cells of the body preyed upon the weaker ones, thereby causing an inharmonious action of the organs. This produces a gradual decline in the organs and faculties, what is called "old age" becomes manifest, and death soon follows. The professor concluded that if the weaker cells could be invigorated and strengthened, so as to repel the attack of the stronger cells or not to get into condition to invite attack, that harmony in the workings of the human organs would be maintained and that life and vigor would be greatly prlonged. With this end in view he began a series of experiments by transposing the blood of rabbits and guinea pigs, and he found that he could regulate the number and the vitality of the different kinds of cells that made up the blood which in turn creates the body.

The Life Prolonging Serum.

The serum which Prof. Metchnikoff has evolved and will more perfectly evolve, from his experiments and discoveries will be injected into the systems of human beings who begin to show the effects of the ravages of time This serum will strengthen the failing cells and the life and vigor of the human body will be renewed. To what length these renewals can be carried and how long the functions of the human body can be kept working in harmony is a matter of conjecture, and a question that the professor does not discuss in any respect. He makes no pretensions to having discovered the secret of continual youth, and is working only to aid in the discovery of means to prolong human life to the extent which its creator seems to have intended, and to make it as free from disease and pain as possible while it continues.

Long Lives.

From a scientific point of view the long lives of the patriarchs of the human family are seriously believed to have been incorrectly calculated according to our standard of reckoning years. Methuselah might have lived 969 years as time in those day was reckoned, but scientists cannot believe that a year then was as long in duration as it is now. In more recent times—since the begging of the Christian era—there are numerous instances of long lives. In the beginning of the 17th century Gotour McCraim celebrated 180 Christmases at his home on the island of Jara, in the Hebrides. In 1014, Johannes de Temporitus died at the age of 361. In 1620 the Countess of Desmond died in England at the age of 146.

Her death was caused by falling from a cherry tree which she had climbed, and which shows that she must still have been very active. Thomas Parr died near Shrewsbury, England, in the early part of the 17th century in his 153rd year, and was not married until he was 80 years old. It is said that he ate wholesome food regularly and was a great sleeper. Henry Jenkins, of Yorkshire, England, completed his 169th year. He had always been a hard working man and hardly knew what sickness was. There are a few others who lived beyond 125 years and hundreds have passed the century mark.

Span of Life Lengthening.

The tables of the great life insurance companies of the present day prove conclusively that the span of human life is lengthening. A person can insure his life to-day on terms far more reasonable than his father could have secured. In the middle of the present century the average of life was a little more than 33 years. Now it is fully 38 years. Then the average death rate was 26 for every 1,000 inhabitants; now it is about 21. The statistics of all civilized countries in which medicine is pursued as a science and in which hygiene has been promoted show this general prolongation of human life.

The Center of Population.

"Census experts estimate," says the Chicago Post, "that the center of population will be found next year to be in Indiana, close to the Illinois line, at a point not far removed from the town of Vincennes. The last census showed the population center to be between Columbus, Ind., and Cincinnati. The increase in the population of Georgia, Texas, the Indian Territory, Oklahoma, New Mexico and Arizona during the last ten years has been sufficient, it is thought, to offset any increase in the northwest and to possibly pull the center somewhat to the south of the 1890 parallel. The wealth center is thought to be in the neighborhood of Sandusky, O."

Animal Criminals.

A writer in Forest and Stream says that the criminal tendency is manifested to a greater or less extent by all the lower animals, and he has compiled a list of 18 crimes which are commonly committed by birds, beasts or reptiles. The indictment includes murder, parricide, fratricide, suicide, theft, kidnaping, highway robbery, polygamy and drunkenness.

Age is not to be feared. The older a good and healthy person grows the greater becomes his capacity to enjoy the deeper, sweeter and more noble kinds of happiness which the world affords.

Our sentiments, our thoughts, our words lose rectitude on entering certain minds, as sticks plunged into the water look bent.

British Cabinet United

London, Jan. 19.—Sir Mtthew White-Ridley, the Home Secretary, speaking at Blackpool last evening, said—"On behalf of my colleagues and myself, I would say that we all share the full responsibility, for the Cabinet, like the nation, has been united from the beginning. There is no doubt that, when the proper time comes, for the Cabinet to justify its course, the justification will be sufficiently ample.

"What gives me the most pleasure is the determination of the country, no less than the Government, that, having a quarrel forced upon us, we must bring it to a successful issue.

"It is not the business of the press to criticize the actions of our gallant generals in the field. There is none of them who does not possess the full confidence of the country and the Government."

Fired at General Otis

Chicago, Jan. 19.—A special from Victoria, B.C., says: J. P. Molera, who has arrived from Manila, tells of an attempt on the life of General Otis. He said that General Otis once appeared on the firing line when a shot from the rifle of one of the soldiers whizzed uncomfortably close to his head. As to who fired the shot no clue was discovered.

Populists Divided on Bryan

Lincoln, Neb., Jan. 18.—The fight between the Bryan members of the National Populist Executive Committee and the members who favor a straight populist nominee is waxing furious. The committee meets next month and will then set a time for the national convention. Bryan has advised that the convention be held one month later than the Democratic convention, but the element opposed to him desire an earlier convention. Senator Allen has sent a letter to his populist friends, advising them to vote for Kansas City as the place for the convention.

HIGH EXPLOSIVES.

Making Them Is a Very Dangerous Trade—Perils That Beset the Manufacture of Nitroglycerine.

Nitroglycerin and its peculiarities are little known, even in localities where it is made. People generally give it a wide berth, and even a less number know how it is manufactured. Probably in no place in the United States is there such a great amount of the explosive used as in the Indiana oilfields, says The Philadelphia Press. Indiana has four nitroglycerin factories, and they are seldom visited by curious people.

The explosive is made from a composition of acids and glycerin. It is generally pale yellow in color, and quite colorless when pure. It is odorless, and has a sweet, pungent, aromatic flavor. If touched by one's tongue, or even brought into contact with the skin, it will produce a severe headache. A large tank, called an agitator, is where the fluid is mixed, and the mixture is composed of equal parts of nitric and sulphuric acids. Inside the tank are several paddles, like those of a churn, and it is here that the real danger exists. The paddles are put in operation and a steady stream of sweet glycerin is turned into a vat until 250 pounds are thoroughly mixed with the 1,500 pounds of acid. The chemicals coming in contact produce an intense heat, and in order to obviate the danger cold water is run through pipes encircling and running through the vat. At 85 degrees F. a red vapor, almost like fire, arises. If cutting off the supply of glycerin in the agitator does not lower the temperature, it is time to say farewell. Before 90 degrees are reached nothing but atoms of the structure and its contents are left.

Colonel William A. Meyers, of Bolivar, N.Y., was the man who made and exploded the first round of nitroglycerin in an oil well. He built the first factory in the United States, near Titusville, Pa., in 1868. Up to that time powder had been used to torpedo oil wells. It was then that an explosive that could be discharged under water was found in nitroglycerin. Colonel Myers' father was a Philadelphia chemist and taught his son how to make it.

The first well torpedoed was on Colonel Mills' lease, near Titusville, and the charge consisted of on,y two and the charge consisted of only two pounds. Oil was worth $9 a barrel then, and a torpedo that would double the production of a well was worth almost what the maker chose to ask for it. Colonel Myers built 12 different factories in different parts of the oil regions from 1868 to 1885, when he retired from the business. Only one of the original factories stands intact to-day. Myers made several fortunes and spent his money like a prince, but, fortunately for him, he still has a snug sum laid by.

DISAGREEABLE TRAITS.

Sometimes They Impair the Usefulness of Otherwise Good Men.

Squire Granby was dead. The village people had gathered in the church to hear his funeral sermon, says The Youth's Companion. The old doctor, with his nephew, John, who was down from the city, sat in a back pew.

The minister told what everyone there knew to be the traits of the dead man. A faithful believer in Christ, a man of high integrity, in whose justice and honesty the whole community trusted, liberal to the poor, walking blameless under every moral law.

"Was all that true?" said John, as he and the doctor walked home.

"Every word of it."

"And yet," said the young man, "I got the impression the other day at the funeral that neither his neighbors nor his family felt his death very deeply. Indeed, I fancied I saw a look of relief on their faces."

The doctor was silent for a moment. "You are too shrewd an observer, Jack," he said. "The squire loved to manage. He was a busy, energetic man, and he thought it his duty to lash every man and woman who was not as busy and energetic as himself. His tongue was like a goad. He was a man, too, who never praised or encouraged anybody. His wife and children probably never heard a word of commendation from him in their lives, strive as they might.

"Then he complained incessantly of the weather, of his food, of the state of the church and the country; of all that his family did or did not do. When he came into the room you felt that a chilly fog had closed in upon you.

"And yet, in spite of these faults, the squire was faithful in his heart to his friends and to God. He probably never was conscious of these disagreeable traits, but they were so noticeable that his neighbors, and even his children and his wife, could not help a certain feeling of relief when he was gone."

"I wonder," said Jack, "if he knew, when he wakened in that other life, how depressing and unpleasant a Christian he had been in this?"

"And I wonder," said the doctor, "if there is no way for you and me to find out our petty faults—our disagreeable personal traits—in time to mend them here in this life?"

Defence not Defiance.

Stockholm, Jan. 19.—King Oscar, in the speech from the throne at the opening of the Riksdag yesterday, referred to his love of peace, to which he had testified, he declared, by appointing delegates to the peace conference at The Hague. His Majesty, however, went on to say: "But even if a satisfactory solution of the arbitration question should be reached, no coun- would be absolved from the duty of taking defensive measures; nor will the existence of an arbitration tribunal release any country from the obligation imposed upon the maintenance of neutrality."

GLIMPSES OF SOUTH AFRICA.

n Peace and in War—A Splendid Lot of Views

Southern Africa, that enormous ex- anse of tropically verdant territory ex- nding from the Lambesi River to the ape of Good Hope, has for a century or ore lain dormant to the eyes of the civ- ized world. Only within the past two ecades has public attention been drawn the wonderful natural resources and ineral wealth of this wild and rugged nd, and yet, within this period, mar- lous creation of brilliant modern cities ave supplanted the desert lands and aunts of savage tribes. The steady arch of civilization, the all-pervading mbition to accumulate the wealth of iamonds and gold that lay beneath the rust of this benighted land, each has orne its part in the metamorphosis and eralded to the world the wonderful poss- ibilities of that "Dark Continent" for the nergy and enterprise that the 20th cen- ury will bring to light.

n no other country of the world has rogress been marked with such adver- ity and strife as Africa. From the time e early Dutch settlers landed in the ape Colony up to the present, there has isted almost a constant state of war- are; the natives disputing the advance the Dutch and they in turn resenting e inroads of civilization. In spite of this, strenuous were the efforts of the col- nists in their determination to turn to ccount the beauties and resources of the nd of their adoption, that today they njoy the fruits of their successes in a aradise of tropical vegetation, a salub- ous climate and surrounded by the ighest advantages of intellectuality and uxuries of civilization.

Cape Town is the metropolis and seat of overnment of the Cape Colony. Its his- orical past and present is firmly linked the traditions of the early Dutch and e Huguenots. True, the old forts and uildings of distinctly Dutch architecture ill remain, but magnificent edifices of e most modern type, beautiful bot- nical gardens and the public improve- ents are evidences of the wonderful ad- ance of civilization.

Port Elizabeth is the Liverpool of South frica. It is a great commercial center, oupled with some of the largest ship- ing interests in the world; a city of the ost modern type, essentially English in haracter, and possessing some of the rgest as well as the most architectur- lly magnificent buildings and public in- titutions in South Africa.

Natal is the beautiful, tropical Garden olony. Its luxurious vegetation and lorious climate, its wide avenue of trees nd fine buildings, the native Zulu ser- ants and the picturesque costumes of e Orientals, lend an ear of peace and ranquility, while the marks of civilizat- on and progress are in evidence at every urn.

Johannesburg, the Golden, with its fine rchitectural creations, public institutions nd parks, possesses many attractions that asily place it as the foremost city of outh Africa. Its great industry, min- g, the apparently inexhaustible veins of old-bearing quartz, in which upwards f seven hundred millions of dollars are nvested, have been the attraction for the housands and thousands of "Uitlanders," hose "grievances" are substantially the ause for the cruel war between Briton nd Boer, the battles of which have been anked as the "bloodiest of the century."

So great has been the interest mani- ested in South Africa and the progress f the war, and so eager the thirst for nformation, coupled with the demand for Pictorial History incident to the cenes of warfare, that the publicat- on of "Glimpses of South Africa" has een undertaken upon a scale of gran- eur, fidelity and completeness never efore though of, involving as it has n expense of extraordinary mag- itude. In order that the work might e absolutely reliable and thorough in s character, the publishers have con- racted for its authorship with Mr. Wymble Flemming, an Afrikander, whose authority upon South African matters is world-widely acknowledged. This gentleman,—born in the Cape Col- ny, having travelled over nearly ev- ry inch of the country south of the Zambesi River and lived in South Africa for nearly thirty years, with n extensive newspaper experience n Africa, England and America, the uthor of many interesting sketches of South African life and scenery, form- rly connected with the consular ser- ice at Port Elizabeth, whose com- ents on the war have been so fav- rably received by the American ress, and whose magnificent collect- on of photographs will appear in this ork,—will present South Africa as t is today, with views of everything f public interest, including most of he important scenes of battle and a raphically illustrated description of ach stage in the progress of the war.

This great work is published in ser- al form, and when complete will com- rise the most magnificent collection f photographic reproductions of the British-Boer war and South Africa obtainable in this country. Portfolios distributed by the Morning Times. For particulars see announcement on an- other page of this issue.

CHURCH AND CHURCHMEN.

The old "Second church" in Boston cel- ebrated its two hundred and fiftieth an- niversary recently.

The Universalist church reports 1,008 parishes and 47,471 families, an increase of about 1,200 families over last year.

The Rev. Dr. Edward Everett Hale will not occupy the pulpit of his church in Boston again until spring. Dr. Lyman Abbott will be the supply for the month of January.

Rabbi Emanuel Schreiber of Youngstown, O., who has been chosen rabbi of the Emanuel synagogue of Chicago, is 43 years old and a native of Austria. He is a doctor of the Royal college of Vienna and has written a number of religious works.

KITCHEN HELPS.

Glassware should be washed in warm water with a dash of soap powder, rinsed off in clear, warm water and polished with soft linen towels.

Hot or cold water cans or jugs should be turned upside down when not in use, so that they can drain and dry thoroughly. If left damp, they will rust inside and be spoiled, because rust eats holes in the metal.

For dishwashing kerosene oil has been found to form an emulsion with the grease, so that a few drops of kerosene dropped into cold or tepid water will keep knife handles from being injured, as in the case where soap and hot water are used.

DEADLY SNAKES.

Various Signs by Which Their Character May Be Recognized.

To distinguish between venomous and harmless snakes is easy in practice, but it is difficult to explain in words alone, as there is one external characteristic which distinguishes them. It is rather a peculiar, varying union of many separate marks that brands the dangerous reptile.

Generally speaking, all snakes may be divided into two great classes—those which have the head covered with numerous small scales and those which have it covered with large, regularly fitted plates. Leaving out the elipidæ and the poisonous sea snakes, with which the hunter will have nothing to do, all snakes with small head scales move about by night and those with the large plates on the head by day. This may be known by their eyes, for the first have vertical pupils like the cat's, while those of the latter are generally circular in form. The long, active day snake, gliding about from bush to bush or hurriedly taking refuge beneath some protruding rock or tree stump, is harmless. Even should he lie coiled in the sunshine he will flee from approaching danger. But a serpent nicely coiled in some secluded nook which instead of fleeing gathers himself closer together is most probably dangerous, particularly if he be more or less marked with a suggestion of irregular crossbars or whitish or dirty yellow and darker brown or blackish. This is the characteristic coloring of our most dangerous snakes, the rattler, the copperhead and the moccasin.

The following points embrace all the peculiarities of our American vipers, and the last two are especially noteworthy as the crowning proofs of venom:

(1) Moving about at dusk or by night, generally on the ground, and very rarely ascending trees or bushes. (2) Seldom flying in alarm, but rather coiling for defense. (3) Colors generally subdued in tint, with a semblance of irregular crossbars of lighter and darker shades. (4) Tail short, body stout, neck thin, head flat and very broad, especially behind. (5) Scales keeled—i. e., each scale has a ridge down the middle, which gives the skin a rough appearance like a rasp. (6) Head covered with small scales, sometimes larger over the eyes or nose. (7) Eyes with vertical pupils like a cat's. (8) Two pits or holes between the eyes and nose, suggesting four nostrils. (9) Two long, curved, perforated fangs in the upper jaw just in front of the eye, one on either side and so hinged that they lie backward, hidden from view in a membranous sheath, but erectile at will.

Some of the first seven peculiarities may be found in harmless snakes, but it is only in the vipers that they are united. —Outing.

How She "Guides" Them.

There is a jolly mother in Brooklyn who has several grown up sons boarding at home with her, and they declare she wants to "boss" them all the time, just as if they were children. She laughingly repudiates their charge and declares that she merely wishes to advise and guide them, but has long ago ceased to rule them. Here is an example of the way she "guides" them: At dinner the other night a big meat pie and a small roast duck were brought on together. The duck was intended for the father principally. The boys were death on duck, their mother well knew, but it would not make a mouthful apiece for them; so, addressing the boy who sat nearest her, she said, "Which will you have, Bobbie, duck or pie?" and at once began cutting the pie.

"Duck!" said Bobbie promptly.

"No, Bobbie," answered his mother cheerfully, "you can't have duck, dear. Take your choice, my son, take your choice, but you can't have duck!"—New York Tribune.

New Zealand Oddities.

The crow in New Zealand strikes as sweet a note as any heard in the woodland, says Henry D. Lloyd in The Atlantic. The robin has no song and no red breast; the native hen is the greatest of rat killers; there is a caterpillar which turns into a plant. These and some other productions of nature have done for New Zealand what the kangaroo and the ornithorhynchus have done for Australia—given it the suggestion of oddity and the marvelous. Rabbits and sweetbriers, introduced for pleasure, spread like wildfire, and it is an attraction to be duly advertised in the sale of land that it has been cleared of sweetbrier and fenced against rabbits, and then later the rabbit becomes a profit instead of a pest and is exported by millions to feed the English.

Amateur Photography.

Let me call attention to one of the most universally popular mistakes that have to do with photography—that of classing supposedly excellent work as professional and using the term amateur to convey the idea of immature productions and to excuse atrociously poor photographs. As a matter of fact nearly all the greatest work is being and has always been done by those who are following photography for the love of it, and not merely for financial reasons. As the name implies, an amateur is one who works for love, and viewed in this light the incorrectness of the popular classification is readily apparent.—Alfred Stieglitz in Scribner's.

Minnesota's First Book.

The Rev. S. W. Dickinson, an agent for the American Bible society, says that the first book printed in Minnesota was a Bible. It was printed in 1836, about 13 years before the first issue of a newspaper in St. Paul. The Bible was in the Ojibway language and was printed on the mission press at Lake Pokegama, Pine county, under the supervision of Rev. Mr. Ayer, who likewise had charge of the mission farm at that point.

Hopeless.

Burton—It's no use. I've tried to make up with Ferson, but it is evident that he is determined never to have anything more to do with me.

Cottie—But you don't go at him in the right way perhaps.

Burton—I praised his baby, and he didn't say a word in response.—Boston Transcript.

Why the Barber Forgot.

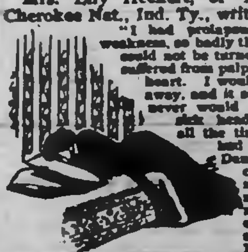
Barber—That's strange. You say you have been here before. I don't seem to remember your face.

Victim—Probably not. You see, it has all healed up now.—Melbourne Times.

Making Things Worse.

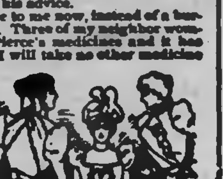
When a man gets nervous prostration, all his friends remind him how they warned him years ago.—Chicago Record.

Mrs. Lily Heckert, of Bartlesville, Cherokee Nat., Ind. Ty., writes:



"I had prolapsus, or female weakness, so badly that at times I could not be turned in bed. I suffered from palpitation of the heart. I would often faint away, and it seemed as if I never would recover; had sick headache nearly all the time, and also had St. Vitus's Dance. At the commencement of the monthly period the misery would be so great that I would be nearly crazy. I had doctored with five different physicians, but they did me no good. One of these doctors, of forty years' experience, said to me, 'I can't do you any good, so why not try Dr. R. V. Pierce's Favorite Prescription?' I wrote to Dr. R. V. Pierce and described my troubles. He wrote me a nice fatherly, kind letter in reply, and I followed his advice.

"Life is a pleasure to me now, instead of a burden as it was before. Three of my neighbor women have used Dr. Pierce's medicines and it has helped them all. I will take no other medicine but Dr. Pierce's and I recommend it to all my friends. The 'Favorite Prescription' helped me so much I always keep it in the house. I also have the People's Common Sense Medical Adviser and think it is a great book. I am willing to answer any letters of inquiry if stamps are enclosed for reply."



Her Neighbors.

Dr. R. V. Pierce is and for over thirty years has been, chief consulting physician at the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y. Thousands of women have written to him describing their symptoms, and, on following the advice he gives freely, have become well, strong and happy. Many sensitively modest women write to Dr. Pierce and so avoid the disagreeable questioning, examinations and local treatment so generally insisted upon by physicians. Dr. Pierce's medicines cure you in the privacy of your home, and Mrs. Heckert's case is only one of thousands that have been cured after the doctors failed.

He Set at Eight.

He was only a little boy, and this was his first diary. It had been given him as a birthday present and was bound in a red cover, with a highly colored picture adorning the front.

He meant to begin well and early, so he carefully wrote, "Got up at 7." Then, according to instructions, he took it to his governess for approval.

That highly proper lady frowned. "Got up!" she said; "got up! You careless boy! Does the sun get up? No, it rises."

Very neatly she scratched out the barbarous words and made him write, "Rose at 7." This settled Master Tom; no more mistakes of this kind for him again!

So on retiring for the night he wrote, with the air of a man who knew his business well, "Set at 8."

Art Treasures in Japan.

The Japanese idea in regard to art treasures is quite different from the American idea, as seen in the home. The American method is to keep all the good pictures or beautiful bronzes or unique vases in evidence all the time. The Japanese way is to store the artistic belongings, bringing different ones to light for a time, and thereby avoiding the too abundant appearance that is often the rule here.—New York Sun.

Successive Waves.

The following waif is going the rounds of the state press: We are told of a young lady in a neighboring town who waved her hand at a stranger, and in three days they were married. Two days later the young lady waved a flatiron at her husband, and the next evening he came home waving a divorce.—Nashville Banner.

Only a few copies of the splendid new map of Peterborough County left. Mounted on canvas with wooden rollers, $2; paper 50c. Times Bookstore.

Out for Gore.

Saturday morning an Italian who lives below Downer's Corners was at the police court to lodge a complaint. A lot of young men driving past his place last evening broke the windows in his house and did other damage and caused annoyance. It is supposed they were a sleighload going down to the skating carnival at Keene. The Italian was mad all the way through, as he had a right to be, and is now out for gore.

New Readers

We have just received a neat little book of new readings in Scotch and English for social gatherings. The selections are from the works of Mr. John Imrie, Toronto, and are up to date. For sale at the Times Bookstore.

Died on the Road.

George Hopkins, an old gentleman who has been a resident of Millbrook for many years, died on his way from that town to the Nicholas Hospital. The deceased had been unwell for some time and it was thought by his friends that the Hospital was the best place for him, and when about four miles from town it was found that he was dead. The body was brought on, but taken back next morning.

A Place for Col. Hughes.

It is not improbable that Col. Sam Hughes, who is now in South Africa, will be given a position on the Strathcona force. Col. Hughes has for two months been waiting in Cape Town, chafing under his enforced activity. It is a burning shame that a loyal Canadian could be subjected to such shabby treatment as that meted out to Col. Hughes by General Hutton. There will be a hot time for the latter when the charges, which it is understood will be formulated against Hutton by Hughes, are brought before Parliament. Canada has no room for men of Hutton's calibre.

A Disgrace to Civilization.

On Friday last an old woman, who had been insane, and who came from Harvey, died in the county goal. She was perfectly helpless, and her death had been expected. For three months the poor old creature had been unable to stand, and for two weeks had been confined to her bed. She had committed no crime, her only fault was that she was poor, sick and friendless. She was placed behind prison bars, and died in a felon's garb. Yet we call ourselves a Christian people, and glibly talk about the Boers as semi-savages. We venture the assertion that the Boers do not send their aged and helpless people to prison. On Friday there was an inquest on the body, a piece of the most flagrant nonsense imaginable.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

Basket Ball.

The Basket Ball League of the Y. M. C. A. has begun operations. The senior league has five teams, one from each of the four wards of the town, and the fifth coming from the business portion. In the intermediate league there are teams ach known by the name of its captain. The last game played was between Wards 1 and 2 with a score of 10 to 6. Following were the teams—

No. 1—E. E. Lord, W. Galley, forwards; Geo. Milline, centre; W. Ackerman, W. VanEvery, defence.

No. 2—F. Moster, D. Wilson, forwards; A. W. McPherson, centre; S. Hall, A. Froude, defence.

Hockey.

The Colts will leave for Cobourg at noon to-day.

Belleville beat Lindsay in the second round of the intermediate series. Ernie Wason was referee.

The second lot of games of the Trent Valley League were played on Friday night. Campbellford defeated Norwood on the ice of the latter by 3 to 2. There was a big crowd of people from the neighboring villages.

Lakefield also played Keene the same night, at Keene, and won by a score of 11 to 8. The Peterborough Lakeviews having won the bye will now be in the second rLund, their first game being with Keene here next Friday night. The winners of Keene-Peterborough plays Campbellford for final honors.

The referee has authority to stop the foul playing and hard smashing by the centre forward who plays in front of the goals. The nets will make very little difference to the goal keeper in that kind of playing. In nine cases out of ten the forwards is off-side on that sort of play, as he is nearly always in front of the player that shoots. In fact, it is only when the goal keeper fails to clear the puck the centre should be allowed in front of the goal. If the referee allows a game Wwhen the goal keeper is interferred with by the centre in front of the player who shoots (and unless the puck is coming from behind or nearly behind, he is bound to be off-side), the referee should call off-side.

The curlers and hockey players are taking a rest these days.

There will be a meeting of the Granites at the rink parlors this evening.

The Collingwood papers are thoroughly disgusted with the O. H. A. Executive for putting the Collingwood team out of the game. It was hard on the team, but rules should not be broken with impunity. For goodness sake try and keep hockey out of the hands of professionals, who have killed lacrosse.

Barrie protested Collingwood and Collingwood got the "throw-down." Now Midland has put Barrie out of business for this year.

It is scarcely in the line of sporting intelligence to talk about the war, but it is hard on those dead, game sports, the Boers, to have spent two and a half months of solid, hard work digging entrenchments, building terrace above terrace and constructing emplacements for their big guns, around the kopjes of Colenso and now to have all that work go for nothing, as General Buller has followed Napoleon's advice, never to do what the enemy wants you to do.

Gets six Months.

Ernest Johnston, who lives on Aylmer street, near the creek, with his wife and family, appeared at the police court on Saturday charged with assaulting his wife. It appears he got drunk on Friday, and on Friday night he proceeded to batter the family, breaking furniture and raising old Ned generally. When he faced the police magistrate on Saturday morning he was as meek as Moses, and plead ed guilty. He was sentenced to six months in the Central prison.

Badly Improved.

"Well, that's enough to try the patience of job," exclaimed the village minister, as he threw aside the local paper.

"Why, what's the matter, dear ?" asked his wife.

"Last Sunday I preached from the text, 'Be Ye Therefore Steadfast,'" answered the good man; "but the printer make it read, 'Be Ye There for Breakfast.'"

60th Anniversary Sale.

In a little wooden shop, with a square clapboard front, situated where Hall & Hayes law office now stands, the well-known boot and shoe business of R. Stenson first saw the light of day sixty years ago. Twenty years later Mr. J. T. Stenson succeeded to the business so successfully managed by his father, and has continued it ever since, a period of forty years. There is no other person in Peterborough to-day who was in business here forty years ago. Mr. Stenson is to commemorate the unique event by some especially attractive business features for the next two months, which it will be in the interest of all to know. Special features of the great sale will be that in addition to marking all goods away down in price, a rebate of ten per cent. will be repaid in cash to each purchaser. For instance, on a one dollar purchase, ten cents will be returned, on a five dollar purchase 50 cents, and so on. Mr. Stenson carries out exactly what he says in his advertisements. Call at once and get some of the bargains.

The Time's War Reports

Yesterday the Times' war despatches received on Sunday morning was read in nearly all the leading churches of the town. Our connecting for securing news direct from London and South Africa is the same as procured by the city morning dailies, and our despatches are therefore generally trustworthy. Occasionally, of course, there is a slip, and matter is given that is not authentic, but as a rule the reports are correct. The Times is enjoying a period of prosperity, and is adding hundreds of subscribers to its lists, not only in Peterborough, but throughout the towns and villages of Eastern Ontario.

Mr. McClellan's Success

The Prescott Messenger has the following to say concerning Mr J. H. McCellan's coal business in Ogdensburg: A year ago, when Mr. J. H. McCellan opened an office in Ogdensburg we predicted that he would get a large and profitable business. We knew the combine in Ogdensburg was strong, but we had confidence in Mr. McCellan's business ailitbies and in the People's Coal Co's coal, that it would be only a matter of time before it would be appreciated. The following from the Ogdensburg News of the 21st, inst., shows we were right:—"Though a comparatively new fuel concern in this city the People's Coal Company, under the intelligent and capable management of Mr. J.A. Wood, has secured a large and increasing patronage. The excellent quaulity of its anthracite coal, and therefore its superior merit in heating and cooking along with the very low prices, have appealed to the economical buyer with satisfying results, both to the customer and the firm. Call at 23 Ford street and be convinced.

WILL THEY DO THEIR DUTY?

A Few Plain Words Which the Council Will do Well to Heed.

The Times was visited Saturday by a citizen who had a good deal to say as regards the attitude of this journal on certain local matters. We might say, for the benefit of our friend and others that it is an easy matter to publish a newspaper that is neither hot or cold, a newspaper that does its duty to the public cannot afford to remain passive while the public are being wronged. This journal is opposed to the present system of street management, and it boldly says so. We have the greatest personal regard for the Town Engineer, but we cannot permit this to interfere with our duty to the public. Peterborough has no use for an engineer. What is needed, as we have frequently pointed out, is a practical man, who thoroughly understands road building and concrete work, and who knows how to handle men. With such an officer the enormous waste which took place in connection with the sidewalks could not have materialized. The new mayor and council have a duty to perform; we will see if they will perform it.

Church Note.

Last night in continuation the course of sermons on "Types of Saintliness," Rev. H. Symonds preached on the "Saint as a Soldier: the Life of General Gordon."

In nearly all the churches yesterday reference was made to the war, and the Times' special despatches were read.

The Christian Unity meeting this evening in the Y.M.C.A. hall promises to be of unusual interest. Dr. Chown of Toronto, who delivers the address is one of the foremost speakers in Toronto. He is also the President of the Canadian Society of Christian Unity. Admission free. Silver collection to defray expenses.

The non-commissioned officers of the 57th battalion attended service at St. John's church last night in a body when a special sermon was preached by the chaplain. They marched from the mess rooms at 6.30 o'clock.

"We Told You So."

Last year when the walks on Water street were being put down this journal pointed out to Engineer Hay that the levels were bad. In some places the walks were too low and others too high. Anyone passing along this street on Saturday and yesterday must be convinced that we are right. In front of Mr. Shorey's, on the east side, the walk is under water, and it is in many other places. The Council should not take long to make up its mind that a change in the management of the streets is needed.

GRAND LODGE SUED.

Robert Kopp Appeals to the Supreme Court Against Expulsion.

New York, Jan. 20.—Robert Kopp, a manufacturer, of No. 73 Barclay street, is the plaintiff in a suit to contest a decree of the Grand Lodge, F. and A. M., which will be tried in the Supreme Court within the next two weeks.

Mr. Kopp's complaint was prepared after the meeting of the Grand Lodge last June. It sets forth that he was a Mason of twenty-three years' standing. He was also master of Strict Observance Lodge, No. 94. In March, 1899, he was ordered to appear before three commissioners to answer the charge of having written an improper letter to Grand Master William A. Sutherland. This letter accused the head of the organization of attempting to introduce political methods into the fraternity.

When arranged before the commissioners Kopp challenged their right to proceed. They denied his right to challenge, he says, and sought to put him on the stand and make him admit that he had written the letter.

Upon his refusal to testify against himself Grand Secretary E. L. M. Ehlers testified that the Grand Master had received the letter from Kopp. The commissioners found the accused guilty, and the Grand Lodge, in June, 1899, overruled his appeal and ordered his expulsion.

Kopp had no further appeal in the order, and took the matter to the Supreme Court. He alleges that the Masonic laws were violated in his case and that he did not have a fair and impartial trial; or granting, he says, that he did write the letter, he had a perfect right to express himself about and alleged wrong and should not be expelled for so doing.

SOME COVETED SCRAWLS.

Rare Autographs For Which Immense Prices Have Been Paid.

The most prized autographs in the world are those of Shakespeare. Only seven are claimed to exist, three signatures to his will (each with a different spelling), two to conveyances of property, one in the folio edition of his plays (doubtful) and one in a Tudor translation of Montaigne. This last is in the British museum and cost over 3,000 guineas.

One thousand guineas was the price given by the late Mr. Alfred Morrison of Carlton House terrace for an autograph letter written by Marie Stuart to the archbishop of Guise. This and two other letters (one to the pope and the other to the king of France) were written by the unfortunate queen of Scots on the morning of her execution. The letter to the French king was destroyed during the days of the terror, while that to the pope is still preserved at the Vatican.

The well known bookseller Bernard Quaritch gave £1,000 for an autograph of Columbus, which was exhibited at the World's fair at Chicago. A Chicago autograph dealer is said to have offered to give $100,000, or over £20,000, for a genuine autograph of Shakespeare if brought to him within a year of making his offer. It was a safe bluff, for since the tragic fate of Chatterton no forger has cared to tackle the quaint scrawl of the Bard of Avon.—Collier's Weekly.

CANADA'S GREATEST SCHOOL OF SHORTHAND AND BUSINESS

PUBLIC SCHOOL TEACHERS SHOULD NOTICE

This institute has prepared over seventy teachers for other Business Colleges and Commercial Schools in Canada and the United States, more than twice as many as all other Business Colleges in Canada, combined, have so placed.

The proprietors of five of the leading business colleges in Western Ontario, who are to-day among our strongest opponents in the field of Shorthand and Business training, received THEIR training under the Principal of this institution. Besides these, there are five others holding leading positions as teachers in Business Colleges in Ontario.

Since Sept 1st seven of our pupils have accepted positions as teachers in Business Colleges and Commercial Schools in Canada and the United States; and there is now negotiating for a similar opening in a Business College in a leading American city, and there are five unfilled calls of this kind on hand still.

DOES IT NOT PAY TO ATTEND THE BEST? You must decide.

236 of our pupils secured good positions in seventeen months, and the good work of placing our students still continues.

HAVE SOME BRITISH REACHED THE BELEAGUED TOWN ALREADY?

ord Dundonald Reported to Have Entered Ladysmith With a Flying Column of of 1,600 Men.

OTHING REPORTED OF MONDAY'S OPERATIONS.

eserters From the Enemy's Camp State the Boers Will Fight One More Big Battle and If Repulsed Will Retire to Drakensberg Range.

London, Jan. 22

st before midnight the War Office issued the following despatch from Gen. Buller, dated Spearman's Camp Jan. 22, 6 p.m.—

e following casualties are reported in General Hart's brigade as the result of yesterday's fight:

Killed—Capt. Ryal, Yorkshire regiment and five men.

ounded—Sec.-Lieut. Andrews, Border regiment, Capt. McLeighlan, of the Inniskillings; Lieut. Bartow, Yrkshire regiment and 75 men, and eight men missing. Other casualties will be forwarded when received.

e foregoing was all that the War Office had issued up to midnight. Nothing therefore is known here regarding Monday's operations.

Durban, Natal, Jan. 22.

e statement comes from an excellent source in Pietermaritzburg that Lord Dundonald has entered Ladysmith with 1,600 men.

his is not confirmed from any other quarter but it is known that Lord Dundonald's flying column has been acting well to the left of the line of advance.

imberley, by heliograph, Wednesday, Jan. 17.—Via Modder River, Jan. 22.

ative reports say that a proclamation has been issued at Barkley, west, by Commandant Beithoff ordering all British subjects to quit before Jan. 22. Ladies are being subjected to great insults.

e Boers are again very active, bombarding heavily from all positions, from dawn till 6 a.m., the fire being direct chiefly against the redoubts.

London, Jan. 23

e Daily Telegraph publishes the following despatch delayed by the censor, from Rensburg, dated Sunday afternoon:

ast evening about 9 o'clock the Boers began firing furiously all along their main position. Three tiers of rifles fire were visible. The firing lasted three quarters of an hour.

e reason for the alarm is not known here."

London, Jan. 23

e correspondent of the Times at Lorenzo Marquese telegraphing yesterday says:—

ews from the republics is exceedingly meagre, but it is reported that Pretoria is much pertubed. This is confirmed from different cources and to-day it is even hinted that the Boers are about to sue for peace. This is improbable until they have played their trump ard in the shape of an appeal for intervention.

It is an undoubted fact that they are bitterly disappointed at the apparent apathy of the continental powers.

London, Jan. 23, 4.30 a.m.

Gneeral Buller has reported nothing of his operations on Monday and official and press intelligence leaves the British bivoucked Sunday night on the ground they had won after two days fighting. The War Office turned everbody out of the lobbies at midnight. Apparently Lord Landsdowne was as much without news all day as other people were.

London, Jan. 23

The Daily Mail has the following, dated Sunday night from Spearman's Camp—

"There has been hot fighting all day. At dawn our attack was resumed along the entire line, the brigades taking part. We soon saw that the Boers still occupied the range of hills in force, their positions being very strong. The range is intersected by steep ravines and many approaches very difficult of access. Today the Boers, who were driven from their trenches yesterday took cover in dongas, and behind the rocks with which the hills are strewn. The forces therefore commenced the task of driving them out, and set to work with good heart in the early morning. Much firing took place and our progress was low, but gradually British pluck told its tale and the enemy fell back to another kopje. We swarmed on and occupied it, and then the attack recommenced with the utmost gallantry. The country simply abounds in hills favorable to guerilla warfare, and our task is an arduous one. Nevertheless, it is being gradually accomplished. Whenever any of the enemy were observed taking up a fresh position our field batteries poured in showers of shrapnel, and the rapid movement of the guns followed by accurate shooting, must have greatly distressed them. The enemy were on the defensive almost the entire day, save one when they attempted to outflank our left, and were signally checkmated. They relied almost entirely on rifle fire. A few shells were fired from a heavy piece of ordnance, but these fell harmless. We how occupy the lower crest on the left and are converging slowly but surely to the Boer centre. The Boer loss is unknown, but must have been heavy. Their killed and wounded are carried away to the rear rapidly. Strong rumors are in circulation that the Boers are retiring. The battle will be resumed to-morrow."

London, Jan. 23

The Times publishes the following from Frere Camp, dated yesterday (Monday) afternoon—

"On Friday General Warren began a long circuitous march from Trichard's Drift westward. This was abandoned, owing to the fact the the lng ridge which runs west from Spion Kop was occupied by the Boers, who commanded the route, rendering the maintenance of communication for transports impossible. He therefore returned and camped for the night about two miles from Trichard's Drift. On Saturday a frontal attack on the ridges was ordered."

The correspondent then describes Saturday's fighting (already cabled) and adds —"The men behaved splendidly under an incessant heavy cross fire in a burning sun for seven hours. Our casualties were for the most part slight. The proportion of killed to wounded being extremely small."

GAINING STEP BY STEP.

London, Jan. 22.—The military experts of the London papers generally view Gen. Buller's latest report with satisfaction. The morning Leader's expert says:

Apart from the flamboyant language of some of the telegrams, and sticking to official reports, we can see that the Boer right is enevelopeed by our left. Our right in front of Colenso seems to have been kept busy by a counter attack of the Boers, who are said to have burned the little town, but this counter attack has not developed to the extent we feared it might have. Having this force in front of Colenso for our protection of line of communications, and a mounted column now making its way through Zululand to the eastern part of the Transvaal all our force under Buller is on the left of his former position.

Buller's despatch of 9 o'clock last night raises doubt as to whether he actually commands, that is, can use his guns on or about Acton Holmes on the road to Ladysmith, for he says fighting is all the time uphill. From Acton Holmes' postoffice, to Clydesdale postoffice, on the road to Ladysmith, is nine miles, and the first five miles from Venter's Spruit shows a rise of 650 feet. From that point on to Clydesdale there is a fall of as much therefore, we take it that Warren has not got to the summit level of this part of the road, and until he does, there must be doubt about the result, though the grounds on both sides of the road undoubtedly favors him as he pushes forward in small parties. Opportunities for Boers to break in along the great length of Buller's lines are few, owing to the nature of the ground.

The Morning Post's expert takes practically the same view and thinks the situation on the whole encouraging, but complains of scant information.

BIG GUNS AT WORK.

London, Jan. 22.—Winston Churchill sends the following telegrams:

Gen. Buller's headquarters, Spearman's Farm, Jan. 21.—9 p.m.—On Sunday Gen. Hart and his brigade fought the Boers in Long Glen, between two lines of hills. They were at it all day, slowly driving the Boers from point to point. When dusk fell they were in a valley. They could not force the Boers off the last eminence before them, so the British retired to the last kopje they had taken, to bivouack.

Lord Dundonald's cavalry, it is now reported, holds a position at the extreme left, that commands the roads to the Drakensburg range, Tiutwa pass and other lines of travel to the Free State.

Capt. Cayser, expert signal officer, who had been in communication with Ladysmith from Weenen, has arrived here, and Buller is now in direct communication with White by heliograph. The chief will not move from here until Warren's movement is complete.

ROBERTS' PEACEFUL PLAN.

Cape Town, Jan. 22.—Lord Roberts, purposing not to alienate the Cape Dutch, and to see that the military respect the rights of non-combatants, regardless of race or sympathies, has issued, through Lord Kitchener, his chief of staff, the following order:—

"The commander-in-chief wishes to impress upon all officers who may at any time be in charge of columns or detached commands the grave importance of doing all in their power by good and conciliatory treatment and of securing compensation for the people of the country in all matters affecting either their own interests or those of the troops.

"In all cases where supplies of any kind are required, these must be paid for on delivery, and a receipt for the amount taken. Officers will be held responsible for the observance of the rule that soldiers are never allowed to enter private houses or to molest the inhabitants on any pretext whatever; and every precaution must be taken to suppress looting or petty robbery by persons connected with the army.

"When supplies are absolutely necessary for the subsistence of the army, and the inhabitants are unwilling to meet such demands, commanding officers may, after having satisfied themselves by careful personal investigation that such supplies are necessary and available, order these in such cage to be taken by force, full receipt therefor being given."

ARTILLERY FIRE A FEATURE.

Gen. Buller's Headquarters, Spearman's Farm, Natal, Jan. 21, 7 a.m.—It was an eventful day for the British corps under Buller yesterday. Fighting began to-day with the English troops in the position they had won. The main feature of yesterday's fighting was the artillery fire. A portion of Warren's division under Gen. Clery, supported by a strong force of field artillery, at daybreak took further advanced positions toward Spion Kop. Only slight opposition was encountered, the Boers retiring to higher ridges northward, which they have held in the face of a vigorous artillery bombardment, lasting until dark.

Bombarded the Trenches.

The naval guns and howitzer battery in advance of Buller's main column strongly bombarded the Boer trenches, which previously had been located by balloon.

Part of Lyttleton's brigade advanced during the fornoon from kopjes extending on the right and left flanks, and taking close cover. The Boers rplied with rifle fire.

Later, the remainder of the brigade, supported by the 61st Field Battery, also advanced, the latter opening a fire on the trenches on the right. There was a heavy rifle fire again from the Boers, and also an occasional shot from a hotchkiss gun, otherwise on both occasions the Boers resolutely declined to respond to artillery. At dusk a heavy mist and thunder storm interrupted the fighting, when the British apparently were close to the Boer trenches.

As a result of yesterday's bombardment, the Boers were seen carrying their dead from the trenches.

RAZED TWO HOUSES.

Modder River, Jan. 20, 10.55 a.m.—The British successfully blew up and razed two buildings, including the house formerly occupied by Commandant Muller, outside their lines this morning. Boer snipers had used these houses at night, firing from them at the most distant British pickets up the river.

Between daylight and nine o'clock this morning the enemy fired a dozen shells from two guns, one of which was behind the crest of a kopje. Their fire did no damage.

WITH GEN. GATACRE.

London, Jan. 22.—A despatch from Sterkstroom dated Jan. 20, explains Col. Brabant's small estimate of the number of Boers, 1,500, at Stormberg. It says that a medical-lieutenant, who remained with the wounded after the disaster to the British, has returned to the camp.

He estimates the Boers at 5,000, but they have established a new camp seven miles beyond Sterkstroom, where a strong detachment was left.

They had received additional guns, which were served by German gunners.

Gen. Delaray, with reinforcements, was expected to arrive in a short time from the west.

Old men and boys were serving as a town guard at Bughersdorp where supplies were scanty. Some of the boys were only 14 years old. The Boers have the railway from Pretoria to Stormberg in working order.

The Free State Boers were very kind to the prisoners, but the colonial rebels were extremely hard.

Londrost Steyn, brother of the President of the Free State, was most considerate to the British captives. The lieutenant adds that the Boers are confident of ultimate success. They declare that the British artillery has done little harm.

CAUSES REJOICING.

London, Jan. 22.—The Telegraph's Pietermaritzburg despatch Sunday evening says—News of our initial success caused general satisfaction here.

Although the attack on the enemy's main position is expected to be most stubbornly opposed the general belief here is that Ladysmith will be relieved about Thursday. A movement is already on foot to celebrate the event. Our scouts report that only a few Boers are now remaining east of Colenso.

Deserters from the enemy's camp state that the Boers declare that they will fight one more big battle, and if repulsed will retire to Drakenberg range.

TO CUT ENEMY IN TWO.

London, Jan. 22.—A despatch to the Times from Spearman's Camp, dated Jan. 21, 10.30 .m., says—

"To-day at dawn the British occupied the evacuated Boer trenches. The Boers hold another semi-circular position on the main ridge. Our object is to cut the enemy in two by the advance of General Hildyard's men. We kept under cover until within half a mile from the enemy.

WARREN'S FIGHT.

Pietermaritzburg, Jan. 22.—General Warren fought all day Sunday near Colenso. There were 295 of the British wounded.

London, Jan. 22.—The transport Canada has arrived at Southampton from South Africa with 200 wounded British soldiers.

AFFAIRS AT MAFEKING.

London, aJn. 22.—Despatches from Mafeking state that on January 6 the Boers were dropping shells from their five-pounders into the market square. The town has three months' food. The Boers were making an emplacement for a big gun 700 yards back of their present position. They were so occupied trying to silence the British guns on Jan. 10 that their fire was diverted from the town.

A despatch from Gaberones, dated Jan. 14, says that Colonel Plumer made a reconnaissance Saturday morning and discovered Boers a few miles south of Crocodile pools station.

A Beira despatch, dated aJn. 16, says that Col. Plumer advanced at night towards Crocodile pools, but the flooded Metswas pan checked his progress. The bridge three miles south of Gaberones was discovered on January 14 to be badly damaged. It has been repaired, and the railway is now patrolled by an armored train.

SMASHED THE BOERS' BIG GUN

Mafeking, Jan. 6.—By runner to Mochudi, Jan. 14, via Lorenzo Marquez, Jan. 21.—We concentrated our artillery, consisting of a seven-pounder, a Nordenfeldt, and one little old ship's gun, on Jan. 3, emplacing during the darkness so as to bear on the enemy's big seige gun. We carefully concealed the guns until the next afternoon, when, after the enemy had fired a couple of shells, we let loose all our pieces, firing and loading as fast as possible.

One of our shots must have thrown the enemy's seige gun out of position, for it ceased firing. With glasses we could see the Boers rapidly reinforcing at that point.

The next day they moved back their gun 700 yards. They emplaced a five-pounder, and proceeded to drop shells regularly into the market square. We have made up our minds to stick it out, and have food for another three months.

The whole garrison is enraged at the enemy for firing upon the woman's laager.

MAFEKING STILL HOLDS OUT.

Chicago, aJn. 22.—A despatch to the Record from London says—

Astonishment is expressed here that Mafeking has held out so long, but it is declared that the limit of the garrison endurance surely must have been nearly reached. Its resistance appears to have enraged the Boers, for they are bombarding the town with increased vigor, shelling the women's and children's laager and using explosive bullets. Apparently the natives are threatening to rise, and altogether it is believed that even Colonel Baden-Powell cannot hold out much longer. Despite the assertion in the Rueter despatch that Lord Methun is in robust health, there are not wanting many, in a position to know, who declare that this is untrue. Surprise is expressed that the authorities have taken no action regarding the serious allegations published recently under circumstances in which formal denial is at least to be expected.

NATIVES AGAINST BOERS.

Antwerp, Jan. 22.—M. Van Boeschoten, the secretary of the Transvaal Legation in Brussells, said to-day that President Kruger, as he was sure, would be deeply affected by the alleged employment by the British of armed natives against the Boers. He knew Mr. Kruger would be deeply pained, he said, for he himself had been present at an interview between the President and the British agent in the Transvaal when ghe former offered the service of his burghers to protect the English in Rhodesia from being massacred by the natives.

METHUEN NOT IN PERIL.

London, Jan. 22.—Julian Ralph, in a cable to the Daily Mail, states that Methuen's camp is not in peril, and is moveable. He believes the camp is impregnable.

Cape Town, Jan. 22.—The Africander Bond press deplores the Government's intention to remove the Boer prisoners to Cape Point. The reason for the outcry can only be the inaccessability of that place for friendly sympathizers.

London, Jan. 22.—The Times has the following special to-day—

Colombo, Jan. 19.—The Ceylon contingent of 120 troopers and five officers starts direct for Durban on February 2nd.

CANADIAN KILLED IN ACTION.

Capt. Hensley, of Halifax, Killed in Saturday's Battle.

Halifax, Jan. 22.—Ebbert N. Hensley has received a cablegram from the War Office announcing the death of Captain Charles Albert Hensley, of this city, who fell in Saturday's fighting under Major-Gen. Clery in South Africa.

Deceased was a brave officer. He was in the action at Glencoe, and was in Gen. Yule's march from Dundee to Glencoe, and was also commander of the armored train at Estcourt, having distinguished himself in all the engagements.

He was married two years ago to Miss Wylde Brown, in Natal. Capt. Hensley was attached to the Dublin Fusiliers.

Kingston, Jan. 22.—Capt. Hensley was a graduate of the Royal Military College in 1885. Lieut.-Col. McGill of the College when told the news said: "I am indeed sorry to hear it. He was a fine student and a graduate who has reflected honor on his alma mater, I had a note from his father the other day, giving me extracts from a letter his son had written to the Halifax press."

Cameron Was Ill.

Winnipeg, Jan. 22.— Ex-Premier Greenway is out with a statement that his colleague, ex-Attorney-General Cameron, was ill when one of the notorious deals was made with the C.P.R., which accounts for Cameron's ignorance displayed on the platform before the elections. Many believe Greenway's statement, as those who know Mr. Cameron think him too honest a man to acquiesce in Greenway's Waskada deal. Cameron remains silent. He cannot talk, excepting to disagree with Greenway.

Sir Wilfrid Informed

Ottawa, Jan. 22.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier confirms the fact that he has received a cablegram informing him that New South Wales has made a concession to the Eastern Telegraph Company, in the shape of a land grant, but states that he has no extended information on the subject of how it affects the Pacific cable project, and can make no statement at present.

Resent Curzon Rule.

London, Jan. 22.—Reviewing Lord and Lady Curzon's first yea rof Vice-royalty, Valentia Steer, writing from Calcutta, to the Daily Mail, dwells upon the unpopularity the Viceroy has gained among officials of all kinds.

The writer declares that the Viceroy's superior airs are responsible for a large portion of this resentment, and that the members of the Anglo-Indian Society have been especially offended by the regal state which the Viceroy and Vicerine have maintained at their court, and the punctilious formality upon which they have insisted.

On the other hand, the correspondent says, Lord Curzon's policy in enlisting the tribes to guard their own frontiers has made him exceptionally popular with the native press.

He works hard and the climate has apparently restored his health, which was much shaken when he accepted the Viceroyalty.

Bad Beating for Red Men.

Nogales, Ariz., Jan. 22.—A message from Ortiz, a station on the Sonora railroad, reports that carriers from Macoyate confirm the account of the last stand of the Yaqui Indians against the Mexican general, Lorrenzo Torres.

Official telegrams received in Nogales place the Mexican loss in killed and wounded at 60, and a message sent over the Government wires last night confirms the report of the killing of the Yaqui chief Tetabiate, along with 200 of his best fighters.

The 600 Indians taken prisoners will be brought into Ortiz to-morrow, and also Father Beltran and the Josephine sisters, who were rescued.

Job for D. C. Fraser

Victoria, B. C., Jan. 20.—D. W. Semple, editor of the Dawson City Gleanor, who is here to carry an appeal to the Minister of Justice against the decision of Judge Dugas, states that it is reported in Dawson that D. C. Fraser, M. P., for Guysboro, is to succeed Wm. Ogilvie as commissioner of the Yukon before the next general elections.

Russia's Demand on Turkey.

Moscow, Jan. 22.—According to a despatch received from the Moscow stock exchange to-day the situation in northern India, and particularly in Bengal, is beoming dangerous, and the British are thoroughly alarmed. It is said that the Rajah of Golkhar is ready to revolt against British overlordship.

The great eight-day manoeuvres of the army are set for August, and will take place in the presenc eof the Czar, between Kursk and Orel, Central Russia. There will be 154 battalions of infatry on the field, with 76 squadrons of cavalry and 348 pieces of field artillery. The Grand Duke Michael Nicolaivitch has been appoined general umpire, while the Grand Duke Sergius has control over the Moscow army and General Kourpatkin will lead the southern army.

The Russian Government has made a categorical demand on the Sultan of Turkey for the payment of the remainder of the war contribution, and it is declared that the amount will be forthcoming in cash, notwithstanding the fact that the treasury of Turkey is empty.

Wants a Divorce.

Bridgeburg, Jan. 22.—Last week, a lady and a youth came across on the dummy and asked to see the squire. The lady proved to be the former Mrs. Sternman, who won considerable notoriety by being tried on a charge of murdering her husband. She produced a marriage certificate issued at Niagara Falls, Ont., in which the contracting parties were Olive Adele Sternman and Frank Gutenberg. The lady stated that she wished a divorce from her present husband. She also threatened to prosecute him on a serious charge. She was referred to the police magistrate, who made out the necessary papers.

Biggest Ships in the World

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 23.—President Hill, of the Great Northern, to-day gave out a description of the big ships which are now being built for the Oriental trade, to run in connection with his railroad. Four vessels will be ready for service in eighteen months.

Each ship will be 730 feet long by 74 feet amidships, 50 feet from water to deck line, and will have a carrying capacity of 22,000 tons. The ships will be the largest in the world, exceeding the Oceanic, and will be able to carry freight at low rates.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

Hockey.

The following players will constitute the Lakeview team inthe Trent Valley League:—Wareham, Crowley, Meager, Grady, Parnell, Thornton and Mitchell.

The seniors had a good practice last night.

Two games were to be played in Kingston last night, Frontenacs II vs. R. M.C. II and Queen's vs. R.M.C. seniors. Queens were to leave for Pitsburg right after the game.

The game in Cobourg last night between Peterborough Colts and Coborough was witnessed by over 800 people and was one of the fastest games ever seen in that town. The score was 5 to 2 in favor of Peterborough.

Odds and Ends.

The Executive committee of the National Association of the Amateur Oarsmen met in New York on Satday night, and among other things they decided that the annual regatta should take place in New York City on the Harlem. As the course will be laid out near the New speedway, it will be a magnificent place to hold the races. It was also decided to pay all expenses of sending to Paris the winners of the single scull, four oared and eight oared races; but they effectually barred the Don Rowing club of Toronto, by dropping the international four oared race.

The Bobcaygeon and Lakefield curlers played the first round in the district competition on the rink here last night, the result being 14—0 in favor of Bobcaygeon.

The Irish football team who visited Peterborough last November played team from the County Dublin, on New Year's day and won by a small majority.

Looking for Damages.

Capt. J. J. Turner is seeking legal advice to ascertain if a Kingston wrecking company that agreed to send a tug to his assistance at the time the schooner Wave Crest went ashore, is not liable for the loss of the schooner and cargo. When the tug was called Mr. Turner alleges that the weather was favorable and for a day or two after the tug, instead of going direct to the wreck by the outside route, took the bay route by way of the Murray Canal, with the result that when the canal was reached the tug could not pass through owing to ice. When the tug returned to Kingston the gale was on and the vessel became a total loss.—Cobourg World.

ROUGH, JANUARY 23, 1900

LET CANADA DO IT WELL.

Canada should pay the cost of her own soldiers in the war. It is pretty small business to send a contingent to help defend the Empire and to charge their maintenance to the British taxpayer. We are fond of calling this Canada of ours a land of boundless wealth in natural resources. We picture the future as one of prosperity and happiness for its present and coming inhabitants. We could easily present the Empire with a Battleship fully manned and two thousand horses in addition to the contingents already raised. The cost of it would hardly be felt by the Dominion as it will be situated a decade hence. Why is it not done? Parliament should see to it,

WHAT FOR.

The opinion is commonly entertained in Canada that it is most desirable that the population of the Dominion should increase its numbers, says our esteemed Bobcaygeon Independent in a late issue. The dwellers in our towns and cities brag exceedingly of the increase of population; the rural residents feel quite proud if they find the population increasing; and the people of the Dominion spend large sums of money every year in inducing foreigners from Europe to come and reside in Canada. Is this strong desire for increase of population wise or foolish; is it rational or irrational? An increase of population is advantageous to landlords, there can be no doubt about that, but is it advantageous to any other class? The landlord charges higher rents, and therefore he is clearly benefitted, but it is difficult to see any advantage to the masses in having their rents increased. The city of Toronto contains about 200,000 people, in what way would these people be benefitted if the population should be doubled? There are now more store keepers than can earn a living, more laborers than can find steady work, more doctors than find patients, more lawyers than can find clients, then why crave for more storekeepers, more laborers, more doctors and more lawyers. And what about farmers? Do we really need more farmers? Would the position of our farmers be improved if there were more farmers? The subject deserves consideration, for, whether we desire it or not, the population of the world is rapidly increasing. It is calculated that every year the population of the world increases by about twelve or thirteen millions of people. The wild lands of the world will soon be populated, but will it be any advantage to the people?

Since 1871 the population of the United Kingdom—England, Scotland and Ireland—has increased from [illegible] to [illegible],000. Has the increase of population added to the comforts of the people; have they to work less hours; have they more pleasure or amusements? Here in Canada within the last year several thousand of Doukabors and Gallicians have been added to our population;—is there anybody in Verulam or North Harvey who has been benefitted thereby? If so let them speak. The idea about the desirability of an increase of population originates with landlords and capitalists,—is it not time that the masses of laborers, producers, and wage-earners studied the subject carefully in order to arrive at a just conclusion as to the advantages or disadvantages of increase of population. Think about it.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Fifteen thousand dollars, the subscription of the Canadian Pacific Railway to the national patriotic fund, is a big and generous figure. It calls to mind the fact that the C.P.R. shows itself a big-minded and liberal institution in everything.

PREVIOUS BOER SIEGES.

The Way British Soldiers Spent Christmas in the Transvaal Nineteen Years Ago.

London, Jan 21.—Ladysmith, Kimberley, and Mafeking are not the only places where British troops have been besieged by the Boers, for our soldiers' last Christmas in the Transvaal was spent in defying the Boers in five towns invested by them—Standerton, Pretoria, Potchefstroom, Wakkerstroom, and Leydenburg. This was in 1880-81.

At Standerton the small British force 300 men spent Christmas quietly, as the Boers did not invest the place until December 29. The besiegers numbered 1,200, but with forts, rifle pits, and earthworks the gallant little force kept them at a distance until March 11, when the armistice was proclaimed.

By way of amusement the besieged ran a newspaper, chronicling the events of the fort, and constructed a dummy gun made of strips of wood painted black. When the Boer fire got rather annoying the gun was brought up and the operation of ramming and sponging ostentatiously performed. Thereupon the Boers ran away from their position. Occasionally, just to keep up the joke, three or four rifles were fixed under the gun and fired simultaneously.

Siege of Pretoria.

The siege of Pretoria was really a long distance watch by the Boers. They simply sat round it at a distance of six miles and waited. They knew the British had dynamite, and avoided it as carefully as they avoid water. The 102 days' siege began on December 16, and included several sorties and attacks. Events were recorded in the "Siege Journal," specially founded for the occasion. Among the events of notes was a strike of the civil doctors for a higher rate of pay than a guinea a day. The doctors eventually gave in.

Under shelter of trenches the Boers kept up a constant and harassing fire. Once or twice these were cleared by bayonet charges, but sorties proved too costly.

Imagine the life of 300 people for three months in an area of twenty-five square yards! Rain was caught in tarpauline and served out in quantities of three pints every two days.

Burying the Dead.

Every night under the cover of darkness, there was a silent sortie to bury the dead. Rations fell short, for the tinned provisions, pierced by bulleits, decayed. Kaffir corn and mealies became the sole food. But, though cooped up like herrings in a barrel, exposed to incessant fusiladen, with men and children wounded and dying, with scanty food and pestilential surroundings, the besieged bravely, uncomplainingly held out.

At last Colonel Winslow was compelled to brach terms for the surrender of the fort. Cronje treacherously concealed the fact that an armistice had been arranged the week before between Sir Evelyn Wood and Joubert. On Sunday, March 20, the garrison marched out with all the honors of war, and was escorted to the boundary of the Orange Free State. There they learned of the truce which had been declared much earlier.

The siege of Leydenburg and of Wakkerstroom was quite uneventful, though lasting from Boxing Day to March. Soldiers and civilians whiled away the time with cricket, football, minstrelsy, and the publication of a newspaper in manuscript, ing breadth of the veldt."

CLEVER, BUT SOULLESS.

One Woman's New Way In Which to Pay Social Debts.

"I don't know much of the ways of fashionable people," said a young physician not long ago, "for I am not in society, but if many society women are like one I know here in town I think I'm safer to be out of it. It was not this season, but it wasn't so long ago but that plenty of people can remember the circumstances. I had among my patients an elderly woman who lived with the daughter's family. The daughter lived, if not beyond her means, at least up to the very edge, went out a great deal and was entertained a great deal.

"The mother fell sick with a complaint which I knew would prove fatal. I did not inform the family till one day the daughter asked me to tell her frankly what her mother's condition was and just how long she could live. I told her that the old lady could not possibly last more than a fortnight. She begged me not to let anybody know how serious the case was. She didn't want her young daughters distressed, she said.

"Of course I told nobody, and just a week after that I read in the papers that Mrs. Dash, the daughter of my dying patient, had sent out invitations for a large dancing party, to be given on an evening a fortnight away. My patient did not live as long as I had expected. The day after she died I read in the papers that 'owing to the sudden death of her mother Mrs. Dash had been compelled to recall her invitations.'

"She had never intended to give a ball. She could not have afforded it, and she 'bluffed.' I have cold shivers every time I see her."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

AN EXCITING LIFE.

Why the Chicago Girl's Brown Hair Turned Golden Hued.

"Gosh, Marier, but that wus a close shave!" exclaimed Uncle Eben as he dragged his worthy spouse out of the way of a street car that was yet 20 feet away. "This yer Chicago life is 'nough to make a man's h'ar turn gray."

"Turn gray!" snarled his wife. "'Twouldn't be so bad of thet wus all it done. It's decent and respectable to have gray ha'r, but when it comes to makin a poor young gal's ha'r turn yaller jist on account of the excitement uv all these cars an railroads on stilts an howlin people them's when I say it's a sin to hev sich big cities. I'm a-goin right out to 'Liza Jane's house, ef I kin ever find it, an stay right in it till we leave Chicago."

"How do you know it makes people's ha'r turn yaller?" asked Uncle Eben. "I ain't never hearn tell of ennything of that kind."

"Well, I see it with my own eyes—leastwise I see it turn brown agin after the poor dears wuz rested all summer in the country. You know them four gals what staid all summer over at Cousin Ellen's? When they fust come, they'd big brown eyes an fa'r complexions an right yaller ha'r. Purty soon every one of 'em's ha'r begin to get streaked in spots, an before the summer wus gone they all had rich brown ha'r. Then I ast one of 'em what made their ha'r turn brown, an she said it wus alls's brown, but that the excitin life she'd been livin in Chicago, whar she had to act in a theater every night, made it turn yaller. Poor thing! She looked so much better at the end of the summer that I hate to think of her comin back to this great, wicked city."—Chicago Journal.

BOSSY.

...ossy is a kind old cow.

And swings her tail and rings her bell
While roaming up and down the dell.

I see her through the pasture bars
Eat all the pretty daisy stars,
Then gently toss her head on high
To watch the clouds that dot the sky.

When night makes all the meadow black,
She lets the chickens on her back
Fall fast asleep, and sleep until
The sun comes peeping o'er the hill.

MYSTERIOUS OCCURRENCE.

The Remarkable Alpine Experience of a King's Messenger.

At a critical moment of international complication which occurred a good many years ago it was found necessary to send a king's messenger across one of the Alpine passes charged with dispatches the importance of which was so great that they practically involved the issue of peace or war. It was in the depth of winter, and in those days, even under the most ordinary circumstances, a journey across Europe meant no trifling undertaking. The first part of the journey was safely accomplished in postchaise as far as the foot of the pass, where a transfer to a sleigh was necessary. Here, on inquiring at the posting inn for horses and a sleigh, the messenger found to his dismay that none was to be had. "Impossible, monsieur, to go forward this night." Toward evening, however, a private carriage arrived, occupied by one traveler, with a sleigh, several spare horses and plenty of servants—evidently the equipage of a personage of distinction. The traveler halted at the posting inn and after a short parley determined to enter and have dinner, the journey across the pass to be continued at nightfall, when a clear moon might be expected.

Under these circumstances the king's messenger and the other traveler naturally dined together and entered into friendly conversation, with the result that an offer of a place in the traveler's sleigh was gladly accepted by the former. At nightfall the journey across the pass was commenced, the messenger carrying in his hand a small dispatch bag containing his dispatches. The route wound up and up the mountain side, all being soon covered deep in snow. The horses seemed fresh and high mettled and were urged at full speed by the driver. Suddenly, at a turn of the road, a man jumped out from a rock. The horses seemed to shy, and in less time than it takes to tell the sleigh was rolling over and over in the snow, with its occupants tossed hither and thither. Some moments elapsed before the half stunned messenger came to his senses, and when he did so the first thing which struck his astonished eyes was the sleigh tearing back down the pass at breakneck speed. No human being was to be seen beside him, his late companions and, worse still, his bag of dispatches, which had escaped from his grasp in the tumble, having vanished like magic. Nothing remained but to plod wearily through the snow back to the inn, where all that he could ascertain was that the strange traveler was unknown to the landlord and that he had returned by the way he had come with his own horses, explaining that there had been an accident. Neither the mysterious traveler nor the bag of dispatches was ever traced, nor has the full history of the adventure ever come to light up to the present day.—Quarterly Review.

Monkey and Mirror.

I saw a performing monkey the other day. He went through many tricks very successfully. Toward the end of the performance he was ordered to put on his cocked hat before a hand mirror, which he did. He was next told to set it straight, and he tried on his general's headgear repeatedly at different angles, causing much laughter. When all was over and the organ man, his helpers and the two monkeys were preparing to depart, I saw that "the general" had possessed himself of the little mirror and was studying his own countenance with great delight! He had placed the glass on top of the barrel organ, and he bent over it again and again, grimacing energetically. He afterward picked up his mirror and contemplated himself earnestly and contentedly at different angles. His face had been profoundly sad, like the faces of most monkeys I have seen, but now the wrinkles smoothed themselves out, and he nearly smiled.—London Standard.

India Rubber Industry.

The bulletin of the Royal gardens, Kew, states that the falling off in the production of India rubber at Lagos is due to the reckless way in which the trees are being exhausted. There is a want of control over the collectors, who tap young trees and destroy whole rubber forests by overworking, so that this industry, which is an important source of wealth to the colony, is in danger of extinction. A similar disaster occurred in Madagascar, and now active steps are being taken to preserve the industry by the establishment of plantations of rubber producing plants.

A Word to the Wise.

The angry father strode into the parlor.

"Girls," he said, "who are these young men?"

"Papa," replied one of the daughters, "this is Mr. Young and this is Mr. Yates."

Whereupon the old gentleman invitingly opened the door.

"Git!" he thundered.

And they got. A word to the Y's was sufficient.

TAKING THE REINS.

The world's record for fastest clipping of a horse is 14 minutes.

Arlington, 2:22¾, has trotted in 2:14 on a half mile track and may be Gold Leaf's first 2:10 performer.

Bishop Hero, 2:21, the Pacific coast veteran, is being driven on the roads at San Francisco by General Shafter.

J. Sutherland has bought 50 acres from A. H. Bernal at Pleasanton, Cal., and will build a track. He will also erect a large training barn and some 40 box stalls.

N. B. Wheeler, Cresco, Ia., reports a new record of 2:23½ for his pacer Fitzgerald, by Flask, 2:13¼, and that he was timed in 2:17½ in a race at Charles City, Ia., over a poor track.

The latest device to encourage high stepping in coach horses is a glass worn like goggles, the crystals being so formed that the ground appears nearer than it is. It is said to work all right.

A horse show will be held next year under the auspices of the French government in connection with the Paris exposition. Twelve prizes, worth $2,800, will be offered for American harness horses.

Ardine, 2:23¼, and Abby Kelly, 2:24½, are two more new ones for Pilot Medium reported by D. D. Streeter of Kalamazoo, Mich., former owner of Peter the Great (4), 2:07¼, the star of the family.

Porter Bairy, Pyatt, Ills., reports that his stallion Santamego, by Indicator, 2:23¼, son of Gold Dust, won the free for all at Grayville, Ills., in September in straight heats, reducing his record to 2:18¼.

F. D. Spotswood of Harrodsburg, Ky., has a 3-year-old trotting filly by Baron Wilkes, dam by Nutbreaker, that is a speed phenomenon. Oct. 1, after a very brief preparation, she trotted a three-quarter track in 2:29 and Oct. 24 turned the same track in 2:15¼; last half in 1:06¾.—Horse Review.

THE WRITERS.

Michael Davitt, during his days in parliament, did nearly all his literary work in the house writing room, where silence is enforced, sitting invariably in the same seat.

Paul Bourget has announced his intention of paying a second visit to this country. He will come next spring and gather material for a novel dealing with American social life.

Theodor Mommsen, at the age of 82 years, has published a new work, "Roman Criminal Law," as a companion to his great "Roman Constitutional Law." It is a volume of 1,078 closely printed, large octavo pages.

Bjornstjerne Bjornson lately saw for the first time the statue of himself set up before the National theater in Christiania. He turned red in the face and demands that it be removed, as it is a libel on his personal appearance.

THE PARIS SHOW.

The Paris exposition catalogue will contain 100,000 names.

The parks of Milwaukee will be part of the exhibit of that city at the Paris exposition. A series of photographic views of the public parks of that city will be shown.

It took a bid of 275,000 francs to secure the privilege of letting out seats for the Paris exposition of 1900. For the 1889 exhibition the successful bid for the monopoly was 30,000 francs.

Governor Mount of Indiana is personally supervising an elaborate exhibit for his state at the Paris exposition. One of the features of this will be a series of large photographs to show the progress of the "good roads" movement in Indiana, where there are now 50,000 miles of graded and graveled highway.

A Race With the Sun.

The London Daily Mail says if an aerial machine were capable of traveling at any rate up to 1,000 miles an hour a traveler in it, starting westward from London at a speed of 600 miles an hour, would arrest the progress of time. If he started at 10 a. m., it would always be to him 10 a. m. Should he find his unending day monotonous, he could reverse his direction and get a quick succession of short days and nights of some six hours' duration, but he could regulate the length by the speed of his machine. Suppose he traveled from London one night at 10 o'clock westward at a speed of 1,000 miles per hour. He would soon experience the sensation of seeing the sun rising in the west where it had set a short time before.

THE ARCTIC MOSQUITO.

It Is About the Most Terrible Insect Pest In the World.

"Nothing that has ever been written about the arctic mosquito begins to come up to the real thing," said a guest in the St. Charles corridor the other evening. "I went up the Yukon river in the summer of 1896, representing the Alaska and Dominion Trading company, and we struck mosquitoes as soon as we got into the hills. They are twice as large as our familiar bayou species, and their sting is like the prod of a hot needle. They sweep along the valleys in dense clouds, and if they catch a man unprepared they are liable to blind him before he can escape. I heard stories of children being stung to death and can readily believe them.

"Whenever we went ashore we wore heavy hat nets and took the utmost precautions but were certain to suffer more or less. One of our party cut the tongues out of his shoes, and a narrow line of sock was exposed under the lacing. Next day he was bitten there at least a hundred times, and his feet were so terribly inflamed that the shoes had to be cut off.

"Another man, a fireman in the boat crew, got drunk on Alaska whisky one afternoon and lay down to take a nap in a corner of the engine room. I noticed him a little later and was horrified at the solid brown mass of mosquitoes that had settled on a small exposed section of his cheek and throat. In an hour his face was swollen out of all resemblance to anything human, he was unable to swallow and was burning with fever. It was a week before he was able to be about. I saw a number of cattle near Fort Hamilton that had been made stone blind by stings near the eye.

"The arctic foothill mosquito is without doubt the most terrible insect pest in the world."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Bright's Disease Pronounced Past Hope by Physicians—South American Kidney Cure is the Life Saver.

A traveller for a well-known western manufacturing firm was so hale and hearty that the possibility of his contracting kidney trouble was farthest from his mind, but through constant exposure Bright's Disease, that most insidious of ailments, laid hold on him. He doctored for months—physicians gave him but a short time to live. A friend who had derived great benefit from South American Kidney Cure recommended it to him. When he had taken seven bottles all signs of the disease had left him, and today he is as well as ever. Sold by Ormond & Walsh.

An Unprofitable Bone.

Last summer a friend presented us with a tortoise. I do not know whether our dog had heard of turtle soup or whether he regarded the creature as a new kind of bone that walked about; at any rate, he determined to eat it.

Whenever the tortoise started out on a constitutional down the garden path Gyp arrested it and carried it into his kennel, where he gnawed at the impenetrable armor till his jaws ached.

The calm and philosophical manner in which the tortoise resumed its interrupted promenade irritated the dog exceedingly, but no failure discouraged him. Whenever we reminded him of the tortoise, he would go in search of it all round the garden, peering into every crevice, till eventually the creature was found, and then fresh but futile attempts were made to extract the meaty portions from the shell.—

WESTERN MEN ACCEPTED.

The British Columbia Corps for Africa Will Be Taken.

Ottawa, Jan. 22.—The Department of Militia is at present in communication with the Elder-Dempster Steamship Co., in regard to the steamer Montrose as a transport for the Strathcona contingent. The Numidian, of the Allan Line, is said to be too small to hold the necessary number of men and horses, while the Montrose is a very much larger boat and could easily accommodate them.

Something also must be done with the British Columbian contingent. The Province has offered to send one hundred men, outfitted and equipped and cost paid as far as Halifax.

The Dominion has accepted this offer but has not yet been able to arrange for a transport. If the accommodation cannot be had on the Milwaukee, it is possible that the British Columbia men will be sent by the Montrose. It is not likely that Lord Strathcona would object.

HUMBLED THE SENATOR.

He Tried to Assert His Independence, but Failed Miserably.

The writer remembers a good many years ago when the late Ezekiel Clarke was a member of the state senate from Johnson county. It is well known that the senator or member from Johnson county is always expected to get a large appropriation for the state university. To fail would be political death. Senator Clarke was anxious to succeed and during the early part of the session voted for everything. If another senator had a bill, all he had to do was to go and whisper in Ezekiel's ear, and he would vote "aye."

One day, however, Ezekiel came into the senate with hair cut and a clean shave. He sat upright in his seat and began to slaughter right and left. State Senator George F. Wright looked across to where the senator from Johnson was sitting and inquired what change had come over the senator from Johnson county. The other senator replied that the appropriation bill for the state university had now passed both houses, and the senator from Johnson was going to make up for lost time.

Clarke kept on punching heads until the senator from Jefferson, Moses A. McCoid, rose and solemnly introduced a bill for an act entitled "An act repealing the appropriation for the state university." A broad smile passed around the room, and everybody except the senator from Johnson saw the joke. But the spirit of levity passed away from Senator Clarke. He at once assumed his humble attitude, and the other boys voted him as usual during the remainder of the session.—Des Moines Capital.

"We Told You So."

Last year when the walks on Water street were being put down this journal pointed out to Engineer Hay that the levels were bad. In some places the walks were too low and others too high. Anyone passing along this street on Saturday and yesterday must be convinced that we are right. In front of Mr. Sharey's on the east side, the walk is under water, and it is in many other places. The Council should not take long to make up its mind that a change in the management of the streets is needed.

It is freely stated that Col. Steele will be detached fro mthe mounted rifles and be given command of the Strathcona Rifles.

Ladysmith, Jan. 16. via Spearman's Camp.—Mr. Geo. Warrington Steevens correspondent of the London Daily Mail, died yesterday of enteric fever, and was buried at midnight.

He Lost the Hole.

Ed Tufts of Los Angeles was playing golf with a friend. When he drove from the third teeing ground, he sliced the ball badly and sent it away to one side. It stopped in front of a grazing cow, and Tufts came up just in time to see it disappear into the bovine mouth. When his opponent had made his stroke, Tufts untethered the cow and, with many sounding thwacks of his club, drove the beast to the third hole. There he made her disgorge the ball and, neatly holing it, announced that he had made the hole in two strokes. His opponent calmly finished the hole in seven and claimed the hole.

"But I made it in two," protested Tufts gleefully.

"No, you didn't," declared the other. "You made it in 39. You hit that cow 37 times, for I counted every stroke," and Tufts conceded the hole.—San Francisco Argonaut.

GLIMPSES OF SOUTH AFRICA.

Peace and in War—A Splendid Lot of Views

Southern Africa, that enormous expanse of tropically verdant territory extending from the Lambesi River to the Cape of Good Hope, has for a century or more lain dormant to the eyes of the civilized world. Only within the past two decades has public attention been drawn to the wonderful natural resources and mineral wealth of this wild and rugged land, and yet, within this period, marvelous creation of brilliant modern cities have supplanted the desert lands and kraals of savage tribes. The steady march of civilization, the all-pervading ambition to accumulate the wealth of diamonds and gold that lay beneath the crust of this benighted land, each has borne its part in the metamorphosis and added to the world the wonderful possibilities of that "Dark Continent" for the energy and enterprise that the 20th century will bring to light.

In no other country of the world has progress been marked with such adversity and strife as Africa. From the time the early Dutch settlers landed in the Cape Colony up to the present, there has existed almost a constant state of warfare; the natives disputing the advance of the Dutch and they in turn resenting the inroads of civilization. In spite of this, strenuous were the efforts of the colonists in their determination to turn to account the beauties and resources of the soil of their adoption, that today they enjoy the fruits of their successes in a paradise of tropical vegetation, a salubrious climate and surrounded by the richest advantages of intellectuality and luxuries of civilization.

Cape Town is the metropolis and seat of government of the Cape Colony. Its historical past and present is firmly linked with the traditions of the early Dutch and the Huguenots. True, the old forts and buildings of distinctly Dutch architecture still remain but magnificent edifices of the most modern type, beautiful botanical gardens and the public improvements are evidences of the wonderful advance of civilization.

Port Elizabeth is the Liverpool of South Africa. It is a great commercial center, supplied with some of the largest shipping interests in the world; a city of the most modern type, essentially English in character, and possessing some of the largest as well as the most architecturally magnificent buildings and public institutions in South Africa.

Natal is the beautiful, tropical Garden Colony. Its luxurious vegetation and glorious climate, its wide avenue of trees and fine buildings, the native Zulu servants and the picturesque costumes of the Orientals, lend an ear of peace and tranquility, while the marks of civilization and progress are in evidence at every turn.

Johannesburg, the Golden, with its fine architectural creations, public institutions and parks, possesses many attractions that easily place it as the foremost city of South Africa. Its great industry, mining, the apparently inexhaustible veins of gold-bearing quartz, in which upwards of seven hundred millions of dollars are invested, have been the attraction for the thousands and thousands of "Uitlanders," whose "grievances" are substantially the cause for the cruel war between Briton and Boer, the battles of which have been ranked as the "bloodiest of the century."

So great has been the interest manifested in South Africa and the progress of the war, and so eager the thirst for information, coupled with the demand for a Pictorial History incident to the scenes of warfare, that the publication of "Glimpses of South Africa" has been undertaken upon a scale of grandeur, fidelity and completeness never before though of, involving as it has an expense of extraordinary magnitude. In order that the work might be absolutely reliable and thorough in its characte, the publishers have contracted fo its authorship with Mr. Wymble Flemming, an Afrikander, whose authority upon South African matters is world-widely acknowledged. This gentleman,—born in the Cape Colony, having travelled over nearly every inch of the country south of the Lambesi River and lived in South Africa for nearly thirty years, with an extensive newspaper experience in Africa, England and America, the author of many interesting sketches of South African life and scenery, formerly connected with the consular service at Port Elizabeth, whose comments on the war have been so favorably received by the American press, and whose magnificent collection of photographs will appear in this work,—will present South Africa as it is today, with views of everything of public interest, including most of the important scenes of battle and a graphically illustrated description of each stage in the progress of the war.

This great work is published in serial form, and when complete will comprise the most magnificent collectoin of photographic reproductions of the British-Boer war and South Africa obtainable in this country. Portfolios distributed by the Morning Times. For particulars see announcement on another page of this issue.

REMAKING THE EARTH.

Changes That Are Easily Within the Range of Human Effort.

From the London Daily Mail.

Few people realize how completely of late years the surface aspect of this weanened old globe of ours has been altered and improved. The world of to-day, in fact, differs from the world of our ancestors, much as a society lady, in all the glory of fold and frill and furbelow, differs from her savage sister running wild in pestilential woods. As art has transformed the one, so has it the other.

Only the "Mme. Rachel!" who has made the earth, if not exactly "beautiful forever," at least a pleasant and healthful place wherein to dwell, is no charlatan with a dray load of cosmetics and a glib tongue, but a civil engineer, owning nothing more harmless than a few mysterious-looking instruments and a measuring tape.

And the marvel of all this is—that what has been done is but an infinitesimal fraction of that which may, and doubtless will, be done. Who can doubt for instance, that the great Sahara desert will one day be but a memory? It was an inland sea once. It would not be a very difficult matter to convert it into one again. A canal, sixty miles long, connecting with the Atlantic the vast depression which runs close up to the coast nearly midway between the twentieth and thirtieth parallels of latitude, would do the business beautifully. The water would not, of course, cover the entire surface of the desert. Here and there are portions lying above the sea level. These would become the islands of the new Sahara Ocean.

What would be the results that would ensue upon this stupendous transformation? Some would be good and some bad. Among the latter may be mentioned the probable destruction of the vineyards of Southern Europe, which depend for their existence upon the warm, dry winds from the great African desert. As some compensation for this, however, the mercantile marines of the nations affected would be enabled to gain immediate and easy access to vast regions now given over to barbarism, and a series of more or less flourishing seaport towns would spring up all along the southern borders of Morocco and Algeria, where the western watershed of the Nile sinks into the desert, and on the northern frontier of the Congo Free State.

In a similar manner the greater portion of the central Australian desert, covering an area of fully a million square miles, might be flooded. The island continent would then be reconverted into a gigantic atoll, and would resemble, roughly an oval dish, of which the depressed central portion would be covered with water and only the "rim" inhabited. In this connection it may be interesting to note that a company has actually been formed for submerging the Yuma desert in Southern California. If the plan as at present proposed is carried out a tract of absolutely uninhabitable territory comprising nearly 12,000 square miles, and the greater portion of which lies between 500 and 1,000 feet below sea level, will be submerged.

A few Englishmen—known as "Little Englanders"—still blame the Government for insisting upon the reconquest of the Soudan. "A useless acquisition," say they. Perhaps! But capable judges believe that it would have been little less than suicidal to have allowed these regions to have fallen into the hands of France, for the simple reason that her engineers, by diverting the course of the Nile at Abu Hamed or Berber—no very difficult task—could at any time turn all upper Egypt into a desert.

It has even been suggested that it might be possible—by turning its waters into one of the many lateral ravines which run at right angles to the present course of the river—to find a new outlet for it into the Red Sea, and thereby to transform, in process of time, that sheet of water into a great fresh-water lake. To accomplish this it would be necessary to build a giant dam across the southern "neck" near Perim, and to regulate, or rather stop altogether, the inward flow of the Mediterranean through the Suez Canal—a big task, but one not impossible of accomplishment.

The above are examples of big schemes There are many others that might be mentioned, including, of course, the Panama and Nicaraguan canals, and the French "war canal" between the mouths of the Loire and the Rhone, which, when completed, will enable their ironclads to dodge round behind Gibraltar when passing from the Atlantic to the Mediterranean, or vice-versa.

But it is the comparatively little engineering feats which have slowly but surely altered in the past and will after in the future the face of the earth. Even so small a matter, for instance, as the proposed seawall at Southend will certainly deepen the estuary of the Thames, and may conceivably do away with the Goodwin sands.

A scheme was recently mooted to cut a ship canal through the centre of Ireland, beginning at Dublin and finishing at Galway. It would be no very difficult feat to accomplish for most of the country through which it would pass is flat and boggy.

But just consider the result. Ireland would no longer be one island but two, and many of the best of Moore's melodies would have to be rewritten. To allude to "Erin's green isle" would be a palpable misnomer. Even this, however, would be better than to have our own "silver Thames" transformed into a huge ditch, with ocean "greyhounds" and "tramp" cargo steamers belching smoke through Cliveden woods or over Cookham village.

Yet such an eventuality is by no means impossible, for it has already been bruited to construct a ship canal from Bristol to London by way of the Severn and the Thames.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Soak flannels in cold borax water. If very soiled, make a slight lather. Souse up and down and rinse well. They must never be rubbed.

Scrubbing brushes should never be allowed to soak in water, either hot or cold. Shake them when finished with and stand them in the air to dry.

Shoes that are not in use need to be aired and cleaned once in a fortnight at least, or they will not wear as long as if they had been worn each day.

A broom that is plunged into boiling suds once a week will become tough, so that it will last much longer, will not cut a carpet and will always sweep like a new broom.

The Architect.

One must wonder why it really is that so little is said or thought about architecture, the grandest, the mother, of all arts, a great, a most useful, science, one in which a greater revolution has lately taken place and in which more progress has been made, with more stupendous results, than in any other, remarks a writer in The International Magazine.

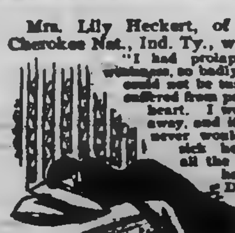
Was it not Richelieu who, paraphrasing an ancient writer, said: "If it is versatility you seek, go find an architect. He must be an artist, or his buildings will offend the eye; an engineer, or they will crumble into trouble; a lawyer, or he will get his patrons into trouble; a doctor, or his buildings will be hygienically unfit to live in, and, last, but not least, he must be a gentleman, or we will have nothing to do with him."

Time to Give Up.

An Iowa judge recently related an amusing incident that had occurred in his court when a colored man was brought up for some petty offense. The charge was read, and as the statement "The state of Iowa against John Jones" was read in a loud voice the colored man's eyes bulged nearly out of their sockets and he seemed overcome with terror and astonishment. When he was asked if he had anything to say or pleaded guilty or not guilty, he gasped out:

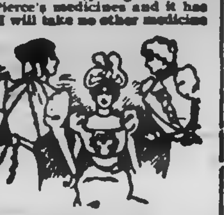
"Well, yo' honah, ef de whole state o' Iowa is ag'in dis one pore niggah I'se gwine to give up right now!"

Mrs. Lily Heckert, of Bartlesville, Cherokee Nat., Ind. Ty., writes:



"I had prolapsus, or female weakness, so badly that at times I could not be turned in bed. I suffered from palpitation of the heart. I would often faint away, and it seemed as if I never would recover; had sick headache nearly all the time, and also had St. Vitus's Dance. At the commencement of the monthly period the misery would be so great that I would be nearly crazy. I had doctored with five different physicians, but they did me no good. One of these doctors, of forty years' experience, said to me, 'I can't do you any good, so why not try Dr. R. V. Pierce's Favorite Prescription?' I wrote to Dr. R. V. Pierce and described my troubles. He wrote me a nice fatherly, kind letter in reply, and I followed his advice.

"Life is a pleasure to me now, instead of a burden as it was before. Three of my neighbor women have used Dr. Pierce's medicines and it has helped them all. I will take no other medicine but Dr. Pierce's and I recommend it to all my friends. The 'Favorite Prescription' helped me so much I always keep it in the house. I also have the People's Common Sense Medical Adviser and think it is a great book. I am willing to answer any letters of inquiry if stamps are enclosed for reply."



Her Neighbors.

Dr. R. V. Pierce is and for over thirty years has been, chief consulting physician at the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y. Thousands of women have written to him describing their symptoms, and, on following the advice he gives freely, have become well, strong and happy. Many sensitively modest women write to Dr. Pierce and so avoid the disagreeable questioning, examinations and local treatment so generally insisted upon by physicians. Dr. Pierce's medicines cure you in the privacy of your home, and Mrs. Heckert's case is only one of thousands that have been cured after the doctors failed.

RAN A RACE WITH DEATH.

Narrow Margin by Which a Man on a Railway Bridge Won.

A high trestle bridge more than a quarter of a mile long, supporting the single track of the Nickel Plate railroad, spans the valley of Grand river, east of Painesville, O. The bridge is little wider than the distance between the rails, and the ties are placed eight or ten inches apart, the space between being open to the river below.

A young man who crossed recently had a thrilling experience on the bridge. He had just passed the center when a fast train rounded the curve behind him. As the engine whistled he quickened his pace. With every step the train was rushing nearer, and there was not a moment to lose.

Once the young man stumbled and seemed about to fall, but quickly regained his balance and hurried on. As he reached the place for which he had started the train was close behind, and he had just time to swing himself over the side of the bridge as the locomotive thundered by. The ends of the ties were slippery with grease from dripping axle boxes, and his foot slipped wide as he left the track. His right hand, stretched blindly out before him, touched a round iron bar, bracing two parts of the bridge, and, with a grip like that of a drowning man, his fingers clasped around it. For a moment he swung in empty air. In another his left hand had found a place beside his right, and his feet touched the welcome edge of a brace below. With bleeding fingers clutching the slender iron bar that vibrated widely from side to side, moments seemed hours.

At last the train passed, and the young man was able to climb slowly to the track above. Unnerved by the trying experience, he lay for a moment stretched across the rails and, then rising to his feet, with blanched face and unsteady limbs, made his way to firm ground.—Cleveland Leader.

The Gilmore Limits.

The Gilmore lumber merchants had large limits north of this village, says the Bobcaygeon Independent, and after cutting on them for a number of years, about four years ago they closed the camps and gave up work. The increase in price has been so great that this year the Gilmore Co. have resumed work on their old and abandoned limits.

A BAD ACCIDENT AT MILLBROOK

A Gun Accidentally Discharged with Shocking Effect by two Boys While Playing.

Millbrook, Jan. 22.—One of the most shocking accidents that has startled our village for some time occurred about 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon to two boys named Alf Huffman and Willie Donnelly. It appears by the story of the around the corner of the barn on their Huffman boy that as they were going around the corner of the barn on their way to the woods, the gun which was being carried carelessly, accidently went off, and the other boy, who was about 3 feet ahead received the whole charge in the groin, splintering two ribs, one of which has since been removed; and passing through the lower part of the lung and coming out to the flesh on the side, taking with it pieces of clothing and making a bad looking hole, which the doctor states is liable to prove fatal at any moment. Another story is to the effect that the two boys were playing "Tommy Atkins," and "Gen. Joubert" discharged the gun. However we sincerely trust that no fatal results will follow, and that parents will take a lesson.

New Lumber District.

The extension of the Victoria brach of the G. T. R. from Haliburton to Whitney, on the Parry Sound Railway, will pass through about thirty miles of forest land untouched by the axe except in the case of pine. The vast mass of timber will be on the market for sale and extensive lumber operations will commence within a short time. The forest contains maple, birch, beech, elm, ash, hemlock, spruce and a considerable quantity of cedar—all woods in immediate request. The operations will probably consist of moveable camps and portable mills, and the families of the men engaged in the camps will reside at Whitney or Haliburton. Throughout the entire district north of this village, says the Bobcaygeon Independent, there is not an unemployed man, and the reports all concur in stating that so many men are employed in th elumber camps that it is difficult to secure men to do any work needed.

The Slaughter of the Deer.

Chief Game Warden Tinsley estimates the number of deer killed last season in the province at 6,000, an increase of about 1,000 over last year. Notwithstanding the large number killed this year, Mr. Tinsley thinks that the deer are holding their own, and at the present rate will not be all killed off. The number of hunters reporting was 6,500, but there were probably a thousand or more in the back country who did not report. The Express Companies carried about 2,000 carcasses to various cities and towns.

Chemong Lake Bridge.

A deputation composed of Warden Hawthorne, County Councillor Anderson, Mr. John Laing, M.P., and Mr. J. B. A wire was received yesterday from Mr. McWilliams stating that they had met the Minister this morning and that very satisfactory arrangements had been made.

WENT THROUGH THE ICE.

MR. R. H. LEARY LOSES A VALUABLE TEAM.

And Has a Narrow Escape From Death Along With Three Other Young Men.

Mr. Robert A. Leary, proprietor of the Oriental Livery Stables, undertook to drive a party of young men to Cobourg yesterday afternoon to see the hockey match, which took place in that town last night between the Cobourgs and Petrborough Colts' teams. The party, which consisted of Messrs. Leary (driver), Bully Denne, Dickson Davidson and A. H. Stratton, left town about three o'clock, intending to return early in the morning. They decided to take the winter route over the ice, crossing the river and Rice Lake. They drove down George-st. onto the ice at the mouth of the river. They got about one-third of the way over when the horses and rig went down. The carriage upset, the wheels on the right sinking and those on the left not going through. The result of this was that the occupants were thrown into the water and a fierce struggle for life again. Messrs. Stratton and Davidson, who occupied the rear seat, had the advantage, as they were able to climb out more readily than those in front. Mr. Davidson was first out, and heriocally proceeded to rescue the others. Mr. Stratton was soon safe, and Mr. Denne was next pulled out. Mr. Leary who wore a heavy coonskin coat, had a hard time of it. It was with the greatest difficulty that he was rescued.

The horses had disappeared soon after they got in, taking the carriage with them.

As soon as Mr. Leary was rescued the unfortunate young men were driven to town. A second rig belonging to Mr. Leary, also on its way to Cobourg, with a party was immediately behind the first.

As soon as Mr. Leary had a change of clothing he went back with grappling irons, and got the rig, which was not damaged. The water was about 20 feet deep at the spot where the accident occurred, and the current very strong. That the young men escaped with their lives is a wonder, as they all wore heavy coats.

The team was a valuable one and worth at least $300.

Behind Mr. Leary's two rigs on the ice was a farmer's sleigh.

Teams had been crossing the place for some time, heavy loads passing over.

Mr. Leary says that they intended returning before daylight. He thinks if the accident had taken place on their return there would have been lives lost. While his loss is serious, it is a cause for thankfulness that it was no worse.

The People's Jimmey.

The Toronto Globe says: The speech made by Hon. J. R. Stratton, Provincial Secretary of Ontario, on Friday night at the meeting held in West London in the interest of Dr. J. McWilliam, Liberal candidate for east Middlesex, was marked by much interesting information and convincing argument. His straightforward statements regarding the Government's procedure and its management of the finances, and his arraignment of the Opposition do-nothing policy and its leaders obstructive tactics, greatly impressed his hearers.

Results Follow.

Mr. J. M. Bygott, operator at the Grand Trunk station in town, lost a roll of bills, and after advertising vainly in the two evening papers, got his money by a little ad in the Times. Good results always follow an ad in this great family journal.

The Doctors to Blame.

A dipthera card was put up on a house on Dublin street yesterday. The patient was a child of about four years of age and its deat occurred Sunday night. No notification had been given the authorities of the existence of the disease and they were ignorant of it until the death occurred Yet there were no less than four doctors connected more or less and at different times with the case. The neighbors and friends evidently did not know of the danger of contracting the disease for their were a number of them in the house last evening.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

Bobcaygeon Independent:—In turning his attention to the improvement of hotel accommodation, Hon. J. R. Stratton might also give his attenion to stewed tea and boiled prunes, and if he could provide for a slight rest from the eternal 'ams-n-heggs', his name would be called blessed.

It is suspected that the expressions of disgust made by some of our citizens who have taken "headers" on the slippery sidewalk during the past week would not look well in print.

Belleville, Deseronto and Trenton are putting forth great efforts to secure industries, and we believe only those who hustle will get them.

The Grand Trunk are fitting all their locomitives with a new style of snow plow. These plows are left on the engines in fine weather this time of the year, because of the difficulty of removing them, and also to provide against a sudden change. They are said to work magnificently, going through a drift with the aid of one locomotive as readily as an old style plough backed by two engines. They have the additional advantage of being workable from the cab.

For four years Mr. Zingsheim suffered with piles but now his suffering has entirely vanished and he has gained twenty-five pounds.

John F. Zingsheim, Esq., of No. 9 Lark Street, Amsterdam, N. Y., writes: "I was afflicted with piles for four years brought on by heavy lifting. My suffering was extreme and the piles gradually increased in size notwithstanding the fact that I tried many different kinds of treatment. After becoming physically incapacitated and unable to work at all, and after much hesitation I wrote to you. I am very happy to state that your advice has done me great good. You advised Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, also his 'Pleasant Pellets.' They have cured me. I thank you most heartily for what you did for me. All suffering has entirely vanished and I have gained about twenty-five pounds in weight. I used only one bottle of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and one vial of the 'Pellets.'"

Piles is a disease that is usually treated locally with ointments which are well enough in their way but do not touch the cause.

This is where Dr. Pierce's medicines excel—they cure the cause of disease and of necessity the disease itself disappears. Piles are caused by a severe inflammation of the lining of the rectum and lower intestines, and this inflammation is due to the presence of effete, poisonous matter. To cure it two things are necessary. 1st—thorough cleansing of the bowels; 2d—the soothing and cooling of the inflamed membranes.

The first is produced by Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. Two little 'Pellets'—about twice the size of a pin head—are a dose. They are the pleasantest cathartic known. They do not gripe but they do their work.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cools and purifies the blood and acts as a general tonic to the whole digestive system, neutralizing and eradicating all poisonous, irritating matter.

The patient who takes these two remedies will not only find his piles cured but will soon discover that his general health is greatly improved.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets cure biliousness.

BRITISH IN NATAL HOLDING THEIR OWN AND GAIN GROUND STEP BY STEP

The War Office Reports That General Buller Intended Last Night to Seize Spion Kop, a Very Important Position Held by the Enemy.

Boers' Report That a Fierce Battle Had Been Waging Along Oliviers Kop Road for Several Days. British Subjects in Pretoria Shot for Refusing to Bear Arms Against Their Countrymen. British Artillery Did Great Execution on Saturday.

London, Jan. 24

The Daily Chronicle publishes the following heliograph message from Ladysmith, dated Jan. 22, by way of Zewart's Kop, Jan. 23—

"Yesterday we could see British shells bursting close to the Boer camp on the plateau this side of Potgieter's Drift, but the camp still remains in position there to-day. We heard very heavy firing all this morning. The bombardment here is very slack, but the Boer big gun on Mount Bulwana is still firing."

London, Jan. 24

Shortly before midnight the War Office announced that it did not expectt o issue anything during the night. There had been considerable activity at the War Office during the day, but at 7 o'clock p.m. and again at 9 it was announced that no further news had been received. At 11 o'clock the newspaper men attended by appointment and were asked to return by 11.30 p.m. They did so and then found Mr. Arthur Balfour and prominent men in attendance. Hopes ran high, and there was great disappointment when it was finally given out that nothing would be issued till Wednesday forenoon. General Buller's silence is beginning to create alarm.

2.15 a.m.

Contrary to the announcement made shortly before midnight by the War Office that nothing further would be issued until Wednesday forenoon, the following from General Buller, dated at Spearman's Camp, Jan. 23, 6.20 p.m., has just been posted—

"Warren holds the position he gained two days ago. In front of him at about 1,400 yards is the enemy's position west of Spion Kop. It is on higher ground than Warren's position, so it is impossible to see it properly.

"It can only be approached over bare, open steppes, and the ridges held by Warren are so steep taht guns cannot be placed on them. But we are shelling the enemy's position with howitzers and field artillery placed on lower ground behind the infantry."

London, Jan. 24

The Times publishes a letter from Ladysmith, dated Dec. 19, the writer of which says that the besieged then had full rations for at leat two months.

"The enemy is replying with creuset and other artillery. In this duel the advantage rests with us, as we appear to be searching his trenches and his artillery fire is not causing us much loss.

"An attempt will be made to-night to seize Spions Kop, the salient of which forms the left of the enemy's position facing Trichards Drift, and which divides it from the position facing Potgieters Drift. It has considerable command over all the enemys entrenchments."

London, Jan. 24

According to a special despatch from Pretoria it is reported there that fourteen field cornets will be exchanged for fourteen British officers.

London, Jan. 24

A despatch to the Daily Mail from Pietermaritzburg, dated Jan. 23, says:

"Lord Dundonald holds the road to Oliver's Hoek Pass. The latest arrivals from Johannesburg say that the Boer methods are working ruin to the mines. The Boers pick out the rich ore, leaving the cost of further developing to the shareholders.

"Stores are being robbed wholesale. The safe deposit vaults under the stock exchange have been broken open and jewellery and plate left by refugees have been extracted.

"Grass is growing in the streets and cattle are grazing in fashionable thoroughfares. There are still about 2,000 Utilanders here.

Boer Head Laager, Ladysmith, Monday, Jan. 22.

A battle has been raging along the Oliviers Hock Road since Saturday between the Boers under Pretorious and 6,000 British. The fighting is in full swing at Spions Kop.

The Boers under Botha and Cronje have been sent thither.

The British elsewhere are only making reconnaissances of the Boer positions. President Steyn was under fire at the formost position of the Free Staters.

"A letter received here from Harrismith relates that three Britishers were shot in the market square for refusing to go to the front when commandered."

BOERS' HEAVY LOSS.

London, Jan. 23.—Bennett Burleigh sends the following to the Daily Telegraph—

Spearman's Camp, Sunday, Jan. 21.—Throughout the day, Warren continued to advance steadily. Yesterday the Boers resisted stubbornly, but Hart's brigade, which, with Hildyard's, had the brunt of the infantry work to do, drove them slowly from hill to hill. The Dublins have been fighting grandly for 24 hours. The turning movement was then attempted by the Boers on lower ground, on our extreme left, but two batteries of artillery and the Devonshire Regiment stopped and repulsed them.

The enemy have two 6-inch Creusot guns, about four 15-pounders, and two machine guns. Their shell fire did little execution. The fire of our guns, Maxims and rifles was excellent.

Boers Losing Heavily.

Despite the strength and number of their works, the Boers are losing heavily, while our losses have been moderate.

This afternoon the Dublins tried to take a stiff position, by the bayonet. Our men are now adepts in advancing, and at taking all available cover when skirmishing.

Monday morning—Gen. Warren's guns cannonaded the Boer ranks during last night. The enemy's defences consist of numerous trenches, walls and redoubts, from which our troops successfully dislodged them in dashing style. The Boers endeavor to keep the majority of their men out of range, until they are actually wanted, and so do we.

Our wounded are doing well.

Winston Churchill sends the following—

Buller's Headquarters, Spearman's farm, Jan. 22, 3 a.m.—The Boers fought stubbornly all day yesterday. Their rifle fire was continuous for some hours, with occasional shots from the Hotchkiss guns, also from their artillery. Their artillery is supposed to be the ten guns captured by the Boers at Colenso, when they defeated Buller on Dec. 15.

British Losses.

The British lost few killed, according to reports, but many were wounded, though the number is moderate, considering the extent and character of the operations. The Boer loss is unknown. The casualties of General Warren's division on Saturday are given as 280 wounded.

The British attack on Saturday atP otgieter's Drift was merely a demonstration The naval guns and howitzers of Buller's main column were practically silent on Sunday.

Boers on High Hills.

At daybreak on Sunday General Warren's entire force again engaged the Boers and continued shelling them from the positions already taken. The attack was delivered at three points, on the Boer right, centre and left. The positions attacked were on a high range of kopjes, extending over an area of several miles. Eventually, all the positions were taken, except one, which the Boers continued holding all evening. The Dublin Fusiliers rushed one strong position, at the point of the bayonet, cheering wildly.

THE BOERS' REPORT.

Boer Camp, Upper Tugela River, Friday, UJan. 19.—The British now occupy three positions along the Tugela River. Their naval guns have beenf iring steel-pointed armiour-piercing shells.

Reports being received that 2,000 British cavalry were attempting to outflank us along the Drakensberg ridge, a strong patrol was sent to reconnoitre. Mistaking the signals, the scouts and patrol proceeded to a kopje whence a terrific rifle and Maxim gun fire suddenly opened.

The Boers lost 14 men killed and wounded. The British loss was probably insignificant.

The bombardment of the Boer position from Swartzkop was resumed yesterday, chiefly from a battery brought across the river. In the afternoon the cannonade became exceedingly brisk, and under cover thereof the infantry advanced in three lines to a second row of little kopjes which they occupied at nightfall, but later they retired to their old position.

During the night a score of shells were fired by the British, and a balloon was sent up to spy out the Boer positions.

The naval guns resumed the bombardment this morning from a new position but without results.

AT COLESBERG.

Pretoria, Sunday, Jan. 21.—A despatch from Colesburg, Cape Colony, says the British attacked the Boer position there at 10 o'clock this morning. There was heavy fighting, but the result is not known. According to the latest accounts, the Boers were holding their positions.

A despatch from Colenso, dated Thursday, Jan. 18, says a patrol of 200 men, under Field Cornet Opperman, while scouting, was surrounded, but succeeded in fighting its way back. It is reported that four men were killed, an dthat 30 were wounded and made prisoners.

LEYD'S BOASTS.

New York, Jan. 23.—A special to the World from Brussels says: Dr. Leyds, the Transvaal envoy extraordinary in Europe, said to-day: "I am as confident as ever of the ultimate triumph of our cause. A temporary success of the British arms would merely have the effect of infusing fresh vigor into our men and strengthening their determination to hold out at what ever cost."

SHOT UNARMED MEN.

Modder River, aJn. 22.—An Englishman who has arrived here from Bloemfontein, reports the British prisoners at Free State Capital are well treated.

He says that the Boers admit that a number of persons taken at Magersfontein were men without arms, who were in the act of filling water bottles at the river. The water was for their comrades and men. After quenching their thirst it was intended to return and resume the fighting.

AT KIMBERLEY.

Kimberley, Sunday, Jan. 21.—The Boers continue an active and heavy bombardment of this place.

TO MODDER RIVER.

Cape Toen, Jan. 23.—General Hector McDonald has started for Modder River.

In reference to the alleged refusal of Col. Gough to obey Methuen at the battle of Modder River, it is authoritively stated that no accusation has been made on either side, though it is evident there must have been serious disagreement, else Gough would not have left his command.

REPATRIATION OF OLD 100TH.

Ottawa, Jan. 23.—Hon. Dr. Borden, Minister of Militia, considers the present an opportune time to give fair consideration to the proposal to repatriate the 100th Prince of Wales Royal Canadian Regiment. He is of opinion that recent events indicate that the principal difficulty which stood in the way of carrying this desirable object into force, namely, difficulty in recruiting in Canada at Imperial rates of pay, need no longer be considered.

He also believes that repatriation would tend to establish closer connection between the regular army and the military forces of Canada, and would further cement the strong feeling of sympathy already existing between the mother country and the Dominion. These views he reported to the Cabinet, with the result that an Order-in-Council has been passed and approved providing:

1. That the name of the regiment now known as "Prince of Wales Leinster Regiment, Royal Canadians," with its depot at Birr, Ireland, designated as the 100th Regimental District," be changed to "The 100th Prince of Wales Royal Canadian Regiment."

2. That the Imperial Regimental system be continued, and that the depot of the regiment be transferred to Halifax, Nova Scotia.

3. That one battalion of the regiment be station in Halifax, N.S., and the other in the British Isles, or elsewhere in the Empire, the battalions taking turn and turn about to serve abroad.

4. That recruits for the regiment be enlisted in cities and towns of the twelve militia districts, and, when medically examined and passed as fit for Imperial service, be sent down at Imperial expense to the "100th Regimental depot at Halifax, N.S.

5. That when once reparation of the regiment is agreed to, all officers thenceforward shall be graduates from Kingston Military College, and from officers of the Canadian militia, who pass the usual standards required for admission to the Imperial service.

6. That the distinctive uniform askde for, in the petition to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales in 1897 be granted to the regiment, and the words "Royal Canadian," together with the maple leaf, be embroidered in white worsted on blue shoulder straps, edged with white.

7. That original distinctive national emblems, mottos, etc., emblematic of and historically connected with the formation of the 100th be granted the regiment, and that they may be borne on the colors, uniforms and appointments of all ranks.

8. That non-commissioned officers and privates at present serving in the ranks of the regiment be drafted out to other regiments and corps with the exception of a nucleus of 100 or so to act as drill instructers, etc.

A copy of the order has been sent to the Secretary of State for the Colonies.

DISGUISED HERSELF AS A MAN

Mary Fry Fell in Love With Another Girl and Was Found Out.

Coshocton, O., Jan. 23.—Miss Mary Fry of Barn Hill, Tuscarawas county, was arraigned before Mayor Cassingham Saturday morning charged with masquerading in male attire. Three months ago Miss Fry, who is 18 years old, applied at the Tuscarora Advertising Company and secured a position as pressfeeder. She gave her name as Fred Johnston, and during all that time not one of her co-workers suspected that she was other than the good looking and agile young man that her attire and manner betokened.

In fact, "Fred" became desperately enamored of a well-known young lady and at Christmas presented her with a handsome engagement ring. Last Sunday a Barn Hill resident while attending church in this city recognized Miss Fry as she entered the sanctuary escorting her lady love. Knowing of her mysterious absence from home the visitor began an investigation and finally confronted the young woman at her work in the factory. She acknowledged the deception she had been practicing and consented to return to her home. In the mayor's court she disclaimed any intention of wrongdoing.

She said her father had compelled her to perform the most arduous field labor until her face and hands had lost all semblance to girlhood and she then determined to make her way in the world in man's attire. Miss Fry has been domiciled as a favorite boarder in the home of a respectable family on Seventh street, and in her belongings in her room was found a complete feminine wardrobe. She donned female attire before leaving the city prison for her home.

Fenian Raids Delayed.

New York, Jan. 23.—An evening paper to-day quotes a general officer of the Clan-na-Gael, a man who has a good record as a fighter in the United States army, as saying—

"It would be folly to send men into Canada at this time of the year. They would have more to fear from the snow and intense cold than from any forces that the Canadians could send against them. Invasion of Canada just now is out of the question, but there will be preparations all along the line to take advantage of the break-up of the winter. I do not expect that the war in South Africa will have been ended by that time."

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 6.—Considerable money was raised for the Boer relief fund at a pro-Boer meeting last night held under the auspices of the local branch of the Holland Transvaal Relief Society. Judge Newkirk, of Ann Arbor, made the principal address to the 600 persons present.

GIRL CROWS LIKE A BABY.

Singular Affliction of a Ten-Year-Old Girl in a Baltimore Hospital.

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 22.—Dr. T. B. Futchers, of John Hopkins Hospital, has a peculiar case in his charge, and one that is extremely rare. The patient is Sarah Zeitlin, aged 10, daughter of Lewis Zeitlin. The child's ailment is what is termed, for want of a proper medical name, "child crowing."

It is cased by extreme nervousness and is foud only among children. It is produced by a severe fright, and, although it does not permanently disarrange the organs of speech, it causes a hesitancy in talking.

The child several weeks ago was picked up by a street car fender on Exeter street and badly frightened, though not injured. Her affliction, Dr. Futchers says, was the result of the scare she received. On Monday queer sounds resembling the first efforts of a babe, to make itself understood, emanated from her throat when the child attempted to speak. They were continuous and seemed to affect the little girl's health. A local physician was called in, and failing to give her relief, advised sending the child to the hospital.

The cries of the little one are plaintive and distressing. In tone they are infantile, and coupled with the intelligence of the child, which manifests itself in her facial expression, makes the case an interesting and somewhat pathetic one. The girl will undergo a course of thorough treatment, and electricity will be applied to bring her back to health.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

Hockey.

The President of the Trent Valley Hockey League, Mr. Wallace, has called a meetin gof the executive for Saturday morning to consider the protest of Norwood against the Campbellfords.

The Lakeviews are unable to get the Charlotte street rink and may have to go to Lakefield to play off their match with Keene.

The druggists have followed the hardware clerks and have organized for the winter, but they will have to get a hump on them if they want to catch up to the hardware men. The Princeton Tigers are not in it with the nailsmen, you just ought to see those black and yellow jerseys. You can hear them coming half an hour before they get in sight.

Yesterday's Mail says that the O. H. A. are thirty-two games behind their schedule up to Monday night. The sporting editor of the Mail is off his trolley, and pretty far off, too. There was only one unplayed game in the senior league and one in the intermediate when he wrote that item. In the junior league there are 3 of 4 games not played, making half a dozen in all—not the thirty as the Mail has it.

Both teams of the Royal Military College cadets were downd on Monday night and they are out of it.

No. 1 district of the Senior Series is getting mixed up. Iroquois beat Cornwall, Cornwall beat Iroquois, Cornwall beat Capitals and Capitals beat Iroquois. The Capitals play Cornwall to-night at Ottawa, and if they wi they should beat Iroquois out and take first place, but if the latter should win there would be a tie all around.

The schedule is too late with district No. 4, Senior League. The games are too far apart and the last on is too close to the semi-finals.

Frontenac III. play Peterborough Colts on Friday night here, and Peterborough Seniors go to Toronto on Monday night.

Odds and Ends.

Prof. Donovan, one of the world's best teachers of the manly art, thinks that Corbett has a chance to win his fight with Jeffries.

Trinidad, on of the West India islands, is having a series of test cricket matches just now, in order to pick out a team to represent that island in England during the coming summer. If this cruel war is not finished soon, there won't be much cricket played in England next spring and summer.

The Brockville Times of Tuesday, last week, says—"A commercial traveller in town yesterday stated that the citizens of Port Hope raised $160 for a volunteer who signified his intention of going to South Africa with the second Canadian contingent. When he got the money he bade his friends adieu and started for the Northwest. He has not been seen since."

CONTRABAND OF WAR.

Under the caption of "What Constitutes Contraband of War" the Montreal Herald gives prominence to a highly interesting interview with the Hon. David Mills. As many of our readers are aware there are few men on this continent whose interpretation of international law and usage would take precedence to the Canadian Minister of Justice, and therefore the utmost significance may be attached to the expression of his opinion on this question.

According to Mr. Mills, England is perfectly justified in seizing German and American ships supposed to contain contraband of war in Delagoa Bay. In fact, both Germany and the United States have furnished Great Britain with abundant precedent for the course she has persued. It makes no difference that these vessels were bound for a neutral port so long as their cargoes were destined for a belligerent and what is known as a continuous voyage. This doctrine was affirmed by distinguished English jurisconsults a hundred years ago, and reaffirmed by the United States during their late civil war. And, it has, we believe, never been questioned by any other great nation. Moreover, as Mr. Mills says, extreme necessity justifies extreme action. During the Franco-German war, Germany seized six English ships, which were not accused of carrying of carrying contraband of war, and sunk them in the Seine to obstruct French navigation. Of course the owners were subsequently recouped for their loss, as England will have to recompense the owners of unoffending vessels that may be detained by her, but all the same the arbitary act was not deemed a violation of international law. Krupp guns and other war material shipped for Delagoa Bay have only one destination and England's right of search cannot be questioned because Delagoa Bay is a neutral port.

TREASON IN CAPE COLONY.

In England a continuous stream of indignant criticism is being poured over the War Office and the Ministry for mistakes made in the equipment and despatch of the troops, but it is safe to say that had Her Majesty's Ministers been guilty of half the misdeeds of the Schreiner Government, observes the London Empire, they would have been overwhelmed and swept aside by the force of public opinion. There must be a day of reckoning in store for the men who so disgracefully abused their trust in the Cape, and for those hundred of British-Dutch subjects who have ever since the war broke out betrayed, abused, and slandered the British soldier. The charges against the Schriener Ministry are these —

1. That they deliberately withheld men and guns from Kimberley and Mafeking.

2. That they deliberately reduced the strength of the Cape Mounted Rifles.

3. That they deliberately starved the volunteers of British birth.

4. That they did not call out the volunteers until they were forced, and that they did not arm them with Lee-Metfords until after the war broke out.

5. That they permitted one million rounds of ammunition to be conveyed by Cape Government railways to the Free State when it was shown that war was certain.

6. That one of the Ministers, Mr. Sauer, a man condemned by his own brother for his Boer sympathies, excused the conduct of President Steyn in connection with the invasion of the Cape.

7. That they did everything to make Sir Alfred Milner's task more difficult.

Had English Ministers been guilty of those breaches, or any one of them, they would have been dismissed amid the execrations of the public, if they were not impeached for high treason; and one of the first duties of the Cape loyalists, when they have dealt with the enemy within their borders, will be to take Mr. Schreiner and his colleagues sternly in hand.

GREAT BRITAIN AND RUSSIA IN AFGHANISTAN.

In the light of the contradictory reports that come by cable concerning Russia's menace to Afghanistan, a paper read recently before the Kaiser at the Berlin Military Society is deemed to have considerable significance. Col Count York von Wartenburg, chief of a department of the general staff, was the author of the paper, the title of which was "Afghanistan and the Anglo-Russian Rivalry in Asia." The Count, after comparing the Russian and British military forces in Asia that would be immediately engaged should war break out, revealed the probable plan of operation of both countries.

He said that the occupation of Herat by Russia would be followed by the seizure of Kandahar by the British and this would give rise to a struggle for the possession of Kabul. In such a case an important point would be the attitude of the natives of Afghanistan, and it would remain to be seen which side the Afghan forces of 37,000 men would espouse. Count York von Wartenburg believes that diplomacy will then proceed to decide the question by war, for which eventually Russia's position is not unfavorable.

The Ameer, the Count pointed out, would feel far less concern at the seizure of Herat than at the occupation of Kandahar, since the latter place, in comparison with Herat, is more closely allied to Afghanistan. Moreover, Great Britain has given way so frequently, while Russia hitherto has always steadily carried out its own aims. The Count asserted that if once the Russians gained Kabul, India would be seriously threatened. On the other hand, if Great Britain succeeded in preventing Russia from occupying Kabul and driving it from Herat, then the present condition of affairs would simply be restored. It was impossible, he said, for Great Britain to attack and defeat decisively the Russian fighting strength at Samarcand and Merv, and in the event of war in that region Russia would have at stake only a part of its forces and political position in Asia, while Great Britain would be risking its all? As Count York von Wartenburg is an acknowledged military authority in Germany, his remarks are widely cited and commented on by all the military press of Europe.

The Greatest Banquet.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I had an argument with a friend a few days ago regarding the banquet given to the Hon. J. R. Stratton. My friend contended that it was one of the greatest banquets, as regards numbers, that has ever taken place.

Would you kindly state whether or not this is true, and oblige.,

ENQUIRER.

Answer—The Stratton banquet was no doubt a very successful affair, but it cannot be classed amongst the great functions of the kind that have taken place in Europe. For instance a banquet took place Aug. 18, 1889, when the 40,000 mayor of France sat at a table in the Palais de l'Industrie in Paris. There were three relays of about 13,000 guests each. To prepare the feast required seventy-five chief cooks, 13,000 waiters, scullions, cellermen and helpers; 80,000 plates, 52,000 glasses, knives, forks, and spoons in proportion, 40,000 rolls and fish, meat and fowl by the ton. The banquet was part of the centenary celebration of the events of 1789.—Editor Times.

Hats Off, Ladies.

In some sections of the country the question is being discussed whether women should not remove their hats in churches as well as in theatres. The man who, in order to see the minister at all is compelled to keep time with an aggregation of nodding plumes each Sunday in the seat directly in front of him will readily answer this question in the affirmative. Really there is no reason why women should wear their hats in public places and men be compelled to remove theirs. It is simply a custom of long standing which probably originated from the fact that a woman's headdress is not so easily taken off and put on as a man's. It is stated that in some places the women have voluntarily adopted the practice out of regard for the comfort and convenience of others.

People's Right to Criticise

The Bowmanville Statesman is not satisfied with the way council affairs have been conducted in that town lately, and speaks its mind as follows:

The town council is composed of citizens who accept the position of public servants under binding legal and moral obligations to treat every citizen fairly and justly. Too often, however, they fancy themselves autocrats and give vent to their likes and dislikes in a manner that evidences disregard of all pledges to act without fear, favor or affection. This accounts for the descredit brought on the position at present. Some who still hold down the chairs consider themselves above criticism and if anyone dares to say an adverse word he is boycotted and no amount of reasoning can move them to give him fair play. We contend that it is an imperative duty resting upon every citizen to watch the men entrusted with the transaction of public business, and to know what is being done. They are our servants and should not complain if they are watched and fairly criticised. Indeed, honest men and who desire to do right will invite honest criticism of their public action. While to assist and advice may be better than watching, still it is a duty the people owe to themselves to watch their public servants. If the people are careless there are always men who will step in and gain their selfish ends. It is a very great mistake to elect men and then leave them to make a good or bad record, as they may be inclined or influenced to do.

Nogales, Ariz., Jan. 22.—A message from rtiz, a station on the Sonora railroad, ports that carriers from Macoyate con- rm the account of the last stand of the aqui Indians against the Mexican gen- al, Lorrenzo Torres.

Official telegrams received in Nogales ace the Mexican loss in killed and wo- nded at 80, and a message sent over the overnment wires last night confirms e report of the killing of the Yaqui chief etabiate, along with 200 of his best figh- rs.

The 500 Indians taken prisoners will be rought into Ortiz to-morrow, and also ather Beltran and the Josephine sis- rs, who were rescued.

Cameron Was Ill.

Winnipeg, Jan. 22.— Ex-Premier reenway is out with a statement hat his colleague, ex-Attorney-Gen- ral Cameron, was ill when one of he notorious deals was made with the .P.R., which accounts for Cameron's gnorance displayed on the platform efore the elections. Many believe reenway's statement, as those who now Mr. Cameron think him too hon- st a man to acquiesce in Greenway's Waskada deal. Cameron remains si- ent. He cannot talk, excepting to disagree with Greenway.

Wants a Divorce.

Bridgeburg, Jan. 22.—Last week, a lady and a youth came across on the dummy and asked to see the squire. The lady proved to be the former Mrs. Sternaman, who won considerable notoriety by being tried on a charge of murdering her husband. She produced a marriage certificate issued at Niagara Falls, Ont., in which the contracting parties were Olive Adele Sternaman and Frank Gutenberg. The lady stated that she wished a divorce from her present husband. She also threatened to prosecute him on a serious charge. She was referred to the police magistrate, who made out the necessary papers.

Biggest Ships in the World

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 22.—President Hill, of the Great Northern, to-day gave out a description of the big ships which are now being built for the Oriental trade, to run in connection with his railroad. Four vessels will be ready for service in eighteen months.

Each ship will be 720 feet long by 74 feet amidships, 50 feet from water to deck line, and will have a carrying capacity of 22,000 tons. The ships will be the largest in the world, exceeding the Oceanic, and will be able to carry freight at low rates.

MATRON AND MAID.

Mrs. Joseph Chamberlain is not the typical American girl which some people represent her to be.

Mrs. Mary Lease has renounced her residence in Kansas and will hereafter make her home in New York.

The Duchess of Sutherland frequently attends meetings of socialistic women in company with Miss Margaret MacMillen, a socialistic lecturer.

Miss Mayme Jester, a niece of Buffalo Bill, is said to be the only female press agent on the road. She left the newspaper business to go into this new field.

Miss Emma Thursby has returned to New York and will resume work with her pupils at once. A recent report of her illness was unfounded, as she is quite well.

Dr. Cornelia de Bay of Chicago, a successful woman physician among the Dutch of that city and herself of Dutch descent, is about to give up her practice and go to the Transvaal as an army nurse.

Mrs. Julia Grant, widow of General Grant, will complete her personal memoirs before Christmas. She has been engaged on the work for nearly ten years. Society is interested in the appearance of Mrs. Grant's book.

Miss Anne M. de Beck, who heads the movement among Chicago women for the presentation of $5,000 swords to Generals Wheeler and Lee, has already had the designs for the swords worked out and announces that over half the necessary funds have been promised.

A young girl, Miss Emma M. Hery, is the superintendent of the Denver public schools. She was a newspaper woman and an active member of the Denver Woman's Press club. She is a Democrat and was elected on the straight ticket. Her opponent was also a woman.

It is rumored in Paris that Amelie Rives, now the Princess Troubetskoy, will settle there permanently and establish a literary salon for the purpose, primarily, of securing a French translation of her literary works and such other recognition as she thinks they deserve.

Mrs. John M. Thurston, the bride of the Nebraska senator, is described as of medium height, graceful, with changeful dark gray eyes, occasionally flashed with blue, perfect figure and mobile features. She was born in Tallahassee, Fla., 27 years ago and is a graduate of Wellesley.

Under the stimulating influence of Miss Grace King, the historian of New Orleans, the Louisiana Historical society is to establish in the Crescent City a historical museum. The society hopes to obtain by and by the Cabildo building, an old and historic pile now occupied by the state supreme court.

CHICAGO AND GRAND OPERA.

Chicago, having tired of grand opera, now proposes to become the world's art center, regardless of expense.—Grand Rapids Democrat.

One explanation of the failure of the grand opera season in Chicago is that the people are saving their money to buy automobiles.—Kansas City Star.

Mr. Grau says Chicago is a poor town for grand opera. The people out there will probably strike back by declaring that Grau is an all fired poor judge of packed meat.—Washington Post.

After losing a great deal of money Manager Grau has discovered that Chicago does not care for grand opera, her people being busy listening to the grunt of dying hogs and having no time to hark to the trills of a Sembrich.—Louisville Post.

Chicago is feeling rather mortified over the cold reception it gave to Mr. Grau. It would seem that Chicago is about on a par with Rochester as a "musical center" in the matter of giving welcome and support to great artists.—Rochester Democrat.

THE FRENCH PRESS.

Sober minded Frenchmen think that undue attention has been paid in England to the obscure draftsmen whose vulgarities have adorned the pages of the Parisian gutter press.—Philadelphia Record.

Considering all the abuse the English papers heaped upon France in the matter of Dreyfus, it is not surprising that the French papers should retaliate with unfavorable comments upon English policy.—Philadelphia Times.

The sort of cartooning to which Queen Victoria is being subjected in the comic papers of Paris is a reminder of the fact that there is no country in the world where that sort of journalism descends to such depths as in France. Its cleverness and keenness are impaired by coarseness and indelicacy.—Boston Herald.

Job for D. C. Fraser

Victoria, B. C., Jan. 20.—D. W. Sample, editor of the Dawson City Gleaner, who is here to carry an appeal to the Minister of Justice against the decision of Judge Dugas, states that it is reported in Dawson that D. C. Fraser, M. P., for Guysboro, is to succeed Wm. Ogilvie as commissioner of the Yukon before the next general elections.

LOVE ON THE FARM.

A potato went on a mash
And sought an onion bed.
"That's pie for me," observed the squash,
And all the beets turned red.
"Go away," the onion, weeping, cried;
"Your love I cannot be;
The pumpkin be your lawful bride,
You cantaloupe with me."

But onward still the tuber came
And laid down at her feet;
"You cauliflower by any name,
And it will smell as wheat;
And I, too, am an early rose,
And you I've come to see,
So don't turn up your lovely nose,
But spinachat with me!"

"I do not carrot all to wed,
So go, sir, if you please,"
The modest onion meekly said,
"And lettuce, pray, have peas!
Go think that you have never seen
Myself or smelled my sigh.
Too long a maiden I have been
For favors in your eye!"

"Ah, spare a cuss!" the tuber prayed,
"My cherryshed bride you'll be;
You are the only weeping maid
That's currant now with me!"
And as the wily tuber spoke
He caught her by surprise
And, giving her an artichoke,
Devoured her with his eyes.

HE WASHED DISHES.

The Hard Job One Boy Had All the Way to Europe.

The girls who have complained in various keys because they had dishes to wash may be glad to hear of a young man who can look at the matter through their eyes, perhaps more so. He had shipped as "boy" on a cattle steamer for Europe because he wanted to save as much as possible on his transportation, and—but the rest of the story sounds better in his own words:

"About 4:30 in the morning I was awakened and told to go to work. I hastily dressed, for the first and last time on board, for during the rest of the voyage I took care not to undress. It seemed scarcely worth while. I arrived on deck and found the steward waiting for me. He showed me into the pantry, introduced me to 'Pants,' as the pantryman was called, and told me that my chief duty during the voyage would be to wash dishes.

"There was already a large pile of dirty dishes waiting to be washed, and I rolled up my sleeves, fixed the hot water and began to work. I had these almost done when another and larger lot was brought in from the dining room. This proved to be the daily programme. I no sooner had one pile washed than others were brought in, and I was never done. I don't think I ever saw so many dishes before in my life, and I hope I never shall again. There were 60 passengers aboard besides the cattlemen, and six meals were served each day. From the dishes that came out to be washed, I think that each passenger must have used at least six plates at a meal."—Detroit Free Press.

Destroying the Point.

Every one knows the man who is notorious for so telling a story as to destroy its point. An English nobleman, Lord P., was noted for his success in thus ruining the prosperity of a story. The author of "Collections and Recollections" exhibits a specimen of his lordship's peculiar art.

Thirty years ago two large houses were built at Albert Gate, London, the size and cost of which seemed likely to prohibit tenants from hiring them. A wag christened them "Malta and Gibraltar because they can never be taken."

Lord P. thought this an excellent joke and ran round the town, saying to every friend he met:

"I say, do you know what they call those houses at Albert Gate? They call them Malta and Gibraltar because they can never let them. Isn't it awfully good?"

Some one told Lord P. the old riddle, "Why was the elephant the last animal to get into the ark?" to which the answer is, "Because he had to pack his trunk."

Lord P. asked the riddle of the next friend he met and gave as the answer, "Because he had to pack his portmanteau."

The Center of Population.

"Census experts estimate," says the Chicago Post, "that the center of population will be found next year to be in Indiana, close to the Illinois line, at a point not far removed from the town of Vincennes. The last census showed the population center to be between Columbus, Ind., and Cincinnati. The increase in the population of Georgia, Texas, the Indian Territory, Oklahoma, New Mexico and Arizona during the last ten years has been sufficient, it is thought, to offset any increase in the northwest and to possibly pull the center somewhat to the south of the 1890 parallel. The wealth center is thought to be in the neighborhood of Sandusky, O."

Animal Criminals.

A writer in Forest and Stream says that the criminal tendency is manifested to a greater or less extent by all the lower animals, and he has compiled a list of 18 crimes which are commonly committed by birds, beasts or reptiles. The indictment includes murder, parricide, fratricide, suicide, theft, kidnaping, highway robbery, polygamy and drunkenness.

Successive Waves.

The following waif is going the rounds of the state press: We are told of a young lady in a neighboring town who waved her hand at a stranger, and in three days they were married. Two days later the young lady waved a flatiron at her husband, and the next evening he came home waving a divorce.—Nashville Banner.

Origin of Diamonds.

The origin of diamonds, which for so long has been a debated question, appears to be explained by a recent discovery near Kimberley.

In both the Indian and the Brazilian diamond fields the gem occurs like a pebble in certain gravelly strata, but has not been traced back to any rock that gives any indication of its genesis. After the discovery of diamonds in the river sand of some South American rivers a peculiar material of a brownish buff color, which turned to a dark bluish tint, was found. It became darker as the miners dug down. The diamonds lay in this material, together with several other materials, such as garnets, iron ores, augite, olivine, etc. Excavations, begun systematically, were eventually carried on on such a large scale that near Kimberley they reached a depth of more than 1,400 feet. Here the rock is about as hard as ordinary limestone. The blue ground is found only in limited areas. The rocks around are of dark shades, banded with hard sandstone, in which sheets or dikes of basalt or some material which was once in a molten condition are occasionally found. The blue ground fills a sort of shaft of colossal size in these other rocks and is itself cut up by similar dikes. The opinions of geologists differ as to whether the gems are produced where they now lie or have been formed of some volcanic explosions. Experts now tend to the belief that the blue ground in which diamonds were found is not the true birthplace. The bowlders are often watermarked and may have rested for ages in an ancient gravel at the very bottom of sedentary rocks of the district. In course of time volcanic explosions shattered the rocky floor in which the diamonds were imbedded, of which the bowlders were only samples, and dispersed it, together with the overlying materials. It is believed that this is the true explanation of the formation of the diamand bearing blue ground.

Tea Drinking and Cold Feet.

Professor Hutchinson, F.R.S., reports the case of a lady who could not take tea because it made her feet icy cold and wet with perspiration. She thought that the soles were chiefly affected and that the hands were also made cold, but not so markedly as the feet. Mr. Hutchinson had long been familiar with the fact that tea made the feet of some persons cold, but did not know that cold prespiration attended it. He believed the coldness to be caused by contraction of the arteries, inasmuch as the feet shrank. Alcohol had usually an opposite effect.

Sing While Marching.

A German army doctor has discovered that singing possesses health giving properties. He claims that it intensifies the respiratory movements, thus rendering the lungs capable of dealing with more air. This increases and strengthens the action of all the organs of the body. Appetite and thirst increase, and the more frequent movements of the diaphragm materially aid digestion. German foot soldiers are therefore encouraged to sing on the march.

Electric Bell Substitute.

A substitute for an electric bell has been devised by a deaf couple. Not being able to hear the bell themselves, and having no servant, they have fixed up an arrangement by means of which when the button at the front door is pressed, the electric lights all over the place light up, and remain so until the button is released. By a reversal of the arrangement, all the lights are switched off when the button is operated after dark.

FEELING AGAINST ONTARIO.

On Account of the Regulations Saw-Logs.

The Tyranny of the Transvaal Government Brought Home to the People of The United States.

Special to the Times.

Washington, Jan 23.—Perhaps in the history of the White House no more sumptuous banquet has taken place there than the state dinner last night in honor of the foreign ambassadors and ministers. The flower of the evening was the orchid, which is now in the height of its season, and a low estimate of the value of these expensive blooms used on the long table, was $1,000. The plant ornamentation marked the path of the special guests of the occasion on their way to their cloak rooms, which were arranged in the executive offices up stairs. While a part of the orchids used on the table were grown in the White House conservatories, the larger part of the finest varieties were secured from outside. President and Mrs. McKinley received in the east room, Col. Bingham being present, with Major McCawley, to make the instructions to them. The brilliant uniforms of the ambassadors and ministers, and the flashing of the gems worn by the fair sex, made the elegance of the gowns a rather subordinate feature. Lady Pauncefote's jewels, tiara and corsage ornaments, were especially numerous. Her dress was of black lace over pale yellow. The Marine Band, as usual, played in the conservatory during the dinner.

FEELING AGAINST ONTARIO.

Considerable feeling has been aroused among Congressmen from the lumber districts, by the announcement that the province of Ontario has decided to require that all spruce timber cut upon crown lands there, shall be made into wood pulp within the province instead of being exported to the United States for manufacture. That is to say, spruce will be brought under the same regulations that now apply to pine. It is also feared that Quebec will soon prevent the exportation of unmanufactured logs by imposing very heavy stumpage dues and allowing a rebate of nearly the whole amount if the lumber is manufactured at home. If these measures go through, and it is said there is little doubt that they will do so, it will mean the cutting off of the main supply to American paper mills, and the transfer, at least to a certain extent, of the paper making industry to Canada. The only resource of the United States government that can be used at present to check this, is found in the Dingley bill, which imposes a retaliatory duty on wood pulp coming from countries which discriminate against the United States. Nearly a million dollars a year of wood pulp is imported by this country from Canada, and the stoppage of this at the very time that paper is so high and bids fair to go higher, is a serious matter. Whatever the ultimate result of Ontario's move, however, the first effect will probably be to stop the agitation in this country in favor of abolishing the duty on both wood pulp and paper, for to pass such an act under the Canadian proposed rules, would simply be to invite American mills to move away from this country into the boundaries of the Dominion.

Canadian Canals.

The deepening of the Canadian canals to 14 feet has caused some little discussion in this country of the facilities thus afforded to the British navy to penetrate to the Great Lakes and harry the United States lake cities, and has been used as an argument for the creation of a great navy. The concensus of opinion, however, is that Great Britain would never risk her ships in a canal exposed to hostile attack for a distance of so many miles. Before a squadron could reach even Ontario, it would have to run the gauntlet of the St. Lawrence River, which skirts New York state for a hundred miles, and in that distance there are no less than fifteen canal locks, the destruction of any one of which would bring the squadron to a halt. The commerce through the "So" canal in 1899, is stated by the Treasury Bureau of Statistics to exceed that of any preceding year. As compared with the preceding year, the number of sailing vessels increased 7 per cent., and the number of steamers 15 per cent.

U. S. Consul Graham, of Winnipeg, under date of December 23, 1899, writes—"The Dominion Government has undertaken the improvement of St. Andrews Rapids in the Red River of the North, to facilitate the navigation of that river. These rapids obstruct the river at 18 miles from its outlet into Lake Winnipeg. They are about 8 miles in extent, and are the only serious obstruction to navigation between the international boundary and the lake. The work will cost about $800,000."

THE TRANSVAAL GOVERNMENT.

The tyranny of the Transvaal government was brought home to Washington people recently, by the arrival here of R. E. Brown, who was deprived of the immense sum of $5,000,000 by the arbitrary act of President Kruger, after the Supreme Court of the Transvaal had awarded it to him. The award was so displeasing to President Kruger that he gave the judges a severe lecturing and threatened their dismissal from office. This amounted to a reversal of the verdict of the court, for Brown was never able to collect one dollar awarded to him.

THE NICARGUAN CANAL.

Both Houses of Congress have favorably reported bills for the construction of the Nicaraguan Canal under United States ownership and control. While no negotiations are under way for the abrogation of the Clayton Bulwer treaty, under which England might object to exclusive American control, it is understood that she will offer no opposition, if the neutrality of the canal in time of war is guaranteed by the United States, as of course it will be.

THE MILL RUNS ITSELF.

Economical Way of Doing Business on a Connecticut Farm.

Joe McCormick of the International Pulp company tells a delicious story of paper making in Connecticut, which shows that operating a mill is not such a serious matter as these big proprietors would have us believe. Strolling along the countryside in haymaking time, Mr. McCormick happened on a little paper mill which buzzed merrily in a shady dell, with everything clean and sweet around it. A look in the office showed no one there, and the visitor then wandered over the mill, hoping to find some one to whom he could talk business. The machine was humming along, and it seemed impossible that there should be no one in attendance. But even shouting failed to bring forth signs of life, and Mr. McCormick was about to leave when he spied some men in a hayfield some distance away.

"I say," he called out to the nearest one when he got within hearing, "who runs this mill?"

"I do," was the reply.

"Well, who's the owner?"

"Why, I am, to be sure."

"Do you mean to say that the mill runs itself?"

"Cert. We start her up at 6 in the morning, and she runs till 6 in the evening. This mill's been weaned, stranger; she don't need a nurse. While I'm getting in hay she puts half a ton of paper on the roll. Gee up, Bess!"—Paper Trade Journal.

Table Talk.

Rather curiously Roxane in "Cyrano de Bergerac" belongs to the modern type which dates from the days of the Hotel de Rambouillet and has always had its votaries in France. To those precieuses mere conversation was une betise. They liked declamations; discussion, not on the right of woman to the ballot, but whether she should be held a little higher than the angels or consent to be beloved. This phase of preciosity led up to the French salon, where that hothouse fashion of preparing an intellectual bill of fare for guests found its most acceptable phase.

Mme. Campan, whose advice may be said to have formed a whole generation of charming women, used to prescribe the subject of talk for dinner tables, just as certain coteries of women prescribe it today. This was her system: "With 12 at table, talk voyages and literature; with eight, the fine arts, science, invention; with six, politics or philosophy; with four, sentiment, romantic adventure; with two, talk of yourself; egoism belongs to the tete-a-tete."—Ellen Olney Kirk in Lippincott's.

SHAVING ACCIDENTS.

THE BARBER DISCUSSES THEM WITH THE MAN IN HIS CHAIR.

Chances to Cut Throats That Are Not Often Taken Advantage Of—Narrow Escapes From Serious Mishaps—A Father's Dream.

"Did it ever strike you," asked the little barber, "how easy it would be for the man that shaves you to kill you?"

The man in the chair sat up quickly and looked carefully at the barber, who was feeling the edge of the razor with one finger. The barber smiled to reassure his customer and said:

"It seems a queer question, I know, but it is a wonder to me that there are not a number of people killed in that way every year. It would be the easiest thing in the world for the barber as he wielded his razor to make one sweep with it and sever the jugular vein, and you would be dead almost on the instant. Suppose, for instance, that the barber should go insane. There would be nothing to prevent his doing such a thing, and you would have no warning nor any opportunity to save yourself.

"There is always a chance of a serious accident happening to the man in the chair. I have seen a number of such accidents and have a horror of even nicking the man I am shaving. In fact, such an occurrence makes me feel out of sorts for the rest of the day. It was only a few days ago that I almost had an accident that gave me a great fright and completely unnerved me. I was shaving a young man, and in passing from one side of the chair to the other a button of my waistcoat caught in his hair. It pulled a trifle, and he moved his head suddenly just as I went to put the blade to his face. I came within an ace of slashing him, and only a quick jump back saved him. The perspiration stood out on me, and I had to call one of the other men to finish shaving my customer.

"But the worst accident I ever saw in a barber shop occurred while I was working in a small town in the west. One of the patrons of the place was a business man whose 8-year-old daughter was lying at the point of death. Her father put in most of his time at her bedside. One afternoon while she was asleep he came in here to get shaved. He was so exhausted through lack of sleep that he fell asleep immediately after he had taken his seat in the chair next to the one behind which I was at work.

"He dreamed that some one had come into the place to tell him that his child had died. With a cry of alarm he started up just as the barber laid the razor against his neck. Into the flesh it sank. He was not yet thoroughly awake, and as he imagined that some one was holding him back from his child he threw out his hand to free himself, and his fingers closed over the blade of the razor. So dazed was he that he could not realize what had happened, but sat there in the chair, with the blood streaming from his throat and fingers.

"The man who had done the cutting was the first to act, although half crazed. He hurried for a doctor while we stanched the flow of blood the best we knew how. Even as the doctor was at work sewing up the wounds a messenger came to say that the little girl had died suddenly in the greatest agony, calling for her father just before she died. He was under the influence of ether at the time and did not know, but afterward, when he heard of the circumstances attending her death, he insisted that he had heard her call as he lay there asleep in the chair and that it was her cry that had caused him to make his sudden movement.

"For years after the accident he continued to shave in the same shop where it had occurred, and it was never mentioned. He carried a reminder of it for the remainder of his life. In addition to the scar on his throat, the fingers of his right hand were all drawn up and useless.

"Sudden movements while in the barber's chair are always apt to be attended with serious results, and I could recall dozens of instances where it has been only the merest chance that has prevented serious if not fatal mishaps. Nine times out of ten where the person getting shaved receives a nick and lays the blame on the barber he should thank the wielder of the razor that it was no worse. The probabilities are that it was quick action by the barber that prevented a bad cut. A slight nick often would have been a case for the doctor or coroner were it not for the watchfulness of the barber. Here yesterday I happened to draw blood from a young fellow's face near his ear, and he made a great fuss about it, until I showed him that it was only the sudden withdrawal of the razor which resulted in the slight nick that prevented him losing a good part of his ear. Then he was grateful and thanked me, besides promising to be more careful in the future.

"But there are other ways the barber has of getting even," continued the little barber after relathering one side of his customer's face. "There is no need of his slashing a man. He can inflict injuries that will make his victim decidedly uncomfortable, and at the same time the latter will not be aware of what is being done." What the barber meant by this last remark his victim did not ask.—New York Sun.

HEROINES OF PEACE.

When we read stories of the terrible Spanish Inquisition of the olden times, it seems as if the tortures they depict were almost beyond the invention of the most depraved and fiendish mind; and yet here in our own enlightened land and in this Nineteenth Century of Civilization, thousands of tender women—our own sisters, mothers and wives—suffering from some unnatural weakness of the delicate organism of their sex, are daily undergoing an almost equally terrible, physical anguish and martyrdom.

"It seemed as if there was an iron band around my head and it was being twisted tighter and tighter all the time," a New York lady said in trying to describe her terrible sensations.

"I could not walk across my room without suffering dreadful pains," said another lady, Mrs. May E. Jones, of 320 Madison Ave., Ypsilanti, Mich., in a letter to Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y. "I was troubled with female weakness. I had suffered for two years when I began taking your medicine but now after taking three bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription I am free from pain. I do all my housework and walk where I please—thanks to Dr. Pierce's medicine."

"It is the only medicine that relieved my terrible headaches," said Mrs. R. P. Monfort, of Lebanon, Warren Co., Ohio. "In very truth it is the only medicine ever invented that delicate and ailing women can positively rely upon to give them complete and permanent relief."

No other remedy was ever devised that so thoroughly rejuvenates the entire nervous system of women; healing and curing all weakened and diseased conditions of the feminine organism and restoring womanly strength and completeness. It is the only proprietary remedy ever devised for this one special purpose by an educated and eminent physician, a specialist of world-wide reputation in this particular field of practice. No woman need or ought to allow her whole nature, physical and mental, to be undermined by such ailments when by writing to Dr. Pierce she may obtain professional advice free of charge.

To Write His Obituary.

Rev. Jonathan Bastow, the esteemed pastor of the Murray street Baptist church, is in New York, where he went to attend the funeral of the late James Pyle, of pearline fame. Mr. Pyle and Mr. Bastow were life-long friends. Some years ago Mr. and Mrs. Bastow visited the Old Country, Mr. Pyle defraying the expense, and Mr. Bastow promised that he would attend his friend's funeral and write his obituary. On Sunday last he received the telegram announcing the death of his friend in New York, and at once hired a rig and drove to Port Hope, where he boarded the train for New York, arriving there on Monday morning in time for the funeral. Mr. Bastow will return this week.

Mrs. Greenwood Remembered.

In view of Mrs. H. S. Greenwood's early departure from town, the members of Peterborough National Home Reading Union, met and presented her with a handsomely bound set of Tennyson's poems. The presentation was made by Miss Halliday. Mrs. Greenwood replied in suitable words. Mrs. Greenwood will leave on Friday to take up residence with her father, Sir Henri Joly de Lothbiniere, for the winter at least, in his Ottawa residence. To-morrow afternoon Mrs. Greenwood will entertain the Mission Band of St. John's church, of which she is superintendent.

THE COUNTY COUNCIL.

MR. JOSEPH FOSTER IS ELECTED WARDEN FOR 1900.

January Meeting of the County Council—Business Put Through Yesterday

The County Council opened its January session at the Council Chamber in the court House this afternoon at two o'clock. The election of Warden was the first business in hand and resulted in Mr. Jos. Forster, representative from Smith, Ennismore and Monaghan division being elected. The members were all present:— Messrs. Hawthorne, Crowe, Forster, Fitzgerland, Eastland, Shaw, Peck, Anderson, Pearse and Buck.

There was a change in the method of electing the warden this year. Formerly it was by ballot. This year it was by nomination and open vote.

Mr. Stewart, county clerk, opened proceedings by calling for nominations for warden.

First Nomination and Vote.

Mr. Hawthorne moved that Mr. Forster be Warden. Mr. Anderson seconded this.

Mr. Pearse moved that Mr. Buck be Warden. This was seconded by Mr. Fitzgerald.

Mr. Shaw moved that Mr. Eastland be Warden. Mr. Crowe seconded this.

He first called for the vote on Mr Forster's nomination. Messrs. Hawthorne, Peck, Forster and Anderson voted favorably—4.

Then a vote on Mr. Buck was taken and it resulted in him receiving the votes of Messrs. Fitzgerald, Pearse and Buck—3.

Then Mr. Eastland's name was submitted and he received the support of Messrs. Crowe, Shaw and Eastland—3

Some suggestions was made of an adjournment but it was decided to take another vote.

Mr. Forster Elected.

Mr. Shaw moved that Mr. Forster be Warden. Mr. Eastland seconded this

Mr. Crowe moved that Mr. Buck be Warden. Mr. Pearse seconded this.

A vote was taken on this second list and Mr. Forster was elected on his nomination being put to a vote. Messrs. Hawthorne, Shaw, Eastland, Peck, Anderson and Forster made the necessary majority and he was declared elected Warden. This is Mr. Forster's second term, he having been Warden in 1892.

The Warden Introduced.

The newly elected Warden then retired, was robed and was introduced by Mr. Hawthorne. Mr. Forster in taking the chair thanked the Council for the honor they had done him by the election. While there were others who might fill the position better than he could, he believed he would receive the cordial support of all the members. He believed that the business would be transacted in the same unselfish way as in the past. The building of the Chemong lake bridge would be perhaps the most important matter of the year, and he was glad to know they were to be liberally assisted by the Government. He again thanked them.

The reading of the minutes of the last meeting of the Council were read and confirmed.

Appointments.

Mr. W. A. Stratton was appointed sessional clerk on motion of Messrs. Anderson and Pearse.

Mr. Fitzgerald moved that Mr. Geo. Bennett be appointed auditor.

Mr. Hawthorne moved in amendment that the appointment of auditor be left to the Committee on Appointments.

Mr. Pearse seconded this and the motion was carried.

Mr. Pearse moved, seconded by Mr. Buck, that the whole Council be a committee to strike the standing committees—Carried.

Mr. Killen, of Ennismore, was present and was heard. He said some parties who proposed tendering for the Chemong bridge had heard that the Government grant was not to be made and had stopped preparing tenders. Now that the work was going on, they were desirous to tender and desired that the time for receiving tenders be extended one week.

This matter was left to the joint committee to deal with.

The Warden read some communications of routine character.

An application for appointment as auditor was received from Mr. Geo. W. Bennett.

The communications were referred to the several committees.

Mr. Hawthorne moved, seconded by Mr. Crowe, that a by-law be prepared permitting the clerks of the several municipalities to return a summary of the assessment rolls instead of a copy of the complete roll.

Mr. Pearse was doubtful if this was a wise course. At first he had thought it was but after some consideration he thought it would be unwise. The certified copies of the rolls properly bound in the county offices were valuable as references.

Mr. Peck thought with the little work entailed it would be better to have a copy of the rolls returned every year.

Mr. Hawthorne said in a large township it meant a great deal of work for the clerk.

The motion was lost on a vote.

Mr. Brown, Inspector of Public Schools for the county, read his annual report, which was referred to the Committee on Schools.

The Council then adjourned.

THE CHEMONG LAKE BRIDGE.

The Government Will Pay One-third the Cost of the Work.

The deputation from the town and county, which went to Ottawa returned yesterday. They met Hon. Mr. Blair, Minister of Railways and Canals, and discussed the Chemong Lake bridge matter with him. The Government appears to have been under a misunderstanding regarding the bridge and the cost of a "fille in" roadway. The Minister had a plan of a "filled-in" bridge of the existence of which the county knew nothing. This "filled-in" roadway was estimated to cost $40,000, and Mr. Blair intimated that in granting $10,000 towards the bridge the Government thought they were giving one-fourth the cost of a permanent filled-in roadway. The deputation informed him that no such plan or estimate was known to them. Indeed, the county's opinion is that a "filled-in" bridge or roadway would cost nearer $100,000.

After discussing the matter the Minister agreed that the Government would make a grant equal to one-third the cost of the bridge as decided on by the county and town. This was satisfactory, and necessitates no change of site or plans.

There are some things in connection with the information the Government seems to have been given that the county councillors do not understand, but they are satisfied with the understanding now reached.

STRONG BICYCLER.

His Idea of Tea and Coffee.

"As a travelling representative of the Cycling Gazette and a good wheelman, I wish to say something regarding the use of tea and coffee.

"Two years ago I was almost an invalid. Today I am rugged and strong, and able to ride a wheel seventy-miles a day. Formerly I was addicted to coffee and tea, but was compelled to give them up, and took to drinking Postum Food Coffee, for I knew that many wheel riders used it. The effect on myself and family has been very remarkable.

"The sustaining power of Postum Food Coffee is wonderful. Many a time I have gone out early in the morning for a ride, taking only a drink of Postum before starting and no other food before noon.

"Much depends on the making. A skillful cook can make good coffee; i. e., the better the cook, the better the coffee, buy anyone who knows enough to boil water can make good Postum, if they will only use a large pot that will not let it boil over, and then boil it long enough. It won't be muddy, but always settles clear in a moment.

"No pecuniary inducement one could offer would tempt me to leave off Postum Food Coffee and take up ordinary tea and coffee again, for I esteem my health and strength too highly.

"With my hearty wishes for your continued success, which Postum fully merits." C. A. Jackson, 24 Anderson St., Marblehead, Mass.

GEN. BULLER DOES NOT SEND ANY DESPATCH ABOUT PROMISED ATTACK

It is Being Generally Recognized That the Boer Position if Ever Taken Can Only be Captured After a Tremendous Loss of Life.

It is Thought That Field Marshal Lord Roberts, Who NoW Has at His Disposal About 25,000 Men and Seventy or Eighty Guns, is Preparing a Plan of Operations That Will Lead to Fresh Developments of the Situation.

London, Jan. 25

The Daily Telegraph publishes the following despatch from Spearman's camp dated Jan. 23, 9.20 p.m—"On Monday Sir Charles Warren's force cannonaded and fusiladed the Boer position west of Spion Kop, near the Acton Holmes road. A lyddite battery co-operated with the other batteries and maxims. Certainly the fire was effective, causing the enemy serious losses. The Boers, however, clung desperately to their works, from which they are only being very slowly driven. To-day the enemy fired their guns oftener using also the captured 15-pounders with shrapnel. Our casualties to-day were less even than they were yesterday. Fighting began about six in the morning and continued until dusk, but there has been nothing like a general engagement. The naval big guns assisted from Potgieter's Drift, in shelling the Boer positions.

London, Jan. 25

A despatch to the Times from Spearman's Camp, dated Tuesday, 9.30 p.m., says—"The British to-day had more guns and are prepared to fight almost interminably, having entrenched their ridge, which stretches in an almost unbroken line from the Drakensberg many miles distant.

"Firing continus throughout the day. We have not advanced any further, but we throw up entrenchments during the fight from behind which the musketry duel continued from exactly the same position as yesterday."

London, Jan. 25

A correspondent of the Times at Modder River, telegraphing on Tuesday says—"The reports of deserters agree that the situation of the Boers at Magersfontein is becoming unbearable, because the camp is unsanitary, enteric fever is spreading and vegetables are wanted. On the other hand the health of the British camp is satisfactory, although the groud has been exhausted by the long encampment and the trees have been cut down by insect pests and dust storms."

London, Jan. 25, 4.15 a.m

The assemblage in Pall Mall outside the War Office and those privileged to wait in the lobbies reluctantly dispersed at midnight, after the final word that nothing further would be announced.

RELIEF OF MAFEKING.

Gaberones, Bechuanaland, Jan. 17, via Lorenzo Marques, Jan. 23.—A reconnoitering force this morning found the Boers in the Basuto hills, which the British supported by an armored train occupied. Later in the day the cyclists scouts reconnoitred the Boer main laager, ten miles south of Fort Gardenoes. They described it as large and strongly entrenched. The Boers continue the destruction of the railroad near Crocodile Pool.

STRENGTH OF THE BOERS.

Chicago, Jan. 24.—In a cable to the Record, the London correspondent says:—Experts here hesitate to estimate the chance of victory, owing to the lack of reliable maps and their ignorance of the number of Boers facing General Buller. The recent estimate which placed their number at 48,000 is absolutely discredited here. According to the utmost trustworthy accounts available not more than 25,000 or 30,000 men are resisting the British advance in northern Natal. The same estimate allows 6,000 men to the Boer commando at Colesburg, 6,000 to that at Stormberg, 2,000 to Mafeking, 4,000 to Kimberley and 8,000 to Magersfontein.

Roberts' Plan of Operations.

No news comes from Lord Methuen and Kimberley, but it is thought that Field Marshall Lord Roberts, who now has at his disposal in Cape Colony about 25,000 men and seventy or eighty guns, is preparing a plan of operations that will lead to fresh developments. Col. Plumer has moved down from Fort Tuli, and is now at Gaberones, ninety-two miles north of Mafeking, where Col. Baden-Powell is still holding out. Many of the besiegers have been withdrawn, leaving not more than 2,000 Boers on the line of investment. If Col. Plumer is able to defeat the commando awaiting him at Crocodile Poort he may possibly be able to relieve the garrison.

French and Gatacre Advance.

Gen. French since his reinforcement has made a further advance to the north-east and has gained a good position fifteen miles from Norval's Pont; yet, unless Lord Roberts still further reinforces him, it is thought unlikely that he will be able to push matters more decisively. Gen. Gatacre is beginning to move again. He has occupied Steynsburg with a strong patrol.

Reaction in Methuen's Favor.

A reaction in popular sentiment is now observable in favor of Gen. Lord Methuen. This is largely owing to the denial of Field Marshall Lord Wolseley that the War Office is in possession of a letter from Gen. Wauchope, written, as was reported, the night before the battle of Magersfontein, complaining of Lord Methuen's plan and asserting his own belief that he would not return from the attack. Equal weight is attached to Mrs. Wauchope's denial that her husband critized Lord Methuen in his letters to her, while the simple fact that Methuen retains his command is held to be an argument in his favor. It is believed that the authorities would not dare retain him if there were any truth in the adverse reports.

THE TENSION IN LONDON.

New York, Jan. 24.—The Journal publishes the following:

London, 2.45 p.m.—The Queen shares the deep anxiety displayed throughout England over the fate of Buller and Warren. Her Majesty is telegraphing hourily to Premier Salisbury, anxiously asking for news of the night attack on Spion Kop. Bulletins were sent to her from time to time, but the War Office reported at 5 o'clock there was still no word from Buller.

The suspense is the greatest that London has ever known. Wild rumors of every nature are flying thick and fast. First Buller is reported to have won a big victory, then his army is reported to have been repulsed with appalling loss.

As a result of these conflicting reports the excitement of the vast multitudes swarming about the War Office and bulletin board is kept at fever heat. Hundreds of women are in tears. Many have become hysterical from swift changes between hope and fear. Lord Wolsely, Lord Lansdowne, Mr. Goschen, Mr. Wynham and other high officials are closeted in the telegraph room of the War Office waiting for news.

Buller's long silence has greatly increased the forebodings.

London, Jan. 24, 4.10 p.m.—As the afternoon progressed, the excitement on Pall Mall reached a high pitch. But the War Office officials reiterated at 3.30 p.m. the oft-repeated statement that "Nothing has been received from Gen. Buller.

The suspense was increased by the belief that Gen. Buller would never have published his intention to attack the Boers on Spion Kop unless satisfied that the assault would be carried out before the news could be published, and it was fully anticipated that the news of his success or failure would reach London in a few hours at the most.

The Cabinet Ministers called at the War Office after luncheon to ask for news.

SYMPATHY OF THE U.S.

London, Jan. 24.—Commenting on Capt. Mahan's attitude, the St. James Gazette says:—

"His advice is good, and needed in American. While strict neutrality is maintained in the official world, and the good-will for England is felt by the better-informed, it is simply misleading the people of this country to suggest, as some correspondents are doing, that antagonism to England is confined to a negible majority of Americans. The sympathy of America as a whole is, as a matter of fact, no more with England at this moment than was our popular sympathy with them at the outbreak fo the war with Spain, and the contrast of official and popular attitudes is no less marked in the United States than it is in Germany.

IN LADYSMITH.

New York, Jan. 24.—The Journal has the following:

Ladysmith,—By Heliograph. —Night and day we can hear the booming of guns from the west, where also the shell and shrapnel of the relief column can be seen bursting on a ridge close to the enemy's laager.

What kind of impression Gen. Buller is making on the forces opposed to him is for us impossible to say. Here, at least, there is no change in the immediate situation. The Creusots and howitzers of the enemy still pay us their attentions and remind us that the investment of the town is not relaxed. We have consequently ceased to speculate about the precise date of our deliverance.

The mortality among the garrison has been remarkably low, with only 65 deaths in the hospital from all causes up to January 12.

A BOER REPORT.

London, Jan. 24.—A despatch from Pretoria, dated Tuesday, Jan. 23, somewhat amplifies the despatch of Monday, Jan. 22, from the Boer head Laager, cabled to the Associated Press yesterday evening. It says:

"Four or five times during the day the British replaced their wearied soldiers by fresh ones. The Boer casualties to date are one man killed and two slightly wounded. Our men are in excellent spirits. There has been a large slaughter of British. General Botha is now in sole command, Gen. Cronje having been sent elsewhere."

The same despatch, apparently referring to the situation at Colenso, says:

"One of the large Boer Maxims was temporarily disordered, but was soon repaired. The British northern camp is in confusion. People are observed trekking aimlessly in all directions.

A RISING NOT FEARED.

London, Wednesday, Jan. 24.—A correspondent of the Daily Chronicle at Sterkstroom, telegraphing Monday, says:

"Many Dutch colonists, although ostensibly loyal, really sympathize with the Boers, and keep them posted regarding all British movements. They discharge rockets and make other signals to the enemy. A general rising, however, is no longer feared."

NO MESSAGES FROM PRETORIA.

New York, Jan. 24.—The Commercial Cable Company to-day sent out the following notices:

"We are advised that the Postmaster General at Pretoria announces that all private telegrams for the South African Republic will be stopped.

SUBSCRIPTION IN BUFFALO.

Buffalo, N.Y., Jan. 24.—An appeal for subscriptions in aid of the fund for the widows and orphans of the British soldiers who perish in the war in South Africa has been addressed to Buffalo citizens of British origin by a committee headed by W. G. Staniland. The appeal was drafted at a meeting held in the Tifft House last Saturday evening. Those present at the meeting subscribing liberally. W. H. J. Cole is acting as treasurer of the fund.

BOERS ARE USING RHODESIA.

London, Jan. 24.—Mail advices to the London Daily Mail from Lisbon, dated January 19, says:—"It has been officially notified to the Government here from Lorenzo Marques that the Boers have committed a breach of neutrality by crossing Portuguese territory from Umbella to Rhodesia. A force of artillery has been sent out there from Lorenzo Marquez, and the Government there has demanded reinforcements from here.

"Everything is being carried out with all possible secrecy, but I am informed on good authority that a portion of the troops have already started for Lorenzo Marquese, and that others will follow immediately."

Umbella is north of Inhambane, which is a few miles above Cabodas Correntes and the movement apparently indicates that the Boers are engaging in gun-running and men-importing through Rhodesia, or that, perhaps they are planning to take Colonel Plumer in the flank.

AN EXPEDITION FOR FILIBUSTERING.

A New York Yellow Journal Says That the South Africa Company Will Make Another Raid on the Transnaal.

New York, Jan. 24.—The World prints the following cable despatch from Belfast—

"It is known here now that Cecil Rhodes and the British Chartered South Africa Company have received permission to make war on their own account.

"The mystery surrounding Major-General Sir Frederick Carrington's release from his command in this district, accompanied by an official statement that he was going to South Africa, is now solved.

"Heretofore, for reasons best known to themselves, the War Office officials have refused to assign Gen. Carrington to any command in South Africa, despite his long experience with the British troops in that country.

"Now it is known that Cecil Rhodes and the Chartered Company have received permission to raise, equip, and put in the field a force of irregulars and the War Office has loaned Gen. Carrington to the South African millionaires to command this force.

"No one can tell what the strength of this force will be or where it will operate. Neither will the friends of General Carrington here say whether there will be a native contingent with it."

GATACRE DID SHOOT THE GUIDE.

"There is Your Position, and There is Your Enemy," Said He, and Was Through the Body by the General.

London, Jan. 24.—A corporal in the 2nd Northumberland Fusiliers vividly depicts the Stormberg disaster—

On the night of the 9th our regiment, the Royal Irish Rifles, two batteries of artillery, and the mounted infantry, proceeded from Pieterskraal to Molteno, a distance of ten miles. When we arrived it was about nine o'clock, and then we all formed up, and General Gatacre informed us that he was going to do a night attack on the Boer position at Stormberg, and that there was to be no firing and no shouting, and to use the bayonet only. We started off at one o'clock to march thirteen miles to Stormberg, where we hoped to arrive about two o'clock in the morning, but we kept marching all night, but never got there.

"It was broad daylight when we were at the foot of some high, inaccessible rocks, when the guide we had turned to the general, and pointing to the top of the rocks, said—"There is your position, and there is your enemy," and immediately started to gallop off, but before he had gone two yards General Gatacre shot him twice through the body, saying, "Man, you have done me; but you are the first to go." These are the exact words that were said, because we were told by the general's orderly. The latter then proceeded to tell the story of the disaster which is already known."

BULLER DRIVES A WEDGE.

London, Jan. 24.—It must be remembered that General Buller is attempting to carry out a very complex plan of campaign. Its execution must necessarily be slow, not merely because of the extent of the ground to be traversed, the difficulty of transport and the arduous character of the country, but also fro the fact that it is not one, but many, objects which Buller is simultaneously trying to secure. One of his purposes is to cut the enemy off from their natural line of retreat into the Orange Free State. Another object is to capture as many of the enemy's big guns as possible. A third is to lose as little life as is compatible with the successful prosecution of the operations while the paramount end of his long flanking movement is the relief of Ladysmith.

In each direction substantial progress has been made. Lord Dundonald with his brigade of cavalry, is interfering with the Boer communications toward Tintwa Pass and Olivier's Hoek in the Drakensburg range, and according to one report, has penetrated northward toward Van Reenen's Pass.

Warren's division is driving in the Boer right and steadily advancing in a north-easterly direction. Should he succeed in his attempt he will, in combination with General Lyttleton's brigade, have drawn around the burghers' entrenchments a semi-circle, the southern point resting on Potgieter's drift and the northern on the road leading to Dewdrop, while towards west the line will touch Acton Holmes and Venter's Spruit.

General Buller is also trying to drive a wedge into the Boer position, cut those on Spion kop from those around Brakfontein and isloate the right flank of General Joubert's army.

In the other fields of war the situation is unchanged the opposing forces watching each other without making a move. The Boers at Rensberg on Saturday night evidently fearing an attack, opened a heavy fire on French's outpost, but made no advance.

FOREIGN ADVISERS NOT WANTED.

Cape Town, Jan. 22.—A man from Delagoa Bay says that the Boers are at a loss as to what they shall do with foreign military advisers. Their tactics, the Boers say, are of no use and only lead to loss of life. During General Joubert's illness, which, by the way, was internal inflammation due to the stumble of his horse, General Schalkburger asked Dr. Leyds to send men who could shoot straight, experts to work the mines and manufacture explosives, and not useless advisers. The Boers have profound distrust and contempt for European military methods, and with the exception of Col. Albrecht have practically no foreign officers even in the artillery. The Transvaalers, however, acknowledge that they have learned several useful devices from the Free Staters, especially in making entrenchments.

A CARGO OF SOLDIERS.

Lorenzo Marquez, Jan. 23.—The French vessel Lee Gironde was packed with foreigners and military men proceeding to the Transvaal, including Russians, Germans, Frenchmen, Italians, and Greeks. The Transvaal Consull arranged their conveyance to Pretoria by special train. Portuguese passport restrictions are useless. A wholesale expulsion of British subjects is expected next week. The attitude of some of the officials is creating great uneasiness. Several openly insist on returns for any little service, and become rapidly wealthy. All the bridges on the Natal railway and Lang's Nek tunnel and the bridges on the Free State line are undermined, so that they can be destroyed at a moment's notice.

"RALLY ROUND ME."

London, Jan. 24.—All the letters descriptive of the Magersfontein disaster that have been received in Edinburgh agree in sayin gthat General Wauchope called on his men to rally round him and not to blame him for the disaster, as it was no fault of his. A Black Watch man writes.—

"It was one of the darkest nights I have ever seen, and the rain fell in torrents. We were falling over rocks and antihills, as we could not see where we were going to.

"After we were taken by surprise our right half battalion charged, but the men were mowed down. General Wauchope was shot at the beginnin gof the charge. When he saw the mistake that had happened he said, 'Rally round me, Black Watch! It is not my fault!' and fell, riddled with bullets."

Strathcona's Own they say in England, Strathcona's Horse we say in Canada. In any event Strathcona will own the horse.

NEW MUD LAKE BRIDGE.

TOWN COUNCIL WILLING IS TO HELP IN ITS CONSTRUCTION.

A By-law to be Submitted to the People and Special Legislation Asked for—$200 a Year for 20 Years Citizens Will be Asked for—Joint Committee Will Take Steps Towards Securing a House of Refuge.

The Town Council met in special session last night, when there were present Mayor Kendry and Aldermen Corkery, Denne, Robertson, Clinkscale, Roger, Weir, Oke and Sawers.

Mud Lake Bridge.

The main business of the evening was a request of the County Council for financial aid in the construction of a new bridge across Mud Lake at Chemong.

Several members of the County Council were present and also Warden Forester, who, upon being invited to address the Council, introduced Mr. Pearse, whom he explained, more thoroughly understood the question than he.

Mr. Pearse remarked that it was imperative that the town arrive at a definite decision at once, as tenders for the work would be opened on Friday. He urged that a by-law be submitted to the people and special legislation asked for. A joint committee of the Town and County Councils, together with the Government engineer, had approved of the location last year, when the town promised to contribute either $200 a year for 20 years, or a lump sum of $5,000. He opined that the construction of this work would rest entirely with the town of Peterborough, as strong opposition would likely have to be met in some parts of the riding.

Mayor Kendry thought the town was as much interested in this matter as the county, and applauded the latter's generosity in contributing six-tenths of the total cost of construction. He explained that the Dominion Government will give a grant of one-third the cost, providing the shore structure is of a permanent nature. He had no doubt the present Town Council would carry out any work instituted by last year's Council, providing it be in the town's interests. Substantial support should be secured from the Provincial Government.

County Engineer Belcher here produced plans of the proposed structure, showing that the total length of the bridge will be 2,460 feet, of which but 2,000 feet is to be floating, while the old bridge is 2,900 feet in length, with 2,700 feet floating. While the estimated cost had been $22,000, it could not now be constructed for less than $26,000; this increase is due to the fact that lumber has taken a jump from $12 to $16 or $17 per thousand since the Pigeon Creek bridge had been built.

Ald. Oke here moved, seconded by Ald. Robertson,—That a by-law be prepared, and submitted to the people, providing for carrying out the decision of last year's council to give a grant of $200 a year for twenty years towards the cost of constructing a new bridge across Mud Lake, according to plans approved of by the joint committee.

Ald. Rogers thought it advisable that tenders for this work be opened first so that the people should know exactly how much the bridge is going to cost. He fell confident that a large proportion of the community would be willing to assist in supporting a more permanent structure than the present concern.

County Councillor Pearse here explained that the county wished to reserve the right to alter the plans if necessary to meet the appropriation they are prepared to give. Any amdnment would of course depend upon the amount of the tenders received.

The resolution was then voted upon and carried.

House of Refuge.

Ald. Sawers at this juncture inquired of Mr. Pearse—What the county council is prepared to do in co-operation with the town in the matter of providing a House of Refuge.

County councillor Pearse replied that the county council were prepared to meet a town comittee to-morrow if advisable to discuss the matter.

Ald. Sawers then moved that a joint committee of both councils meet and that a by-law be prepared for submittal to the people—Carried.

Ald. Oke moved, seconded by Ald. Rogers—That a joint committee of both councils wait upon the provincial government with a view to securing an appropriation for the proposed new bridge across Mud Lake, and that the treasurer be authorized to issue a cheque to cover the town committee's expenses connected therewith.Carried.

He Wants a Settlement.

Mr. John Green's request for an immediate settlement of his claim against the town for $150 damages, by reason of the blocking up of the thoroughfare on Wolfe street, was referred to the Finance Committee to report at next meeting.

The Railway Crossings.

Mayor Kendry here introduced the railway crossings question, and thought it advisable for the Council to take immediate action in the matter before trouble arises. He suggested that the railway Companies be asked to co-operate with the town in providing flagmen at all crossings. The matter was referred to the Board of Works to report at the next meeting of the Council.

Jackson Park Bridge.

On motion of Ald. Denne the question of repairing the bridge at Jackson Park was referred to the Board of Works for discussion.

Council then adjourned.

PETERBOROUGH, JANUARY 25, 1900

"STRATHCONA'S HORSE."

Lord Strathcona's offer to raise and maintain a regiment of Canadian horse for service in South Africa will do more to advertise Canada than the sending of the Government contingents and must vastly increase the admiration of the Motherland for the Colony that produces such men. A military expert at the capital figures out the cost of the undertaking as follows —

400 men, outfit, $100 each	$ 40,000
400 men, arms, $50 each	20,000
400 horses, $100 each	40,000
400 horses, outfit, $50	20,000
Transportation, $200 per man	80,000
Do., horses, $100	40,000
Pay 400 men, 50c per day	72,000
Maintenance, 50c per day	72,000
Maintenance horses, 50c per day.	72,000
Contingencies and extras, say	20,000
Grand total	$478,000

No horses would be brought back from South Africa, so that the sale of them would cut down the expense somewhat.

WILL THE BRITISH MINISTRY BE RECONSTRUCTED?

Unless the British Generals in South Africa gain some notable successes before Jan 30, the date at which Parliament reassembles, we are likely to witness several changes in the Salisbury Cabinet. We do not believe that the Government, which, when the present House of Commons was elected, had in it a majority of 150, can be overthrown under existing conditions, but many Conservatives admit that "the Ministerial cargo will have to be jettisoned."

Which members of the Cabinet are likely to be forced out of office by public opinion, and by whom may we expect to see them replaced? It seems to be generally believed that the head of the War Office, Lord Lansdowne, will have to go. There is no doubt that Mr. Chamberlain is principally responsible for the political miscalculation which lies at the root of the reverses thus far experienced by the British arms in South Africa. It was Lord Lansdowne's duty, however, to insist that his colleagues should heed the warnings of Lord Wolseley and Sir William Butler, and not precipitate England into a war for which it was unprepared. Who will be Lord Lansdowne's successor it would be hard to predict. If Lord Wolseley were selected for the post, there would be no further conflict between the political and military chiefs of the War Department, and responsibility would rest upon the man who has to bear the bulk of the burden of military administration: Lord Wolseley himself, however, has not escaped popular odium during the last few months, and for that reason a young and energetic civilian may be preferred for the headship of the War Office. If Lord Salisbury chose to go outside the ranks of politicians, he could find vigorous administrators whose names would be accepted as auguries of triumph, such men as Lord Cromer, who in Egypt has brought order out of a financial chaos, or Sir Colin Scott-Moncrieff, the engineer, who has given Egypt her present system of irrigation, or Sir George Taubmann Goldie, who may be said to have created the great province of Nigeria.

Another Member of the Cabinet, of whom a part of the London press desires to make a scapegoat, is Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, the Chancellor of the Exchequer. He is blamed for an egregious miscalculation of the cost of the war, having given the impression at the short session of Parliament, which followed the outbreak of the contest, that ten millions of pounds sterling would suffice. Now he will have to ask for £30,000,000 more, and this can only be regarded as a second installment of the necessary outlay, if the war, as now seems probable, should be prolonged for many months. It is difficult however, for onlookers to understand how Mr. Chamberlain can be spared, if Lord Lansdowne and Sir Michael Hicks-Beach are constrained to resign. The two Ministers last named are chiefly blameworthy because, instead of examining the facts for themselves, they trusted to the Colonial Secretary, who was the Cabinet's professional expert with regard to South African affairs. Mr. Chamberlain now says that the war was inevitable, because the Boers had long planned to oust Great Britain from the position of paramount power in South Africa. Why then, did he not avoid giving any pretext for collision until England was thoroughly prepared? Why did he precipitate a quarrel by a wrangle over the conditions of the franchise in the Transvaal? He cannot plead ignorance, for it was his business to be informed and to inform his colleagues. One thing is tolerably certain, namely, that, if Lord Lansdowne and Sir Michael Hicks-Beach are turned out for confiding in Mr. Chamberlain's assertions, their friends will protest stoutly against the retention of the Colonial Secretary.

It has been suggested that Lord Salisbury might strengthen himself in public opinion and paralyze opposition by forming a coalition Cabinet, in which representatives of the Moderate Liberals or Liberal Imperialists, like Lord Rosebery and Mr. Asquith, might be invited to occupy important places. Considered as politicians, the Liberals named would be imprudent to accept a share of responsibility for the consequences of administrative measures which they can scarcely approve. Considered as patriots, they must recognize that they can render more service to their country by remaining in nominal opposition, but, at the same time, urging a vigorous prosecution of the war. The objection to all Coalition Cabinets is that it leaves the country without a strong alternative body of statesmen ready to assume the Government. The theory of the British Constitution requires the existence of such an alternative body. If Lord Rosebery and Mr. Asquith were taken into the Salisbury Cabinet, the Liberals would have no leaders left except Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, Sir William Vernon-Harcourt, Mr. John Morley and Prof. James Bryce. Each of these four statesmen not only condemns the management of the war, but also the proceedings which provoked it. They consider the war an unrighteous one, and they will scarcely be placed in power until British public opinion has reconciled itself to the recognition of the absolute independence of the Transvaal. It is possible, of course, that the military situation in Natal and the Cape Colony may be so altered before Jan. 30 that Lord Salisbury may deem it safe to keep his Cabinet intact. At the present moment, it looks as if some important changes in the Ministry would be made.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

As to England's insisting on the right of search, inquiry as to her right is also likely to be searching.

It would be better for Canada were sterner measures on the statute books for the punishment of corruptionists. The fining of the bribers simply draws on the boodle funds to the extent of the fines. Britain's Tactics.

Editor Morning Times.

Dear sir,—In your issue of the 22nd instant, an article headed "The African War," while criticising the campaign taken as a whole, "B.M.C." makes the following statement: Undoubtedly the greatest strategic blunder of the campaign was General White's attempt to hold Ladysmith."

A pretty good attempt by the way, for he holds it yet, and is likely to. According to your correspondent, General White should have retreated before the enemy, for that is the word for it, beyond the Mooi River. Well, that is one way of looking at it but evidently not General White's way. He prefered to stay where he was, like a brave man and a gallant soldier, and fight rather than abandon a strongly fortified position and an enormous amount of stores, to the enemy.

By doing so he held a much larger force of the enemy round his position and thereby prevented their doing mischief elsewhere.

In regard to the number of men lost at Ladysmith, if you could find a truthful Boer, which I doubt, it would be found that there losses have been the heaviest up to date.

Your correspondent closes with these lines: "The New Year does not open auspicously for British prestage." I think it does, but certainly neither Generals White or Buller have up to the present given cause for the loss of it.

Yours truly,

J. W.

THE PARAMOUNT RACE OF THE HUMAN KIND.

Magnificent Proportions of the Present British Empire—French, Germans and Dutch Reaching for Territory.

[From Pearson's Weekly.]

John Bull's island home being rigidly limited, his expansive nature was forced to expand over sea, in far-off lands, wherever his bold adventurers could gain a foothold. And so, bit by bit, our huge Indian and colonial empire was built up, until it now covers nearly a fourth of the earth's surface, and includes, probably, a fourth of its entire population. The actual figures are—Area, 12,000,000 square miles; population 400,000,000. These figures are absolutely without parallel in the history of the world.

John Bull's commands then, are, more or less, willingly obeyed by a vast host of no fewer than 350,000,000 subject people, and this host includes nations and tribes of almost every known race on the globe.

Let us take India as the most conspicuous and, numerically, the most important example. A small, but fit, British army of 75,000 men, aided by a native force under British officers of about twice that number, keeps in admirable order a teeming population of 300,000,000, a population equal to all Europe, exclusive of our own 40,000,000. India is, in fact, a continent in itself. It contains many distinct nations and races. The census returns divide the people on the basis of language into no less than 118 groups and even then there were some hundreds of people speaking an "unrecognizable" language.

A Babel of Tongues.

Out of the 300,000,000 English is the customary language of barely 250,000 and the British-born population of India is less than half that number. There are about 85,000,000 speaking Hindu, 40,000,000 Bengali, 25,000,000 Telugu, 20,000,000 Mahrathi, 18,000,000 Punjabi and 16,000,000 Tamil. On the basis of religion considerably over 200,000,000 are Hindoos, 60,000,000 Mohammedans, 7,000,000 or 8,000,000 Buddhists and only 2,500,000 or 3,000,000 and as much more favorably disposed towards their Christian rulers than the rest.

In the Straits Settlements a few Britons keep their eye on 250,000 Malays, the same number of Chinese and some 55,000 East Indians. In Hong-Kong and Kowlun over 250,000 Chinese are British subjects. The "spicy breezes" of Ceylon are inhaled in settled peace and comfort by Tommy Atkins—the 2,000,000 Cingalese, 1,000,000 Tamils, 250,000 Moors and some 10,000 Malays never disturbs his serenity. In Borneo the Dyaks and other warlike Malays have been and may be troublesome, but the unrivaled tact and calm courage of British colonial administration may be trusted to smooth down any and every disturbance of peace.

The famous bay of the south side of the Gulf of Pe-Chee-Lee, responsible for the feeblest and most widely spread diplomacy of modern times—Wei-Hai-Wei—is to be garrisoned by a British officered Chinese regiment, who can, at any rate, be trusted to keep their fellow pigtails in order.

The English in Africa.

The African command of John Bull is a particularly heavy burden, and has cost him millions in money and thousands in men. Besides 1,500,000 blacks in Cape Colony and its dependencies, there are nearly 750,000 Zulu Kaffirs in Natal; 250,000 Basutos, about 100,000 Matabeles and Mashonas, with perhaps 200,000 Bechuanas, in southern Rhodesia; 600,000 Barotses and other Bantus in northern Rhodesia, besides the 850,000 negroes of the Nyassaland or British Central Africa protectorate. Between the Zambesi and Tanganyika less than 300 British, about the same number of Sikh soldiers and a small native force under British officers "administer" the homeland of 1,500,000 blacks.

South of the Zambesi, and including the Rand of the Transvaal and Free State, the entire white population is very small in comparison with the number of blacks. Farther north, on the east coast, in British east Africa and Ungunda, John has to keep the peace among 2,500,000 truculent tribes, and on the other side of the continent his Niger coast protectorate and territories on either side of the great river put upon his broad soldiers the immensely heavier burden of controlling some 30,000,000 negroes, mostly warlike Mohammedans, trained fighters, with a military organization of high efficiency.

British governors—not long-lived in those "white man's graves"—have also the care of 1,500,000 negroes in the Gold Coast, 3,000,000 in Lagos, some 50,000 on the Gambia, and 75,000 in Sierra Leone.

Savage Tribes Controlled.

According to a recent official report there are over 100,000 Indians in Canada, but they have been and are so well treated by the Dominion Government that they are particularly friendly and cause little or no trouble, even in the wilds of the northwest. In Jamaica a third of the population are negroes, as also is the bulk of the inhabitants in the Leeward and Windward islands and Trinidad. The Bahama people are nearly all whites, but in British Guiana there are 100,000 negroes, 105,000 East Indian coolies and 4,000 Chinese.

In British Honduras 500 white people live among 25,000 blacks.

In Fiji there are 2,500 whites to 100,000 Fijians, and in our other Polynesian islands the white population is very small indeed. In British New Guinea a handful (250) of Europeans forms the "law and the Bobby" to over 350,000 frowsy headed Papuans. The native inhabitants of Tasmania are as extinct as the dodo, but New South Wales contains some 5,000 full blacks, Queensland probably 12,000, South Australia 3,000, West Australia 2,500 and Victoria only about 500. In the northern territory of South Australia are 4,000 Chinese coolies, and Queensland has imported some 10,000 Polynesian laborers. New Zealand has now only about 40,000 Maoris, little more than a twentieth of that prosperous colony.

France and Germany's Burdens.

Frenchmen are proverbially a stay-at-home people and only about 500,000 French folk live out of France. But France has, nevertheless, a splendid colonial empire of some 3,250,000 square miles, with a population, almost entirely colored, of over 53,000,000; 22,000,000 of them are in Asia, 30,000,000 in Africa and some 80,000 in Oceanica.

In farther India the French are regarded as masters of some 6,000,000 Annamese, 1,500,000 Cambodians, 2,000,000 Cochin Chinese, 12,000,000 Tonquinese and it would not be at all an easy matter to control these obstinate and defiant people, but that the French officers govern them mainly through their own native rulers and officers.

In addition to 6,000,000 Arabs and Kabyles in Algeria and Tunis, the French have to keep an ever watchful eye on some 2,500,000 marauders in the Sahara wilds, while their west coast authorities must exercise a strong control over the 3,000,000 Fulahs and other negroes in the Senegal colony and the western Soudan, 2,000,000 on the Ivory coast and in Dahomey, 9,000,000 in the Garbun and French Congo and a few thousands on the other side of the continent, besides 3,500,000 Malagasys.

Germany's burden in the way of dependent colored races is a light one compared to John Bull's, her entire colonial population being considerably under 11,000,000. On the west African coast Germany martinets maintain a severe authority over 2,500,000 negroes in Togoland and 3,500,000 in the Cameroons. German east Africa has a population of some 4,000,000 Swahili Arabs along the coast and negroes in the interior. The Damaras and Namaquas of German southwest Africa do not exceed 250,000 in number.

In the Pacific German New Guinea includes some 110,000 unkempt Papuans, the Bismark archipelago contains 188,000 and the Solomon islands 90,000 specimens of the same treacherous and intractable race; 13,000 Polynesians in the Marshall islands complete the subject race burden of Germany.

The Dutch and Americans.

Holland is a very small country, but still it is the "heart" of a big dominion over sea. The Dutch colonial empire in the Indies, East and West, has an area of 783,000 square miles and a total population of 35,000,000, of whom 25,000,000 are in Java, 3,000,000 in Sumatra, 2,000,000 in Celebes and 1,000,000 in Bali and Lombok. Dutch New Guinea, though the largest section of the island, does not contain more than 200,000 people. In her Dutch East Indian possessions Holland finds 400,000 Chinese, 24,000 Arabs and 27,000 other orientals; the rest, 32,000,000 in number are natives of the Malay race. The Dutch West India islands only contain 80,000 and Dutch Guinea 65,000.

In spite of the Monroe and other doctrines to the contrary, the United States now finds itself burdened with over sea responsibilities, in the shape of peace and good government in Cuba, with a population of 1,500,000—blacks, 35 per cent., Porto Rico, with 300,000 blacks and 600,000 whites, and the Philippines with at least 6,500,000 most of them still to be "pacified."

The heavy burden of excessive armaments is not placed on the white man's shoulder so much by the "black terror" or the "yellow danger" as by the mutual distrust of otherwise civilized nations and an ineradicable suspicion of each other, strongly marked now as they were a hundred years ago. Huge armies and powerful navies are maintained at a frightful cost, ready at a moment's notice to fly at each other, to destroy, to kill, to harry, to waste.

The cost of actual war, as in the present desperate conflict for supremacy in South Africa, though enormous, is, however, often enough less burdensome than the losses caused by rumors of war.

The cost of war—a really great war such as we are now waging in South Africa—is enormous, but unless some terrific political convulsion throw the great powers of Europe and America into collision, none of the wars of the early twentieth century is likely to cost anything like the colonial struggle in which England and her allies on the continent were involved a hundred years. The twenty seven years' war against the arrogant French republic, and then against Napoleon cost England in actual hard cash nearly £900,000,000. Add to this the destruction of property, the waste of life, the loss of labor, stagnation of trade and the burden—which we still to an enormous extent bear—laid upon the century by that war alone, is almost incalculable. The present war is estimated to cost nearly a million a day.

The cost of a war crisis, a mere rumor, is often very heavy. The direct loss in this case falls, of course, upon individual holders of securities, which lessen in value and plunge thousands of people in bankruptcy. For instance, on the mere threat of war with Russia consols shrank in value some £25,000,000.

RETRIBUTION

He saved a little day by day,
  Withheld from something that he craved.
"The dollars grow," he used to say,
  "From extra pennies that are saved."

His pile of savings grew and grew.
  Each day he hoarded more and more;
Each night he ran his fingers through
  And gloated o'er his golden store.

And as his wealth increased his heart
  Shrank, hardened, shriveled and decayed.
He cheated, gouged and played the part
  That many another fool has played.

He rose to power through his wealth;
  He crushed those who were in the way;
He gained a fortune, lost his health
  And miserably died one day.

Then came his drunken cousin, who
  Had thrashed him when the two were boys.
His savings and his stealings, too,
  One whom he hated now enjoys.

—S. E. Kiser in Chicago Times-Herald.

SCAVENGER OF THE VELDT.

The Aasvogel, Which Keeps the Wide Plains Clean.

Although the term "vulture" has been used for all time as a term of the vilest opprobrium, no one who knows the bird, its appearance and its habits could doubt for a moment that it expresses a depth of degradation which is barely conceivable.

And yet the vulture does a great deal of good in acting as the scavenger of the veldt. But for his quick eye, carrion taste and love of dead meat the disease germs in the carcasses of dead oxen would be far more prolific and dangerous.

Throughout South Africa is found the aasvogel. Go anywhere you like on the veldt, and sooner or later—and in all probability the former—you will find the remains of his ghastly meal. There are hundreds of thousands of oxen used in the transport and trekking service. Many of them die from exhaustion, want of water or cruelty from their Boer masters. Or they may eat of the poisonous tulp, a bulbous plant growing in marshy places.

A kurveyor, or teamster, soon knows if any one or more of his oxen have been eating tulp. The neck of the ox swells, his eyes close up, he gives short, sharp coughs, and his case is generally hopeless. Sometimes, however, he may be saved, and this by a peculiar, homeopathic sort of remedy. If the bulb of the tulp plant is crushed into pulp, mashed with hot water and forced boiling hot down the throat of the ox he may recover.

The quickness of the eye of the aasvogel is simply astounding. An ox falls out of the team, evidently ill. He is outspanned from his yoke fellow, and he goes down to the spruit, or stream. The sky above and away to the horizon on all sides is absolutely clear and cloudless.

Hardly has the breath left the body of the poor ox than you may observe far, far away up in the sky a tiny black speck, then another and another and another, until there are 20 of them. Gradually they get larger and larger, circling round in ever diminishing circles all the while they descend. The dead ox forms the center of the circumference of their flight. Within a few minutes the grisly horde sweep down upon the still warm beast and commence their ghoulish task.

An hour afterward there is nothing in the spruit but a bundle of bleached white bones that might have been there for months. The sky is clear and speckless again. The aasvogel has scavenged the veldt.

Whittier's Predicament.

Whittier held "Gail Hamilton" (Abigail Dodge) in the highest esteem, and the letters that passed between them are really most delightful. Here is one of the series in The Ladies' Home Journal that is truly characteristic of Whittier. It was written in 1866:

"I must tell thee something droll. Last week the Amoskeag veterans from New Hampshire and a Massachusetts company, with military bands, came and paraded before our house, and Governor Smyth of New Hampshire and one or two officers called on me. When they left and I stepped out to see them civilly off, the man in epaulets got up a grand military salute, with music and three cheers to wind up with! Was ever a Quaker in such a predicament? I did, I fear, somewhat compromise myself by lifting, almost involuntarily, my hand to my hat. But I resisted the temptation and only pulled my hat lower down over my brows by way of testimony."

Outlived the Romance.

Mrs. Marmaduke (enthusiastically)—See those young lovers sitting so close together on that bench, Tom? How beautifully the future opens before them! How happy they are! To them everything is possible!

Mr. Marmaduke—And nothing probable.—Harper's Bazar.

Temptation Her Calling.

"Yes, the doctor ordered him sent to the hospital. He wasn't getting the right kind of care at home."

"Let's see. Whom did he marry?"

"His wife was a trained nurse."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

BOSSY.

Bossy is a kind old cow.
She dreams beneath the apple bough
And swings her tail and rings her bell
While roaming up and down the dell.

I see her through the pasture bars
Eat all the pretty daisy stars,
Then gently toss her head on high
To watch the clouds that dot the sky.

When night makes all the meadow black,
She lets the chickens on her back
Fall fast asleep, and sleep until
The sun comes peeping o'er the hill.

—R. K. Munkittrick in Woman's Home Companion.

THOSE BOER LADIES.

By Middle Life They Are Almost Too Fat to Walk.

The Boer woman is very little like the trim, handsome Dutchwoman of her ancestral Holland. She is seldom pretty. Her complexion is her principal charm, and she guards this carefully whenever she goes out. She is never seen outdoors without a great peaked bonnet on her head, her visits to church being made behind an almost oriental seclusion of veils. This is necessary to preserve the pink and white of her skin, for the climate would otherwise soon tan it to the color of sole leather. Her eyes are small and set close together, and her features are irregular. Her cheeks are broad and flat, and her hair is naturally light in color, although time and weather soon bleach it from its early straw color. At a very early age she loses all her teeth, for she is constantly chewing sweet cakes and confectionery.

A European woman would replace the molars that nature has deprived her of with well mounted works of art, but the Boer woman does not do this. She thinks it would be impious thus to try to duplicate the work of the Creator. Her figure is thick and almost waistless. While still a young woman she begins to grow fat, and by the time middle life is reached she is often so unwieldy that the only exercise she is able to take is to waddle cumbrously from one armchair to another. She is clad in a loose, scantily made gown, devoid of trimming and apparently waistless. The day garments of the Boers are also their nightclothes, so the gown is generally wrinkled.

India Rubber Industry.

The bulletin of the Royal gardens, Kew, states that the falling off in the production of India rubber at Lagos is due to the reckless way in which the trees are being exhausted. There is a want of control over the collectors, who tap young trees and destroy whole rubber forests by overworking, so that this industry, which is an important source of wealth to the colony, is in danger of extinction. A similar disaster occurred in Madagascar, and now active steps are being taken to preserve the industry by the establishment of plantations of rubber producing plants.

An Unprofitable Bone.

Last summer a friend presented us with a tortoise. I do not know whether our dog had heard of turtle soup or whether he regarded the creature as a new kind of bone that walked about; at any rate, he determined to eat it.

Whenever the tortoise started out on a constitutional down the garden path Gyp arrested it and carried it into his kennel, where he gnawed at the impenetrable armor till his jaws ached.

The calm and philosophical manner in which the tortoise resumed its interrupted promenade irritated the dog exceedingly, but no failure discouraged him. Whenever we reminded him of the tortoise, he would go in search of it all round the garden, peering into every crevice, till eventually the creature was found, and then fresh but futile attempts were made to extract the meaty portions from the shell.

A QUEER EXPLOSION.

HOW A MOUNTAIN LOCOMOTIVE CAME TO AN UNTIMELY END.

There Was Neither Fire in Her Furnace Nor Water In Her Boiler, and Yet She Managed to Blow Up in the Most Approved Style.

Mr. Henry Alquist, a prominent railroad man, relates the story of a curious wreck, the facts in which he will vouch for.

"It is such a remarkable thing," said Mr. Alquist to a reporter, "that I fear many will be inclined to brand it as 'pipe.' I have been railroading now for over 20 years, and never in all my varied experience have I seen such a unique and complete wreck as the one I speak of—that of engine 1,129 of the Rio Grande Western. Railroad men will tell you that locomotives seldom explode nowadays, but 1,129 did and in a very peculiar way.

"At the time this wreck occurred I was holding down the job of train dispatcher at Soldier Summit, Utah, and a tough old job it was. Never been there, I suppose? Well, Soldier Summit is a station on the top of one of the Wasatch divides, a bleak and lonely place, where the Rio Grande Western has a roundhouse and coal chute located. At the summit are long snowsheds covering the tracks. These sheds protect the line from the winter. And it is only due to this method that a train ever gets over the mountain.

"On both sides of the mountain the line winds down in a succession of winding curves to lessen the grade. Running off from the railway are switches, which, diverging from the grade, run up into the hills and gradually come to a dead level. These switchbacks, as they are called, are so constructed that they can be thrown from any point on the grade. And if a train breaks in two while ascending the steep grade the runaway cars can be switched on to one of these spurs, where the breakaway finally stops after it has run up the spur as far as the momentum attained in its descent will take it.

"All heavy trains have an extra locomotive before the grade is tackled. These are called helper engines and are kept in roundhouses at each side of the mountain with steam up.

"One night I got word from Clear Creek, a town in the western valley, that the 9:20 freight would be 30 minutes late on account of having to pull out a crippled engine, 1,129. She had burned out her flues and had to be hauled to Grand Junction for repairs.

"That night about 10 o'clock, after I had passed down the Salt Lake express, I heard the freight coughing up the long grade from Clear Creek. There was a snowstorm raging, and the wind howled around the station like the mischief. When the overdue 9:20 pulled into the shelter of the big snowsheds on the wind swept summit, the first thing I asked was, 'Where's the dead engine?'

"'Behind the doghouse!' shouted the 'con.' But as I held my lamp above my head I failed to see it. I was just about to call his attention to it when, during a lull in the storm, we plainly heard the familiar rattle of the rails as the runaway engine flew at lightning speed down the mountain. No. 1,129 had broken loose and was tearing down the grade to destruction.

"I jumped and pulled the lever which opened the spur switches. This I knew would prevent a smashup, as the engine would run up on the switchback and come to a stop. But I was too late. Almost at the same instant I threw the lever a terrific explosion was heard from far down the mountain. The runaway had exploded."

"I thought you said a moment ago, Mr. Alquist," interrupted The Scimitar man, "that the locomotive was a 'dead one?' If she had no fire under her boiler, how could she explode?"

"That was the only thing I couldn't understand myself," the railroad man replied. "I could easily see how the dead engine could break loose on that grade, and I could understand not hearing its descent during such a howling blizzard, but the explosion floored me. The only theory which in any way solved the mystery was that the old kettle was blown up by compressed air.

"You see, when the engine broke loose from the freight and started down the mountain the pistons in the cylinders began to act as air compressors. During the rough trip up her throttle probably jarred open, and as the speed increased with every revolution of her drivers her boiler soon filled with compressed air. It was not long before those flying pistons had worked up a pressure of nearly 500 pounds to the square inch, which came in faster than it could escape by the safety valve, and before the old machine reached Clear Creek her boiler let go."

Wanted to See the President.

The Washington Star says that a big, gawky country lad went to the White House the other day just as the president had gone out for a morning stroll.

"I wants ter see the president," he announced to the first man he met.

"Well, there goes the president now," said the man addressed, pointing to the president's retreating form.

"Dern my time!" the young man ejaculated. "He walks just like any other man," and the fellow struck out so that he could get close enough to see the president well.

DISGUISED HERSELF AS A MAN

Mary Fry Fell in Love With Another Girl and Was Found Out.

Coshocton, O., Jan. 23.—Miss Mary Fry of Barn Hill, Tuscarawas county, was arraigned before Mayor Cassingham Saturday morning charged with masquerading in male attire. Three months ago Miss Fry, who is 18 years old, applied at the Tuscarora Advertising Company and secured a position as pressfeeder. She gave her name as Fred Johnston, and during all that time not one of her co-workers suspected that she was other than the good looking and agile young man that her attire and manner betokened.

In fact, "Fred" became desperately enamored of a well-known young lady and at Christmas presented her with a handsome engagement ring. Last Sunday a Barn Hill resident while attending church in this city recognized Miss Fry as she entered the sanctuary escorting her lady love. Knowing of her mysterious absence rfom home the visitor began an investigation and finally confronted the young woman at her work in the factory. She acknowledged the deception she had been practicing and consented to return to her home. In the mayor's court she disclaimed any intention of wrongdoing.

She said her father had compelled her to perform the most arduous field labor until her face and hands had lost all semblance to girlhood and she then determined to make her way in the world in man's attire. Miss Fry has been domiciled as a favorite boarder in the home of a respectable family on Seventh street, and in her belongings in her room was found a complete feminine wardrobe. She donned female attire before leaving the city prison for her home.

Fenian Raids Delayed.

New York, Jan. 21.—An evening paper to-day quotes a general officer of the Clan-na-Gael, a man who has a good record as a fighter in the United States army, as saying—

"It would be folly to send men into Canada at this time of the year. They would have more to fear from the snow and intense cold than from any forces that the Canadians could send against them. Invasion of Canada just now is out of the question, but there will be preparations all along the line to take advantage of the break-up of the winter. I do not expect that the war in South Africa will have been ended by that time."

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 6.—Considerable money was raised for the Boer relief fund at a pro-Boer meeting last night held under the auspices of the local branch of the Holland Transvaal Relief Society. Judge Newkirk, of Ann Arbor, made the principal address to the 600 persons present.

Tom Miller's Close Call.

Mr. F. W. Miller received a letter from a nephew, who is in the British army. This nephew had a letter from Corp. Tom. Miller, who is in the Scots Guards, stating that in the battle at Modder River the man on his left was wounded and the one on his right was killed.

HE ARMY HURT BY JEALOUSIES

e War Office Roundly Denounced by the Leading Papers in London.

London, Jan. 24.—Th since when the people of Great Britain no long- keep silent regarding the mismanage- ent of the war. The floodgates of crit- ism have been opened and under the ream of adverse comment pouring forth putations are wilting.

The stern upbraiding of the government y papers that almost for a century have een conservative have already been ached upon in these despatches. Abuse f the war office has always existed and w it is only a few degrees more bitter an it was before. What chiefly marks e passing of the British from a period f passive discontent to most severe fault- nding is the outspoken abuse of their nerals in the field. There are unpleas- nt stories of fierce service jealousies nd, in short, all the army's shortcom- ings, which hitherto have been se- retly whispered in clubs, are now find- g their way in print, and not in dis- eputable journals, but in organs that a onth ago would have denounced such tales as unpatriotic, whether they were true or otherwise.

Wolseley Hates New Chiefs.

It is now well known that General Bull- er despises Field Marshal Lord Roberts and Major General Lord Kitchener; that Lord Wolseley, the commander in chief, shares General Buller's feelings and that Wolseley is scarcely on speaking terms with the secretary of state for war, Lord Lansdowne.

To such a flagrant extent does this enmity go that Lord Wolseley wrote to Lady Buller that he knew nothing about Lord Roberts' appointment to command the British troops in South Africa and that he disapproved of it.

Without enormous obstacles to over- come in the way of the Boers' strenuous resistance and initial advantages this con- dition of affairs between the army leaders would constitute a tremendous drawback to the success of the British. One paper, usually well informed on service matters, declares that it is quite likely that Gen- eral Buller will throw up his command and be a thorn in the side of the government. This is probably an exaggeration, but it is admitted on all sides that he is likely to make himself as disagreeable as pos- sible to Lord Roberts.

As if this was not enough it is openly said that General Lord Methuen has gone mad, that his mother died insane and that all his life he has been afraid that he might share her fate. Hence, it is ad- ded, his unceasing restlessness.

Grave Charges Against Methuen.

Only this week a high cavalry officer returned from South Africa with com- plaints against Lord Methuen that the general during one of his first actions had ordered him to advance with his cav- alry and that upon the colonel sending the general word that his horses and men were too exhausted physically to be capable of doing so Lord Methuen is re- ported to have said—"Well, you had bet- ter go to hell."

The officers to whom this remark was made has come home demanding a trial by court-martial, but it is probable that he will not get it, as he has been slated for another command.

Generals White, Gatacre, Clery and French all come in for their share of abuse, and there is evidence presented that the senior generals are divided ag- ainst themselves.

How all this will end if the campaign drags on much longer without serious change for the better no one can tell. The resignation of Lord Wolseley would not surprise those who are cognizant of the inner workings of the war office. A great victory would probably quiet the feeling of discontent till the day of reck- oning in parliament arrived. But, lack- ing that, there seems pending an up- heaval which bodies ill for the govern- ment, the war office and some of the generals in the field, for these ranklings are current not so much among the lower, sensation-loving classes, but among the highest born and most even-minded of Great Britain's best citizens.

Civilian Interests Are Involved.

Nor is the discontent confined to the inaction of the generals. Several of the most powerful civilian factors in English life; some of them almost as much finan- cially interested in the future of South Africa as the government itself, have re- peatedly urged certain reforms in the methods of carrying on the war, not meddling with the purely military phases, but offering, for instance, to purchase horses for the Cape, pointing out a better means of transport, urging a more vig- orous campaign, giving information as to the best routes toward the objective and supporting everything by expert witness- es brought, often at a great expense, from the Cape.

A distinguished body, including a for- mer governor and about a dozen men who have held civil, military or irregular pos- itions of control during the recent trou- bles in South Africa, waited upon Major General Ardagh, director of the military intelligence department of the war office, the very week previous to that which marked the three disasters to the British arms. These men begged Gen- eral Ardagh to accept certain offers and intimated that he had underestimated the opposing forces. The general listen- ed and replied—"Thank you, gentlemen. But you are wrong. We outnumber them at every point and we have got 'em like that." Thereupon General Ardagh ban- ged his open palms together.

Daring Project Is Discussed.

In spite of this discouraging reception the men referred to repeated their offers and the war office now seems to have awakened to the seriousness of the posit- ion and the officials are likely to accept one of the most daring projects ever un- dertaken, the full scope of which those posted are not at liberty to disclose, but which, if perfected, will work independ- ently of the war office to achieve one of the most important British objectives.

The imperial yeomanry, after the first flush of public applause, is being gauged gingerly. It is dawning on the minds of all that what Great Britain wants are crack shots and rough riders, after the type of the American cavalrymen, and frequent comments appear pointing out that the average yeoman, who is a farm- er, does not come up to this standard, while the average lordling who adds bril- liancy to the force, is not generally much nearer the mark in this respect than his yeoman tenant, that both have far less military training than the members of the volunteer force, and it is a fact that a large percentage of the enrolled im- perial yeomen have never served even in the yeomanry.

Yeomanry Believed Useless.

What is being forced upon the war of- fice is that 100 colonials accustomed to bushwhacking, cow-punching and scout- ing are worth 1,000 English clerks and farmers. To find instances of the appall- ing impracticability distinguishing the formation of Great Britain's irregular corps it is only necessary to read the list of the kilt being taken out by the city of London volunteers. The officers of this body carry to the plains of South Africa an air pillow, cork mattress, can- vas basin, canvas bucket, a tin box of candles, a lantern, a filter and a host of other impedimenta that an American offi- cer would burn before starting on a ten- mile march, while the men are laden down with two pairs of trousers, four pairs of shoes, three caps, pyjamas, two large Tur- kish towels, a filter, a clothes-brush, a writing portfolio and other domestic artic- les. No wonder the British forces are not movable.

The revival of "She Stoops to Conquer" Tuesday and "A Midsummer Night's Dream" at Her Majesty's theatre Wed- nesday have given a decided impetus to the languid theatrical season. Both per- formances were decided successes. Beer- bohm Tree surpassed himself in the pro- ductions, which are unhesitatingly pro- nounced to be the finest exhibition of staging and scenery ever seen in Lon- don. Louis Frenar's Puck generally dis- pleases the critics, but adds an element of curiosity to the production, to which young Irving's wife, Dorothea Baird, who has not been seen on the stage for a long time, also contributes.

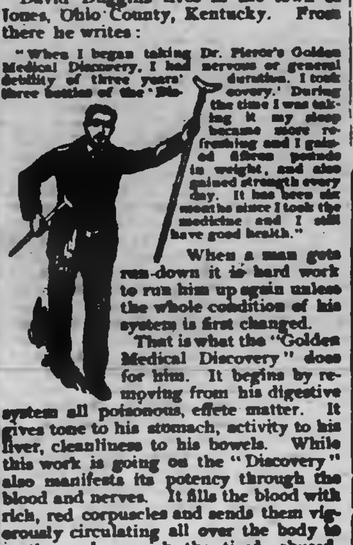
In George Alexander's reconstructed St. James' theatre, which will open shortly with "Rupert of Hentzau," is a curious innovation for the suburbanites in the shape of a room for them to don evening dress.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES

The debility of David Duggins has been completely cured.

David Duggins lives in the town of Jones, Ohio County, Kentucky. From there he writes:

"When I began taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, I had nervous or general debility of three years' duration. I took three bottles of the 'Discovery.' During the time I was taking it my sleep became more refreshing and I gained fifteen pounds in weight, and also gained strength every day. It has been six months since I took the medicine and I still have good health."



When a man gets run-down it is hard work to run him up again unless the whole condition of his system is first changed.

That is what the "Golden Medical Discovery" does for him. It begins by removing from his digestive system all poisonous, effete matter. It gives tone to his stomach, activity to his liver, cleanliness to his bowels. While this work is going on the "Discovery" also manifests its potency through the blood and nerves. It fills the blood with rich, red corpuscles and sends them vigorously circulating all over the body to soothe and nourish the tired, abused, screeching nerves.

When a man has nervous prostration it isn't his nerves that are wrong. It's his blood. Bad blood comes from bad digestion—bad stomach, bad liver, bad kidneys. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will put all these organs in good order. "Golden Medical Discovery" contains no alcohol in any form. It is entirely free from opium and other narcotics and contains neither sugar nor syrup which are injurious to some stomachs. Without any of these ingredients it retains its pleasant taste and healing qualities in any climate and under all conditions.

Don't let a careless or dishonest medicine seller cheat you out of your health by giving you a substitute.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

Anchor Ice.

Anchor ice forced the Water Company to shut down at 2.45 yesterday morning. The result was that consumers throughout the town were without water until about nine yesterday morning. They were of the opinion when the faucets in their houses did not act, that the pipes were frozen. It was a great relief to find later on that such was not the case.

40th ANNIVERSARY

Christian Alliance Convention.

A convention will be hedl at Bethany Tabernacle to-day and Friday. Rev. A. B. Simpson, of New York, will speak at 3 and 8 p.m. to-day. On Friday, Rev. Lellishuer, superintendent of missions in China, Rev. E. A. Funk, of New York, and others from Toronto, will address the convention at 10 a.m., and 3 and 8 p.m.

Conviction Quashed.

Judge Weller has given judgment in the appeal taken by defendant in case of Bessel vs. Bowman. Defendant appealed from conviction of the Police Magistrate, who found defendant guilty of selling intoxicating liquor to a party who drank to excess after receiving notice not to do so. The appeal was granted and the conviction quashed with costs, payable by prosecutor to defendant. Mr. F. D. Kerr appeared for the defendant on the appeal. Mr. E. B. Edwards, Q. C., for the prosecutor, and Mr. R. E. Wood for the Crown opposed appeal.

The Power Off.

Yesterday morning the Power Company's water wheels were stopped owing to anchor ice, the result being that there was no power, and the Times in consequence was two hours late. Our readers will therefore understand why their paper did not reach them at the usual time.

HELPS ELECTRICITY.

Grape-Nuts Build the Brain that Does the Planning.

A famous electrical engineer, Foote, who constructed the 3,000-horse power electric plant which supplies Battle Creek, Kalamazoo and other Michigan cities, says there is no food known that will supply him with the vitality and mental vigor from breakfast to noon that Grape-Nuts will.

Mr. Foote, in conversation, said — "There is no doubt left in my mind of these facts. I have tried all sorts of food, and kept track of the results. I gain steadily in reserve strength when I use Grape-Nuts, notwithstanding my occupation requires long continued and concentrated brain work." There is no artificial stimulant in Grape-Nuts. Nothing but the stimulus of good food that is scientifically prepared for immediate assimilation into blood and tissue, especially brain tissue. Brain workers can get sure and understandable results by using Grape-Nuts.

THE COUNTY COUNCIL.

JANUARY SESSION OF OUR COUNTY LEGISLATURE.

Yesterday's Proceedings—The Council Make a Grant of $25 Each to the County Volunteer Contingent.

The County Council went into session at the council chamber at the Court House at ten o'clock yesterday morning. The session was short. The Warden presided, and all the members were present.

The minutes of the opening session were read and confirmed.

The Standing Committees.

Mr. Pearse, chairman of the special committee appointed to strike the standing committees for the year, presented the report as follows:—

The committee appointed to strike standing committees for 1900 beg leave to report recommending the following, viz:—

County Property—Messrs. Hawthorne, Crowe, Fitzgerald and Peck, and that Mr. Hawthorne be chairman.

Appointments to Office— Messrs. Hawthorne, Crowe, Anderson, Pearse and Shaw, and that Mr. Shaw be chairman.

Roads and Bridges—Messrs. Buck, Peck. Crowe, Eastland, Fitzgerald, Hawthorne, Pearse, Anderson and Shaw, and that Mr. Anderson be chairman.

Schools—Messrs. Peck, Pearse, Eastland, Anderson. Buck and Hawtohrne, and that Mr. Eastland be chairman

Petition—Messrs. Anderson, Eastland, Crowe, Shaw and Buck, and that Mr. Crowe be chairman.

Finance and Assessment — Messrs. Buck, Peck, Crowe, Eastland, Fitzgerald, Hawthorne, Pearse, Anderson and Shaw, and that Mr. Pearse be chairman.

Equalization and Assessment — Messrs. Buck, Peck, Pearse, Crowe, Fitzgerald, Eastland, Hawthorne, Anderson and Shaw, and that Mr. Buck be chairman.

Joint Committee — Messrs. Pearse, Peck, Fitzgerald, Hawthorne, Anderson and Shaw be a committee to confer with the town of Peterborough in all matters of joint interest with power to act and that Mr. Peck be chairman.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

J. B. PEARSE,
Chairman.

For Mt. Julian Wharf.

Mr. Eastland moved, seconded by Mr. Shaw that the council make a grant of $25 to assist in completing the wharf at Mt. Julian, Stony lake, provided that the Dominion Government make a grant of $100 towards the same object, and that memorials be prepared to further this purpose.

The motion carried.

For the County Boys.

Mr. Pearse said he desired to bring up a matter that was mentioned in committee the night befire. He said as they all knew a second contingent was leaving for South Africa and that several young men from the county had volunteered for service and were leaving for the front. He felt that the patriotic action and sacrifice of these men were deserving of recognition at the hands of the county. Something in this line had been done in other places and local municipalities had made preparations. He thought and he believed all the members of the Council and the people of the county would desire to see those brave men receive some recognition as residents of Peterborough county who had made this sacrifice for their country's sake. He therefore moved that the sum of $25 be granted to each resident of the county who had volunteered and been accepted for service on the second contingent in South Africa.

This was not to include those who went from town and received a similar grant from the town.

Mr. Hawthorne said that he believed the county was as loyal as the town, and should do something for the county boys who had left to go to the front. He had much pleasure in seconding the motion.

Some informal discussion took place as to the method that would be followed in forwarding the grant, etc. Mr. Pearse then introduced a clause in his resolution that "the treasurer is hereby authorized to telegraph the amount to Lt.-Col. Greenwood to be presented by him to the following named volunteers before embarkation—

Gerald Hayward, Smith; Percival Wasson, Asphodel; W. J. Hampton, Norwood; Fred Scollie, Smith; E. Thompson, Douro; Geo. E. Fleming, Norwood; A. J. Hall, Smith; Wm. White, Norwood; Percy Price, Otonabee.

Mr. Eastland suggested that an Apsley man who had gone from Toronto with the first contingent be included, but this was not accepted.

Mr. Buck doubted whether it was the best thing to do to give young men who were going away money like this. He did not wish to oppose anything in connection with such a cause, but he did not know whether it would be wise or not.

Mr. Shaw said he heartily endorsed the grant and was prepared to support it no matter what effect it might have on his constituents. He believed it was the right thing to do.

The motion carried.

Entrance Exams at Keene.

A deputation composed of Messrs. M. W. Matchett, of the Ashburnham Public school; S. A. Smithson, of Villiers, Otonabee, and J. W. Wallace, of Keene, were present to support a request that entrance examinations be held at Keene. They argued that schools near Keene were under a disadvantage in having to send pupils to Peterborough or Norwood. It entailed expense which some people could ill afford. The expense of these examinations would not be great, they pointed out, and would benefit the poorer classes.

Mr. Pearse said there was a similar request from Apsley and he thought both of these might be considered by the school committee.

Mr. Eastland thought there was a great deal in what the deputation had said, and he seconded Mr. Pearse's motion.

This was carried and the Council adjourned.

PETERBOROUGH'S DEFEATED.

The Hockey Match Last Resulted in Victory for Toronto Men.

Gee whiz! Did you see the ice smoke last night? It was hot, hot enough to sizzle. Talk about steel striking steel! 'Twas steel striking ice and fire flying, and with it all, Peterborough lost by one goal.

The following players lined up before the referee, J. McFadden, of Stratford.

Peterborough—Wasson, goal; Glover, point; Hollingshead, cover point; L. King, Davidson, Graham and Watt, forwards.

Wellingtons—Morrison, goal; Morphy, point; Smart, cover point; Hill, McKay, Chadwick and Aedagh, forwards.

The referee called the teams at 9.04 and in one minute Davidson scored the first goal for Peterborough—a good start. It took seven minutes more for King to get the second, but Wellingtons evende up matters with two goals in six and nine minutes, and to make themselves solid they took the odd trick in the first half in four minutes more. Half time Peterborough 2, Toronto 3.

At 9.50 the whistle blew for the second half, and if the first half was a hurricane, the secod was a whirlwind, a monsoon and typhoon combined. Peterborough took the first, Toronto the next 2, Peterborough the 4th and 5th and Toronto the 6th—making the total 7t o 5 in favor of Toronto.

The game was too fast for much combination work, and individual rushes were the order of the night. At this work McKay, of the Wellingtons, was the star.

The result was a disappointment to the admirerers of the home team, as it throws them out of the running for the season, as there is not much likelihood of Osgoode doing much harm to "them Wellingtons."

Notes.

The Shamrocks, hockey champions of the world, are to make a trip west in February, after their games with the Victorias of Winnipeg.

The Globe said yesterday that two Canadian boxers will compete in the national amateur boxing tournament in New York month. John L. Scholes, the featherweight champion of the British Empire, has entered in the 125-pound class and is already in active training. Chris Graham, of Peterborough, the clever sparrer who made such a good showing when pitted against Scholes at the tourney promoted by the T. A. C. some years ago, will also go. He was only a youngster at the time and weighed considerably under the limit. Since then he has improved in every respect, having had the benefit of the tuition of Jim Popp and "Billy" Breen, the local professionals. Graham intends to enter the featherweight class at New York, and his admirers believe that he will lower the colors of Champion Scholes if they come together.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

The man who has nothing to do but clip coupons cuts quite a figure.

The Times wants correspondents in Norwood, Havelock and Campbellford.

Yes, my dear boy, Mr. McWilliams has no reason to be ashamed of the vote he got in the mayoralty election. He might have known, however, that in dealing with a cloth manufacturer he was liable to get "worsted."

Messrs. McDougall, Brandon; and Austin, Fenelon Falls, delivered to the Matthew's Company, two cars of hogs yesterday.

The County Council proposes to have the by-laws of the Council consolidated and printed. It will make a volume of 400 pages.

An Unearthly Noise.

Many residents of the south end were aroused from their slumbers last night shortly after 12 o'clock by an unearthly noise. It appears that the whistle valve on the boiler of Arnott's cheese box factory had become loose, and the escaping steam caused a prolonged whistle, which sounded anything but cheerful. Mr. Brady, of Ashburnham, an employee of the General Electric Co., climbed the roof and tighjtened the valve, putting an end to the din which had been going an hour or more.

GENERAL WARREN'S FORCE DRIVES THE ENEMY AWAY FROM SPION KOP

Gen. Buller's Phrase, "The Men Are Splendid," Fills Britain With Pride and Confidence. Gen. Woodgate Dies From Wounds Received in Action.

General Warren Has Rendered the Boer Position Untenable. The Enemy Raised White Flag But Both Sides Continued Firing. Seasoned Troops From India Reinforce Buller. A Forward Movement by Gen. French is Daily Expected.

eral Buller's phrase, "The men are plendid," thrills England with pride nd confidence. His taking and hold- g Spion Kop are considered perman- nt advances.

Charles Warren's opinion that miles f the adjacent Boer trenches are un- nable is accepted by most expert ob- rvers as obviously true, because of e height of the position, although some oint out that it may lack adequate un platform to resist artillery fire rom the two extended sides.

e Keldon Castle reached Durban on hursday with 2,000 additional troops r General Buller, and thre stroop- hips have arrived from India, bringing mong others a regiment of lancers. eyond these it is not publicly known how heavily General Buller has een reinforced, but those having cer- ain connections with the War IOffice re confident that Gen. Buller will have s many more men as he may need to ake his work easier.

e situation in the neighborhood of the ther armies is unchanged, but a for- ard movement by General French is aily expected. A despatch to the St- ndard from Rensburg describes Gen. rench's disposition as now forming great semi-circle around the Boer ositions. The correspondent says he ould take Colesburg, two miles away, t any time.

letter from Pretoria gives the text of complaint which President Kruger nt to President Steyn regarding the ant of co-operation on the part of the Free Staters at Modder River, and also President Steyn's address to the Free Staters. Mr. Kruger said he learned with regret that "Only about 1,000 men of the Free State fought at the last battle, and that many others remained in their camps while their brothers re- isted and even defeated the enemy." These statements appear to give official confirmation to the reports of dis- agreement between the allies.

OFFICIAL INTIMATION.

London, Jan. 25.—The War Office has ssued the following despatch from Spear- an's Camp, dated Jan. 26, 12.10, morning: "General Warren's troops last night ccupied Spion Kop, surprising the small arrison, who fled.

"It has been held by us all day, though e were heavily attacked, especially by very annoying shell fire.

"I fear our casualties are considerable, nd I have to inform you with regret hat Gen. Woodgate was dangerously ounded.

"General Warren is of the opinion that e has rendered the Boer's position un- enable. The men are splendid."

Major-General E. R. P. Woodgate, C. B., C. M. G., reported dangerously wounded in the engagement of Spion Kop, is in command of the Ninth Brigade. He had seen previous service. He is 55 years of age, and is the son of Rev. Henry A. Woodgate, B.D., rector of Selbroughton, Worcestershire. He was educated at Radley and Sandhurst, and in 1865 he joined the 4th King's Own Regiment, serving with it in the Abyssinian expedition of 1868, in which he won a medal for services; and he served in the Ashanti war of 1873-1874, receiving a medal with clasp, and was mentioned in despatches. In 1887 he passed the Staff College; he was promoted to captain in 1878, and in the same year went to South Africa on special service. He served in the Zulu war of 1879 as staff officer in the flying column and won a medal with clasp. From 1880-1885 he served as staff officer in the West Indies, and in the autumn of 1885 he proceeded to India as regimental officer. He returned in 1889 and was promoted lieut.-colonel in 1893, and commanded the first battalion of his regiment until June, 1897. In September of the same year he was appointed to command the regimental district of the King's Own at Lancaster, and in the following year he was sent on special service to organize a new regiment, and to take command of troops in Sierra Leone, where the tribes were in a state of rwbellion.

BULLER'S ONLY ORDER, ADVANCE.

London, Jan. 25.—General Buller's proclamation to his men on the eve of the conflict, which has resulted triumphantly in the capture of Spion Kop, has the Napoleonic ring about it. It is well worthy of a place in military literature and doubtless exercised a powerful influence upon the army of the Tugela in the continuous fighting which has resulted so victoriously.

General Buller's orders to his troops, the substance of which has already been cabled to the Associated Press after warning them to beware of false orders, concludes—

"Our Generals will only give one order, namely, "Advance!"

"Should anyone at any time be surprised by a volley at close quarters he must remember that the only way to safety and victory lies in rushing upon the enemy, for the one thing the enemy cannot stand is a hand-to-hand fight. This war has been forced for the lowest and basest motives by an enemy who uses every means of treachery, deceit and conspiracy tog ain their ends. Let us bear ourselves as the cause deserves."

THE SITUATION SIZED UP

London, Jan. 25.—General Warren has occupied Spion Kop. The Torres Vedras of the Boers on the Tugela has been pierced. The turning point of the campaign in Natal, watched during the past week with breathless interest, is reached and victory again is perched on British standards. The Boers garrison of the strongest redoubt among many strong redoubts, surprised in the darkness of Tuesday night by infantry which had silently worked its way up inaccessible slopes, fled to avoid the bayonet. When dawn began to break, a portion of the force which has been directed with such consummate skill during four days of continuous fighting by Sir Charles Warren, the hero of Bechuanaland, was found in undisputed possession of the Boer centre dominating the entrenched kopjes to right and left. But the enemy did not give up the struggle, though a hopeless one. During the whole of Wednesday he made repeated and fruitless attempts to regain his lost vantage, infantry attacks supported by heavy shell fire being tried again and again. Nightfall, however, still found the British masters of the situation, albeit their losses had been very heavy and included Brigadier Woodgate, an old African campaigner, who fell dangerously wounded.

This was the situation at midnight, and there is strong probability that the Boers, finding their attacks fruitless, may have fallen back during the night. General Warren, who is a master of tactics, and skilled in the enemy's methods of fighting, expresses the opinion that his work of Tuesda night has rendered it impossible for Joubert to further maintain the line of defences which has held the British at bay for nearly two months. It is apparent from this statement that artillery has been mounted on the height and dominates the enemy's position. This being the case, the only alternative at the choice of the burghers are either to retreat or stand their ground with the certainty of being decimated, surrounded and cut off. It is likely, therefore, that the former course will be, probably has been, adopted, so that Warren's force at reveille this morning in all likelihood gazed from the summit of Spion Kop upon an array of empty trenches to right and left, with the roads to Acton Holmes and Underbrook clear. This of course is mere assumption, but with a strong basis.

The foresight of General Buller in sending Lord Dundonald with the cavalry brigade to take up a position west of Acton Holmes on Thursday last now stands out clearly. This force commands the junction of the road from Trichard's drift to Acton Holmes with the highway along the foot of the Drakensberg to Ladysmith. The position is the one to which the Boers would naturally retreat if they were desirous of making a further stand along the road to Ladysmith. Its occupation by Dundonald forestalls them and leaves the way open for Warren to join hands with White, seeing that comparatively open country lies between Acton Holmes and the beleagured city. In that direction, at any rate, the Boers could not put up an effectual resistance, the lay of the land not favoring their style of warfare.

General Warren's division consists of the Second Somerset Light Infantry, the Second Dorsetshire Regiment, the Durban Light Infantry, the First Yorkshire and Lancashire, the First South Lancashire, the Second Lancashire Fusiliers, the Natal Rifles, the 19th and 28th batteries; so that these troops, at any rate, were among the combatants. With Gen. Hildyard, who was probably also engaged, are the Second Devons, the Second West Yorks, the Second West Surrey, and the Second East Surrey, while with General Hart, also north of the Tugela, are the First Inniskillings, the First Connaught Rangers, the First Loyal Dublin Fusiliers and the First Border Regiment. These two brigades, although they may not have been engaged in the night attack on Spion Kop, have undoubtedly taken a prominent part in the fighting which prefaced it.

SOUTH AFRICANS RUSHED KOPJE

New York, Jan. 25.—The Journal has the following—

London, Jan. 25.—At last the terrible suspense of London has been relieved by news of a British victory, which, although not final, has raised the hopes of the empire that Buller will yet succeed in pounding his way into Ladysmith.

Warren's division carried Spion Kop by storm Tuesda ynight, and held it all day yesterday, though heavily attacked by Boers.

The British loss was heavy. Among the wounded is General R. E. P. Woodgate, in command of the Ninth Brigade, Fourth Division, who was struck by a Boer shell and dangerously injured.

Warren believes that the position of the enemy beyond Spion Kop is untenable and that he will soon be able to dislodge them, thereby clearing the way for the onward movement for the relief of Ladysmith.

The news of the capture of the Boer strongholds came this morning in a despatch from Spearman's Camp, and was received with joy by the crowd which surrounded the War Office. The despatch states that the Boers are now raking Spion Kop with a heavy shell fire.

Warren's left flank began the attack, slowly but surely fighting its way towards the last position held by the Boers. Field batteries supported Warren's advance at intervals, and the infantry crept forward at every available opportunity, maintaining an accurate searching fire.

The Boers held their position with stubborn tenacity, though showing themselves charily above the trenches.

The kopje was finally taken by the South African Light Horse, they making a rush up the precipitous slope.

The British infantry now occupy all the strong positions.

Warren's skilful disposition of troops checked all efforts of the Boers to recapture their position. The Boers poured in a fierce shell fire all day, but the British held their position.

THE NEWS IN LONDON.

London, Jan. 25.—2.22 p.m.—The jubilation over Gen. Warren's achievement in capturing Spion Kop on Wednesday night is chastened by the realisation that his success is only provisional, as it appears clear from Gen. Buller's despatch that the Boers fully recognize the strategical importance of Spion Kop, and that at the time his message was sent off they had not abandoned the idea of recapturing the position. Nevertheless a heavy load of anxiety has been removed from the nation and there is general expectation that as the British succeeded in keeping the hill all day long they will manage to retain it. Gen. Warren has no doubt by this time planted guns enough on it to demoniate the Boer trenches right and left. Gen. Buller still has a task ahead of him calling for the most dogged persistence and untiring attack.

The relief of the tension on the Stock Exchange was very marked. Business beggan more cheerful all round and with an upward movement under the influence of the news at the War Office, and at the clubs and other resorts there was a notable change from the gloomy fears of yesterday. The appearance of news placards on the streets sent crowds of people to the War Office and the lobbies were soon filled to suffocation. Those near the notice board read out the news at frequent intervals for the benefit of late arrivals who were unable to approach, and each successive reading led to a renewal of cheering.

BOER POSITION SHAKEN.

London, Jan. 25.—In the ladies' lobby of the War Office there were signs of the sad side of the victory. A question often asked was "When will the casualties be received?"

Though General Buller's despatch is dated to-day and speaks of Spion Kop being captured "last night" it apparently means Tuesday night, as according to General Buller's despatch the "Small garrison was suprised" his subsequent statement "Our losses were considerable" indicates that the British later suffered greatly from the shell fire from further Boer positions.

The statement that there was only a small garrison at Spion Kop came somewhat as a surprise, as it had been imagined the Boers were there in great force, and it is taken in some quarters to indicate that the Boers were not so surprised at the assault as it appeared, but had previously drawn off their main body and left a small force to withstand the British advance.

The South African scout F. R. Burnham, now on his way back to South Africa to become a member of Lord Robert's staff, expressed considerable satisfaction at the news of the capture of Spion Kop. He said to a representative of the Associated Press; "It is evident that the Boer position is being shaken, and I do not think it will be a long business now to drive the Boers out of Drakensburg. We shall then reach a rolling open country where there is a chance to display tactics, undertake flanking movements and cavalry operations. But the Boers are determined to make a most determined stand around Pretoria. It will not take long to reach the Boer capital, but the seige of Pretoria will be both long and difficult."

Burnham says Ingram, another scout, leaves San Francisco forthwith to join him in South Africa.

PORTUGAL ACTS AT LAST.

London, Jan. 25.—A despatch to the London Daily Mail from Lorenzo Marques, dated Wednesday, says: "This morning all passengers booked for the Transvaal were stopped by Government order, with the exception of the Russian ambulance corps, who proceeded by special train.

BOER MAGAZINE BLOWN UP.

Modder River, Jan. 23.—A howitzer battery shelled the enemy's guns yesterday. One gun was silenced, and the entire magazine of the black powder which is now used by the Boers because their supply of smokeless powder is becoming rapidly exhausted, was blown up. A spirited reply was directed against the howitzer battery and with such accurate shooting that the absence of casualties on our side was remarkable. The situation of the Boers at Magersfontein is becoming unbearable. The insanitary condition of their camp is spreading enteric fever, and the absence of vegetables and all food except meats, with much exposure to the weather causes general dissatisfaction over the prolonged campaign. Moral disturbance is now a daily occurrence, producing the disease called fright. The general health of the British camp is satisfactory.

THE BURMESE CONTINGENT.

Rangoon, Jan. 25.—Three hundred and fifty mounted infantry left yesterday for Durban, under Major Cruickshank of the Essex Regiment. The men, who were picked from the British garrison are in fine condition.

BRITISH LOSSES TO DATE.

London, Jan. 25.—Nobody here seems to know, not even the War Office, what Lord Roberts has done with his large reinforcements. Six thousand troops awaited his arrival at Cape Town, and since then 6,000 others have reached there. Military critics are all hoping that a good share of these 12,000 have gone to help General Buller.

There are 19,000 troops at sea.

The British losses up to date in killed, wounded and captured, according to General Buller's last list, total 8,216 men.

BOMBARDING KIMBERLEY.

Modder River, Jan. 24.—A heliogram from Kimberley gives an account of a severe and well-directed Boer bombardment on Jan. 23. There were no casualties, but there were a number of narrow escapes.

The heliogram added that all the white employees of the De Beers Mining Company, numbering 6,000, have turned soldiers. They are receiving their usual wages from the company

The company is also employing 4,000 natives in road-making, etc.

The weekly wages amount to £2,000.

The populace are well and cheerful The authorities compel dealers to charge normal prices for necessaries but luxuries command famine prices.

GREAT FAITH IN WARREN.

Chicago, Jan. 25.—In his cable to the Record from London, Horace Townsend says:—

Gen. Warren's cool head and long experience, however, inspire confidence here that he will run no risk. It is presumable that the safety of his left is entrusted to Lord Dundonald. The wild rumor that the latter, with 1,000 cavalry men, had reached Ladysmith is utterly discredited. It is readily enought believed that the Boers would willingly allow him to reach the besieged town, but getting out would be another matter. He would be a source of weakness rather than strength, to the garrison.

Considerable attention is directed to subsidiary items of news from Cape Colony. It is learned that 2,000 Cape Town Dutch of Somerset East have determined to join the Boer army, and it is feared that the rebellion may spread across the colony, in which case serious danger will threaten the British communications, for all forces available for the guarding of the railways are stationed in the disaffected district to th enorth.

Other disquieting news is of the friction between the Imperial and colonial officers. In the present state of popular temper here all sympathy will be on the side of the colonials unless the Imperials have an unusually strong case. It is felt that too much mischief has already been done by an overbearing disposition and want of tact on the part of British officers and Government officials.

Every one has been discussing Lord Roseberry's speech delivered at Chatham. The chief point of interest is his Lordship's evident determination not to attack the Government. He causes surprise, also, by describing the war as the most formidable Great Britain has ever undertaken, and also by his frank reference to general ill-feeling against this country. His speech is generally regarded as reflecting admirably the sentiments of a majority of the people. It is pointed out that Lord Roseberry's declaration that the war represents a great gain, even though Great Britain has already lost prestige—since it proves that the empire is founded on a rock—is a curious echo of Dr. Conan Doyle's utterances at the Authors' Club, when he suggested as an inscription of a monument to President Kruger: "To the Memory of the Man Who Federated the British Empire."

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

Hockey.

The Seniors are out of it—Too late hours had something to do with it.

The O.A.C. hockey club of Guelph seem to have made out a good case against the Toronto team with which they were drawn to play.

The Juniors are looked upon to keep up the honor of the town.

Nolan Cabe of Collingwood, ruled a professional by the executive has made a declaration that he never was paid for his services, either in lacrosse or hockey.

The game to-night between the juniors and Kingston ought to be another warm thing. We hope that the juniors wi'l have a bumber house

Varsity and Stratford played a draw in Toronto on Wednesday night, in the senior series.

Queen's won their first game with Pittsburg on Wednesday night. Wonder if it was on "Walter's" team

Lacrosse.

It is expected that the Tecumsehs of Toronto, will not be admitted into the senior league. Two or three of the eastern clubs are against their admittance.

Monday nigth will show what team of lacrosse players are to be transferred to the professional ranks. Most of the clubs seem to be all at sea as to the identy of the team.

OFFICER'S STRANGE PRESENTIMENT.

Major Childe, Who Was Forewarned of Death, Wrote His Own Epitaph.

Spearman's Camp, Jan. 23, 9.30 p.m. —The battle continues to-day. The infantry fire is concentrated at the crest of the hill, near the centre. The Boers are holding the corresponding crest in the valley. It virtually is an artillery bombardment. The Boers are replying occasionally and moving their guns when they are located by the British but seldom fire more than three shots from one place.

A corps of stretcher-bearers raised by Major Stuart Wortley, behaved well during the fighting after volunteering to bring in the wounded under a heavy fire.

At 2 o'clock the Boers raised a white flag on the summit of a high hill, but both sides continued firing.

On January 20, Major Childe, with the South African Horse, climbed a very steep hill. Private Tobin got up to the summit ten minutes before the rest and began waving his hat, thus drawing the enemy's fire. Dundonald reinforced Major Childe.

The Boer continued shelling and Childe was killed and four men wounded. Child had a strong presentiment that he would be killed and asked his brother officers to put the following words over his grave: "It is well with thee, Childe, it is well." This was done and Dundonald read the funeral service.

FIVE HUNDRED IN THIRD CORPS.

Lord Strathcona Increases His Contingent by an Additional Hundred Men.

Ottawa, Jan. 25.—The Department of Militia has not yet fixed upon asteamer for Strathcona's Horse. The Elder-Dempster people report that the Montrose will not be ready in time, and negotiations are going on in regard to the Monterey. If the Monterey can be obtained, it will be very suitable, and can take three squadrons, which it is proposed to send, of 163 each, or nearly 500 in all.

The Allen Line people are pressing for the Numidian, but it could only carry two squadrons, of about 200 each, or 400 in all, which Lord Strathcona first proposed. Now he has increased it to three squadrons.

The Milwaukee is expected to start from New Orleans for Halifax on Saturday. Dr. Borden says that the only officer of the contingent so far appointed is Col. Steele.

NO RELIEF YET FOR LADYSMITH.

Warren Needs Reinforcements and White Cannot Help Him From His Side.

London, Jan. 25.—Ladysmith is still very far from being relieved spite of Warren's success at Spion Kop, in the opinion of Gen. Sir William Green, of Crimean and Indian fame.

"I read the cable message as meaning that Warren had occupied the elevated part of the kop," he said today. "The Boers are still on the ridge and it will now be Warren's aim to drive them completely off. He ought to be able to do this, but he needs reinforcements. It is evident he surprised only the advanced force of Boers, who were still strong enough to keep up a shell fire all of yesterday.

"My belief is that the Boers between Warren and Ladysmith number 20,000. Buller must hurry up men to sustain Warren, who in the meantime will hold his position.

"Ladysmith cannot yet be relieved for some time. White meantime cannot assist Buller much. The ammunition at Ladysmith is running short. It must behoarded for defence, nto expended for attack."

MAY GATHER AT THE CAPITAL.

Ottawa Will be the Probable Point of Mobilization of Strathcona's Horse.

Ottawa, Jan. 24.—It is very probable that the point of concentration of the Strathcona contingent will be Ottawa. Comptroller Fred White, who has charge of recruiting in the west, has made this suggestion t othe militia authorities, and it has been favorably entertained. The idea is to bring recruits east by the car loads when they are ready and have them outfitted equipped and drilled in Ottawa before embarking at Halifax. There is excellent accommodation as was shown in case of "D" battery, in Ottawa Parliament would be sitting at the time, and the members would have an opportunity of seeing the regiment mobilized here.

Lord Strathcona, who sails for Canada shortly, will also be here by that time, and would have an excellent opportunity of reviewing the troops and making suggestions before they embarked. Ottawa citizens may be relied upon to make the stay of the soldiers here a plesant one.

Morning Times

PETERBOROUGH, JANUARY 26, 1900

ANOTHER WATERWAY.

Mr. Tarte's proposal to make the French River navigable by vessels drawing 12 feet from Georgian Bay to Lake Nipissing recalls the old discussions upon the so-called "amphibious route." When Hon. Alex. Mackenzie took office in 1873, he suggested that the best way to proceed with the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway was to utilize the "water stretches" and to build first the links of railway between those water stretches. The Nipissing route to the Northwest was a very old one, having been followed by Champlain as far back as 1615. The project for a canal route from Montreal to Georgian Bay, via the Ottawa, Mattawa and French Rivers, was also very old. Mr. Mackenzie let the contracts for a road from Ottawa to Lake Nipissing, for a road from Winnipeg eastward. He also built a road from Winnipeg south to the United States boundary. Then he went out of office.

The Government that succeeded that of Mr. Mackenzie as soon as possible handed the whole Pacific Railway project over to a company, and insisted upon the immediate completion of the all-rail route from Montreal to the Pacific Ocean. To discuss the wisdom or unwisdom of that policy would do no good now. Time has proved that grain could not be carried from Winnipeg to Montreal by rail at a profit. The Canadian Pacific has carried passengers and light freight by rail to Winnipeg and back, but it has put the grain in elevator at Fort William, thence to be taken eastward by water. Some went to Owen Sound and Collingwood, en route for Montreal, but most of it went to New York, via Buffalo.

To remedy that state of affairs, to keep Canadian trade in Canadian channels, Mr. Tarte has completed the St. Lawrence canals, has improved Montreal harbor and provided for elevators there, and now he proposes to make the French River navigable. French River is fifty-five miles long; it requires two locks, some dams and some dredging. Lake Nipissing is fifty miles long. At its eastern end the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway and a branch of the Grand Trunk Railway, leading to Toronto and Hamilton, are found. The improvement of French River will give a deep waterway from Fort William to North Bay on Lake Nipissing, 650 miles, and the remaining rail route to Montreal is 360 miles. Then the C.P.R. will be able to compete with the Canada Atlantic and Parry Sound road in carrying grain to Montreal.

Mr. Macleod Stewart, of Ottawa, will be pleased with the Government's plan of making French River navigable. It is part of his scheme for an Ottawa-Georgian Bay Canal, by means of which ship loads of grain will some day be carried right from Fort William to Montreal. Mr. Stewart has been asking for a Government guarantee of interest on the cost of his canal. If the Government builds one end of it, leaving him to build the other end, he will probably be satisfied. Meanwhile, how much is the French River improvement going to cost?

THE CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY.

The advantages of the Canadian Pacific Railway as a military route were never so thoroughly demonstrated as within the past two months. Were it not for this road, spanning the continent, the troops from the far West would have to spend weeks instead of days in reaching the Atlantic, for it would be impossible to send them by any American railroad.

But it is not simply in its carrying capacity that the Canadian Pacific is invaluable to Canada. The road is also doing splendid work as an advertising medium for Canada in London and other points in Great Britain. Writing to the Montreal Star recently, Mr. James Johnson, who was formerly an editor of the "Daily News," says in this connection—

"In the course of several years' residence in England, I had numerous opportunities of watching the operations of the Canadian Pacific Railway in the matter of advertising the Dominion; and I do not hesitate to say that the amount of money spent in circulating maps, folders, illustrated folders and pamphlets, photographs and reproductions of photographs, etc., is considerably larger than the sum annually spent by the Government with a similar object in view. One has only to visit the company's offices, King William street, London, to get an idea of what is done in that line. The offices are in a most central position—at the junction of King William and Gracechurch streets, opposite London bridge, close by Cannon street, and within three minutes' walk of the Bank of England. The traffic in the neighborhood is enormous, and, consequently, it is not unusual to find it at times congested in front of the C.P.R. offices, whose windows are irresistibly attractive. Their contents include maps, pamphlets, views along the route of the great continental highway, pictures of the company's steamships, specimens of ore from Canadian mines, cereals from the prarie, fish from rivers and lakes, and other practical illustrations of Canada's rich and varied resources.

"Such are some of the means adopted by the Canadian Pacific Railway to advertise Canada. Of course, it is all in its own interests; but it is too late in the day to deny that the Canadian Pacific Railway construction and development have been among the most important factors in bringing Canada to the proud position which she occupies today; and this may be truthfully alleged and successfully demonstrated without attempting to minimize the importance and value of previously existing lines, which have rendered the country invaluable service. Those who remember the condition of affairs in Canada before the Grand Trunk system was in existence appreciate the extent to which its operations have been beneficial; and they will not be slow to admit that since Canadians have been placed in a position to enable them to cross the continent, from ocean to ocean, by a great railway of their own, the Dominion's progress has been unprecedently rapid. From commercial, military, imperial and travelling standpoints, the importance of the Canadian Pacific Railway cannot be over-estimated."

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Calgary, N.W.T., with a population of only 4,000 in one week's time raised $2,5000 for the men of that place who joined the Northwest mounted rifles. At that ratio Peterborough should have raised at least $7,500.

Dawson ought not to suffer much from the cold this season. It had not fewer than eighteen fires between December 1 and 30; and on Wednesday night, Jan. 10, it worked in a half-million dollar fire.

The Pavements.

Mr. D. W. Dumble writes as follows in a local contemporary—"To find fault is unpleasant but it is often a duty. I do not want to indulge in it, especially in reference to a class of men who give their efforts to their townsmen gratuitously. When the grades for the new walks were being struck last summer there were many portests and the general complaint was that in very many places the grades were too low and that the water, slush and ice of the winter would prove it.

The common sense view of the people was treated with contempt and the views of the skilled Engineer and experienced council were put into effect.

What is the result? Let the Board of Works make an official inspection and report, and the result will sustain the common sense as against the scientific production. In many places the granolithic walks are under water, in more places they are a mass of ice, while the old plank walks, yet unremoved, are clean and dry. Murray street sidewalks are a scandal and a nuisance, Water street is bad and Brock street is no credit.

If we have squandered our money in getting worse for bad, let us not repeat the mistake, and if any more walks are made this year let the experience of last year save us from a repetition of all blunders, for they are too costly to be indulged in as luxuries.

The Center of Population.

"Census experts estimate," says the Chicago Post, "that the center of population will be found next year to be in Indiana, close to the Illinois line, at a point not far removed from the town of Vincennes. The last census showed the population center to be between Columbus, Ind., and Cincinnati. The increase in the population of Georgia, Texas, the Indian Territory, Oklahoma, New Mexico and Arizona during the last ten years has been sufficient, it is thought, to offset any increase in the northwest and to possibly pull the center somewhat to the south of the 1890 parallel. The wealth center is thought to be in the neighborhood of Sandusky, O."

Animal Criminals.

A writer in Forest and Stream says that the criminal tendency is manifested to a greater or less extent by all the lower animals, and he has compiled a list of 18 crimes which are commonly committed by birds, beasts or reptiles. The indictment includes murder, parricide, fratricide, suicide, theft, kidnaping, highway robbery, polygamy and drunkenness.

GLIMPSES OF SOUTH AFRICA.

In Peace and in War—A Splendid Lot of Views

Southern Africa, that enormous expanse of tropically verdant territory extending from the Lambesi River to the Cape of Good Hope, has for a century or more lain dormant to the eyes of the civilized world. Only within the past two decades has public attention been drawn to the wonderful natural resources and mineral wealth of this wild and rugged land, and yet, within this period, marvelous creation of brilliant modern cities have supplanted the desert lands and haunts of savage tribes. The steady march of civilization, the all-pervading ambitions to accumulate the wealth of diamonds and gold that lay beneath the crust of this benighted land, each has borne its part in the metamorphosis and heralded to the world the wonderful possibilities of that "Dark Continent" for the energy and enterprise that the 20th century will bring to light.

In no other country of the world has progress been marked with such adversity and strife as Africa. From the time the early Dutch settlers landed in the Cape Colony up to the present, there has existed almost a constant state of warfare; the natives disputing the advance of the Dutch and they in turn resenting the inroads of civilization. In spite of this, so strenuous were the efforts of the colonists in their determination to turn to account the beauties and resources of the land of their adoption, that today they enjoy the fruits of their successes in a paradise of tropical vegetation, a salubrious climate and surrounded by the highest auvantages of intellectuality and luxuries of civilization.

Cape Town is the metropolis and seat of government of the Cape Colony. Its historical past and present is firmly linked in the traditions of the early Dutch and the Huguenots. True, the old forts and buildings of distinctly Dutch architecture still remain but magnificent edifices of the most modern type, beautiful botanical gardens and the public improvements are evidences of the wonderful advance of civilization.

Port Elizabeth is the Liverpool of South Africa. It is a great commercial center, coupled with some of the largest shipping interests in the world; a city of the most modern type, essentially English in character, and possessing some of the largest as well as the most architecturally magnificent buildings and public institutions in South Africa.

Natal is the beautiful, tropical Garden Colony. Its luxurious vegetation and glorious climate, its wide avenue of trees and fine buildings, the native Zulu servants and the picturesque costumes of the Orientals, lend an ear of peace and tranquility, while the marks of civilization and progress are in evidence at every turn.

Johannesburg, the Golden, with its fine architectural creations, public institutions and parks, possesses many attractions that easily place it as the foremost city of South Africa. Its great industry, mining, the apparently inexhaustible veins of gold-bearing quartz, in which upwards of seven hundred millions of dollars are invested, have been the attraction for the thousands and thousands of "Uitlanders," whose "grievances" are substantially the cause for the cruel war between Briton and Boer, the battles of which have been ranked as the "bloodiest of the century."

So great has been the interest manifested in South Africa and the progress of the war, and so eager the thirst for information, coupled with the demand for a Pictorial History incident to the scenes of warfare, that the publication of "Glimpses of South Africa" has been undertaken upon a scale of grandeur, fidelity and completeness never before though of, involving as it has an expense of extraordinary magnitude. In order that the work might be absolutely reliable and thorough in its character, the publishers have contracted for its authorship with Mr. Wymble Flemming, an Afrikander, whose authority upon South African matters is world-widely acknowledged. This gentleman,—born in the Cape Colony, having travelled over nearly every inch of the country south of the Lambesi River and lived in South Africa for nearly thirty years, with an extensive newspaper experience in Africa, England and America, the author of many interesting sketches of South African life and scenery, formerly connected with the consular service at Port Elizabeth, whose comments on the war have been a favorably received by the American press, and whose magnificent collection of photographs will appear in this work,—will present South Africa as it is today, with views of everything of public interest, including most of the important scenes of battle and a graphically illustrated description of each stage in the progress of the war.

This great work is published in serial form, and when complete will comprise the most magnificent collectoin of photographic reproductions of the British-Boer war and South Africa obtainable in this country. Portfolios distributed by the Morning Times. For particulars see announcement on another page of this issue.

SOME COVETED SCRAWLS.

Rare Autographs For Which Immense Prices Have Been Paid.

The most prized autographs in the world are those of Shakespeare. Only seven are claimed to exist, three signatures to his will (each with a different spelling), two to conveyances of property, one in the folio edition of his plays (doubtful) and one in a Tudor translation of Montaigne. This last is in the British museum and cost over 3,000 guineas.

One thousand guineas was the price given by the late Mt. Alfred Morrison of Carlton House terrace for an autograph letter written by Marie Stuart to the archbishop of Guise. This and two other letters (one to the pope and the other to the king of France) were written by the unfortunate queen of Scots on the morning of her execution. The letter to the French king was destroyed during the days of the terror, while that to the pope is still preserved at the Vatican.

The well known bookseller Bernard Quaritch gave £1,000 for an autograph of Columbus, which was exhibited at the World's fair at Chicago. A Chicago autograph dealer is said to have offered to give $100,000, or over £20,000, for a genuine autograph of Shakespeare if brought to him within a year of making his offer. It was a safe bluff, for since the tragic fate of Chatterton no forger has cared to tackle the quaint scrawl of the Bard of Avon.—Collier's Weekly.

The Architect.

One must wonder why it really is that so little is said or thought about architecture, the grandest, the mother, of all arts, a great, a most useful, science, one in which a greater revolution has lately taken place and in which more progress has been made, with more stupendous results, than in any other, remarks a writer in The International Magazine.

Was it not Richelieu who, paraphrasing an ancient writer, said: "If it is versatility you seek, go find an architect. He must be an artist, or his buildings will offend the eye; an engineer, or they will crumble into trouble; a lawyer, or he will get his patrons into trouble; a doctor, or his buildings will be hygienically unfit to live in, and, last, but not least, he must be a gentleman, or we will have nothing to do with him."

Time to Give Up.

An Iowa judge recently related an amusing incident that had occurred in his court when a colored man was brought up for some petty offense. The charge was read, and as the statement "The state of Iowa against John Jones" was read in a loud voice the colored man's eyes bulged nearly out of their sockets and he seemed overcome with terror and astonishment. When he was asked if he had anything to say or pleaded guilty or not guilty, he gasped out:

"Well, yo' honah, ef de whole state o' Iowa is ag'in dis one pore niggah I'se gwine to give up right now!"

His "Dear Old Jim."

"Corbett is my friend and benefactor," says Mr. Jeffries. "I was once his sparring partner, and he treated me as a gentleman. Hence I have gladly agreed to fight him as a return for favors. I am bound by all the ties of friendship and gratitude to give him a chance to fight me." Was there ever such a touching instance of devotion? Mr. Jeffries will reward his old patron and benefactor by beating him into pulp and knocking his head off. One can fancy him saying, as he puts his terrible right into his friend's ribs, "Dear old Jim!"—Kansas City Star.

The Billing and Cooing.

Uncle George—You do not appear to think it necessary to spend so much time at home as you did when you were first married. I suppose the billing and cooing are all over now.

Harry—There doesn't seem to be much of a let up in the billing, and, as for the cooing, I am dreadfully afraid of it. It is sure to mean a new hat or a new gown or a new something.—Boston Transcript.

Skin.

Each average human being has about 15,000 square feet of skin to look after and nearly 3,000,000 oil and sweat glands. The outer layer of skin is constantly wearing off and must be constantly removed to allow the new skin beneath to form fresh, white and beautiful.

EASY LIFE IN NICARAGUA.

When the Family is Broke, the Wife Digs a Little Gold.

"When I was in the Olancho district, in Nicaragua," said a visitor who is largely interested in mining in Central America, "I had an opportunity of seeing how the lazy natives tap nature's till when they need some small change.

"Near our camp by the river was a hut occupied by a typical Honduranian family, consisting of husband and wife, grandfather and grandmother and a dozen or so of assorted children. The only one of the crowd who did anything except rest and smoke was the wife. At intervals of perhaps a week she would sally out with the family tinpan, erstwhile used for cooking, and proceed to an old placer digging on the river bank. There she would squat, throw a few gourdfuls of dirt into the pan, fill it with water and begin the usual circular motion of gold washing.

"She was very skillful and would keep a little sheet of dirty water spraying over the edge like a miniature cataract. When the water was exhausted, a few spoonfuls of sand would be left in the bottom of the pan, and, spreading it out thin with a bit of stick, she would go over it grain by grain, looking for 'color.' Whenever she saw a speck of gold she moistened the stick on her tongue and picked up the particle by adhesion. Each bit of the precious metal was stored away in a quill, plugged with clay at the ends, and I have known her to take out as much as a quarter of an ounce in the course of one day.

"Usually her limit was about $2, and when she got that she stopped. Then the head of the house would arise languidly and start for the nearest store, 12 miles away. Sometimes he would trade the whole amount for whisky; but, as a rule, he brought back tobacco, salt, meal or calico.

"There are hundreds of native families who live in exactly that manner in Olancho. Sometimes the woman will be lucky enough to strike a rich pocket that will yield a dollar or more a pan, but they never dream of washing it out at once and getting a stake. It simply means that they can secure their usual amount with less work."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

NO "PROPERTY" ESCAPES.

Some Queer Things to Be Seen in a Chinese Theatre.

Over the audience rests a settled, immovable stillness, unbroken even by a sigh. No expression referable to sorrow, sympathy, joy or tears lightens the blank, dead wall of the faces. The Chinaman is impregnable. Only once do his eyes change, and that is while the property man is on the stage, and he is never off it.

The Chinese property man sees his duty to the management and puts it into practical effect. No "property" shall escape him. He gathers all things by the way. When the Chinese Romeo slays Tybalt, the property man steps on to the stage, gathers up Tybalt's sword, cap and cloak and things and walks off with them. He would enter Macbeth's banquet hall while that weak kneed monarch was exorcising Banquo's ghost, gather up the goblets and plates in one arm and Macbeth's chair with the other and carry them away. He would pluck the roses from Elaine's breast; he would take the dagger from Juliet's dead hand; he would interrupt Hamlet's soliloquy in the churchyard with a request for Yorick's skull, and he would interpose in the murder of Desdemona to remove the pillows from her bed.—Saqui Smith in Leslie's Weekly.

London's Great Clock.

Whatever complaints may be made against the tone of Big Ben, the famous London clock—and musicians say it is a terribly bad "E," at any rate—every one will acknowledge that the clock in the house of commons tower is a wonderful timekeeper, not varying a second in time all the year through. The mechanism for setting in motion the massive hammer which brings out the tone of Big Ben's 16 ton bell is very interesting. The striking machinery is driven by weights of about a ton and a half, which hang on a shaft 174 feet deep, and it is so arranged that after the chimes are over the hammer falls on the big bell within one second of Greenwich mean time.

Queer Cards of Shrewd Lawyers.

Not all men of the legal profession are content with the severe inscription on their cards to which etiquette and custom usually confine them. An Ohio lawyer who makes a specialty of collections calls attention to this fact by a novel device printed on his cards and letter heads. On a great red splotch intended to represent a drop of blood are the words, "Claims collected in cold blood," the capital "C" for the three first letters of those words being of sufficient size to encircle the other words.

In Maryville, Mo., a lawyer presents his portrait on his card, with the suggestive motto: "He that is not with you is against you. See me early."

A Scotch Scheme.

The following appears in a Glasgow paper. It would be interesting to know whether it has led to business. If so, the supply of grand pianos in Scotland must be considerably in excess of the demand.

"Lady having large drawin rooms would gladly store grand piano in return for use; references given."—London Truth.

The fir tree is the commonest of all trees, being found in every part of the world.

BILLS OVER A CENTURY OLD

They Show Tea to Have Been a Cambridge Student's Favorite Drink.

There is a bill for groceries, etc., furnished for an undergraduate at Cambridge in the year 1788. The bill contains one or two items of furniture. Apparently the undergraduate took over rooms already furnished at a valuation, and certain articles had to be bought new, such as a hearth brush, a pail, a mop and a "Holland gotch." One knows not what this means, but it cost 2 shillings 9 pence (43 cents).

The undergraduate would seem at first sight to have consumed tea in a most reckless manner. On Oct. 24 he is charged 2 shillings for Hyson and 1 shilling 6 pence for Congo. On Nov. 1 he is charged 2 shillings for tea and on the same day, which looks odd, 6 shillings 6 pence for tea. On the 9th of the month he buys a new teapot, the old one, one supposes, worn out with hard service. However, this tea lasts him till the end of the term, so that his tea costs him for the two months no more than 11 shillings, or $2.75, and as the price of tea at this time varied from 6 shillings to about 25 shillings we may conclude that he got through no more than a pound during the term.

In other words, this young man took for breakfast a slight repast of weak tea and bread and butter. Dinner was then served at 12, so that breakfast was only what the Indians call a "chota hazri." On sugar he spent 4 shillings, which means six pounds at 8 pence a pound. On candles he spent 24 shillings 8½ pence, or about 3 shillings a week. He burned wax candles, mold candles and "wax twist." Salt was a shilling a packet. On two occasions he bought sand. Was, then, the floor of his room sanded? It would seem so.

Successive Waves.

The following waif is going the rounds of the state press: We are told of a young lady in a neighboring town who waved her hand at a stranger, and in three days they were married. Two days later the young lady waved a flatiron at her husband, and the next evening he came home waving a divorce.—Nashville Banner.

He Set at Eight.

He was only a little boy, and this was his first diary. It had been given him as a birthday present and was bound in a red cover, with a highly colored picture adorning the front.

He meant to begin well and early, so he carefully wrote, "Got up at 7." Then, according to instructions, he took it to his governess for approval.

That highly proper lady frowned. "Got up!" she said; "got up! You careless boy! Does the sun get up? No, it rises."

Very neatly she scratched out the barbarous words and made him write, "Rose at 7." This settled Master Tom; no more mistakes of this kind for him again!

So on retiring for the night he wrote, with the air of a man who knew his business well, "Set at 8."

Art Treasures In Japan.

The Japanese idea in regard to art treasures is quite different from the American idea, as seen in the home. The American method is to keep all the good pictures or beautiful bronzes or unique vases in evidence all the time. The Japanese way is to store the artistic belongings, bringing different ones to light for a time, and thereby avoiding the too abundant appearance that is often the rule here.—New York Sun.

HUMAN BRAIN CELLS.

THEY REFUSE TO WORK UNDER TOO HIGH A PRESSURE.

Put on Too Much Steam and These Minute Organisms Go on Strike. Why Men Go Crazy or Become Absentminded.

Keeping pace with scientific thought and progress certain problems which in the past have been shelved for want of light being thrown upon them have been taken up again one by one to undergo further examination by the aid of improved science.

The newest revelation in this direction tends to the science of the mind and includes the following problems:

Why does a man act queerly when he is intoxicated?

Why is a man absentminded on occasions?

Why does a man sometimes become violently insane, often a dangerous, raving lunatic?

Such questions as these have puzzled our immediate fathers, who have hardly ever satisfactorily explained them away or indeed thrown much reliable light upon them. The human brain is composed of cells, and each cell is a simple bit of nerve substance, from one end of which, like an octopus, spring a number of tentacles, while from another part arises an arm different from them and of great length. The long arm is intended for transmitting impressions from one portion of the brain system to another, it being made to touch the tentacles or short arms of the next one to it, the latter in its turn effecting contact with a third cell, and so on.

Thus a message is conveyed and the mind gets its news. The entire brain is made up of these cells, whose number is legion and whose full strength is grouped in systems, these systems in turn being arranged in communities, the communities in clusters and finally the clusters in constellations, by which divisions they are known to physiologists.

So long as the mind is in a healthy condition each little cell, or brain octopus, attends to its business faithfully and gives no trouble, but as man generally is an animal who usually refuses to live the life spanned out by nature and adopts instead the life laid down by the modern artificial process of living, instituted forsooth by civilization, mental disturbances frequently arise through the brain becoming abused in various ways, from overwork and alcohol principally.

Your octopuslike brain cell is a living little thing, and it can endure a great deal of abuse from you, but if you should go a little too far it rebels and refuses to work any longer by breaking contact with its companion cells, which it can do by withdrawing its long arm and getting itself out of circuit. But this rebellion is conducted by whole groups of cells acting together in full harmony.

Now, the object of this "strike" is simply to avoid overwork, for each tiny cell has stored within its minute space only a certain amount of energy, but if you put on the high pressure this is easily consumed by the operation of the brain, and the organism breaks down from exhaustion. Now, take the first of the problems just stated. When a person takes too much to drink, the cells in those patches of the brain that are responsible for the conduct of muscular movement become affected and the man staggers.

When the dose is very large, the cells, which, although stupefied, have tried to keep their master on his legs, now cease working, and the man sleeps like one dead. Finally, if more than enough of alcoholic drink be taken, the effect on the cells is to paralyze them, and the unfortunate man dies.

There is some relation between extraordinary activity of the mind and insanity. Geniuses are apt to exhibit symptoms of mental alienation, and, singular to relate, their children are usually inferior to those of average men.

For instance, not to go out of England for example, Cromwell was a hypochondriac and had visions, Dean Swift inherited insanity and was himself not a little mad, Shelley was called by his friends "Mad Shelley," Charles Lamb went crazy, Johnson was another hypochondriac, Coleridge was a morbid maniac, Milton was of a morbid turn of mind, nearly approaching insanity (modern ideas of hades are largely formed on the description evolved by his diseased imagination), and Byron said he was visited by ghosts.

This mental alienation occurring in the foregoing cases shows that certain specific groups of brain cells have come under the baneful influence of the guiding spirit called talent or genius, which has used up all the energy stored in each cell and each group of cells, to the detriment of the whole, with the result that their ceasing work has brought about various types of insanity as depicted or, to phrase it more softly, induced disturbance of the mental equilibrium.

The remaining problem is absentmindedness. This is produced by a temporary disjunction of certain groups of cells. A man becomes so absorbed in his study of some particular subject and lends his whole mind to thought that the hard thinking disorganizes the groups of cells employed in the process of reflection, their tentacles being turned all one way, to the detriment of mental action generally, and so the man with the tentacles of his brain cells turned in the one direction passes along the streets lost to all observation or mental inception and does all manner of queer things because he is not conscious of what he is doing.—Pearson's Magazine.

IS MARS PEOPLED?

Such a Claim Advanced by a German Scientist.

"Is Mars inhabited?" has been asked very often during recent years and has engaged the serious attention of many astronomers and especially of M. Camille Flammarion, a noted French scientist and author.

Some new light is now thrown on this subject by Professor Ernst Haeckel, an eminent German philosopher, in a book entitled "World Problems. After pointing out that men have been studying the heavens for more than 4,500 years and have only been studying themselves for the last half century he says we may safely assume that the many fixed stars whose light requires thousands of years to reach us are suns and are surrounded by planets and worlds similar to those we know. We may also assume, he holds, that thousands of these planets have arrived at the same stage of development as our world, and it naturally follows that on them the same conditions of life prevail as on this earth, and there is no valid reason why human beings should not live there as they do here.

Professor Haeckel takes care to explain that there are doubtless many planets the temperature of which is such that life, as we understand the term, cannot be sustained on them. He thinks it very probable that there are types of animals and plants on some planets which are not to be found on the earth. According to him it is very likely that the biogenetic process exists on Mars, Venus and possibly some other planets of our system, as well as on planets of other solar systems, but plants on these planets have reached a higher stage of development than has been reached by animals and plants of this earth.

If we assume that Mars is inhabited—and Professor Haeckel seems pretty well satisfied that it is—we must assume, he holds, that the men and women whose home is on the planet are not such as we, but of a far higher type. They may resemble us exteriorly, but they are free from our physical defects and excel us in strength and gracefulness. It is in the intellectual sphere, however, that their superiority is most clearly shown. If there are human beings on these planets, says Prof. Haeckel, it is extremely probable that they far surpass ordinary men and women in intelligence.

COLD STEEL IN WARFARE.

Bayonets Aagin in the Favor of Military Experts.

Their Efficiency Has Been Signally Demonstrated in Africa.

There are signs in the news from the seat of war in South Africa that "the British bayonet" is not yet by any means past its deadly usefulness. At Mafeking, the despatches say, one night attack upon the besiegers' trenches, delivered a dose of "cold steel" when darkness prevented the Boer riflemen from shooting with good effect, was of the greatest service in preventing a close advance of the parallels. There is a story, too, which is probably mythical in itself, but equally probably based on general facts, that in an attack on trenches somewhere near the scene of Buller's recent defeat a cry of "Fix bayonets and give them the cold steel!" had more effect upon the defending party than many rounds of Lee-Metford ammunition would have had. If the Boers, brave enough, as everybody admits, in what Kentuckians call a "shooting scrape," fight shy of the bayonet it is all the less to be wondered at, as they themselves appear to be unprovided with any such weapon and are certainly not, as the British infantryman is, trained to its use.

Since the Crimean war the opinion that the bayonet has had its day has gained ground. Considering the enormous increase in the range and power of rifles since that time it is rather wonderful that anyone should think otherwise. But history has been far from unanimous on this point—in fact, it has been self-contradictory, just as it has been in the matter of the saber for the cavalryman.

Hand-to-Hand Combats.

There must have been little or nothing for instance, in the scene at the Turkish trenches before Plevna to remind the war correspondents who watched and recorded it that this was not a battle of the old heroic man-to-man period. These correspondents told how, as the victorious Russian infantry approached the works, firing and receiving the Turkish fire, a long line of red-capped, loose-trousered demons sprang up from within the breastworks, and, whirling their rifles aloft, with a yell of "Allah il' Allah!" came down on the Muscovites at the old fashioned "charge."

It was the officers who made the surrender of Plevna a decent modern affair; the Turkish rank and file could, and would without doubt, have gone on at their work of point and butt until none were left to surrender to the surviving victorious Russians but the staff.

So much for the Turk. But about two years later history had an entirely different tale to tell. The tale of Majuba Hill goes that a battalion of British infantry, wearing the uniform of the same regiment which included the "Minden yell" among its traditions, was beaten off by a band of Dutch farmers and utterly destroyed, because the crack British regiment trusted to their bayonet and the farmer [illegible] from behind rocks.

Experiments in Past Times.

And yet if the efficacy of the bayonet have been on trial before a jury of experts it would certainly have been considered to have had every advantage in being put into the hands of the British soldiers. The history of infantry fighting came to something like this—First, the Macedonian phalanx, with short, stout spears; then an interval, say, of twelve centuries, during most of which the mounted man had things all his own way; then the 200 years beginning about [illegible], when the Spanish "infanteria" was considered irresistible by reason of its pikes, which were practically the Roman "pila;" then the introduction of the matchlock, and with it a threat of an end to all "close quarters," as early as the beginning of the sixteenth century.

But some French or Spanish soldier whose name has been lost to fame hit upon the brilliant idea that these newfangled machines might be converted into honest pikes occasionally by simply sticking the haft of a dagger into the muzzle of the matchlock. This scheme seemed to work well for half a century, until it was generally felt that if the firing of a matchlock was to become other than a long and deliberate ceremonial, as seemed to be probable with the improvements then coming from Nuremberg, the corking and uncorking of the barrels would have to be obviated in some way or other.

Etymology of the Name.

In [illegible] General Mackay introduced among his infantry the ring bayonet. The name of the weapon has been connected with Bayonne, the French seaport. As a matter of fact, "bayona" and "bayoneta" are Spanish words and mean neither more nor less than "sticker" and "little sticker." But the etymology of the word did not trouble the British and Irish infantry whom it helped to raise to the topmost place among the troops of Europe in the period from [illegible]—the date when Waubun introduced the socketed bayonet in the armies of the great monarchs—to the middle of the present century. The transition from ring to socket was a perfectly natural one. The two rings in the earlier weapon were merged into a sort of tube fitting on the end of the musket barrel. The blade was connected with this tube by a stout neck, so as to leave it clear of the bullet's path when the gun was discharged. In order to give the blade greater strength it was made triangular in section. Finally this triangular blade was hollowed out to make it as light as possible and so reduce, to a minimum its advantage as to weight at the end of the piece in firing.

Thus was evolved the form of the bayonet which is to this day the conventional idea of it entertained by uninformed civilian minds. It was this form that was in use in the peninsular war, where more than at any other time or in any other part of the world the bayonet won its fame. "British bayonets" became in those days a synonym for the military power of the British empire, though it would have been only fair to say "Hiberno-British bayonets," considering the share, out of all proportion to little Ireland, which the Irish soldier had in making Wellington's bayonet charges terrible.

An Irish tradition goes that "thanks to the bayonet, we may sing 'Garryowen'." Whatever degree of truth there may be in the story of the Peninsular war with which this saying is connected, it has often been remarked that the superiority of British infantry in the bayonet charge could never have been without the admixture of at least an equal part of Celtic blood to give "elan" to the steady, stolid fighting quality of the Anglo-Saxon Teuton.

In the earlier part of this century the authorities of the United States army were fully alive to the importance of skill with the bayonet. General George B. McClellan wrote the manual of bayonet exercise, which was the authorized textbook for the army at the beginning of the civil war. It is interesting now to the lay reader chiefly on account of the elaborately minute instruction on position. In those days much stress was laid upon the effectiveness as a military spectacle of a large body of men going through the bayonet exercise. McClellan's book is now obsolete, and bayonet drill in the United States army has taken the form of an athletic exercise, like boxing, carried on with bayonets made safe by pads attached to the points. In the British army, to judge by a complaint of a recent writer in "The United Service Review," the idea of bayonet exercise as an affair of parade ground display has prevailed until recently, though many commanding officers have worked hard, and, it seems, with some success to substitute for the formal parade drills of companies and battalions man to man contests with blunted weapons, small prizes being given to the victors.

General McClellan, it must be said, contemplated the same practice. In his "Manual" there are plates, curious enough to look at after the lapse of half a century, showing infantrymen of that period wearing the padded "plastron" to protect the body and going through what looks to the eyes of this generation like very stagey movements, with specially made whalebone bladed bayonets. The whalebone blades are made detachable from the hilt of the bayonet, so that a blade broken by a "palpable hit" can be replaced.

In the article in "The United Service Review" already mentioned the writer evidently takes the view that the day of the bayonet is by no means past. The "trowel bayonet" designed by [illegible] in the '70s, with the idea of furnishing the infantry soldier with a convenient and ever ready intrenching tool, was never a success in a practical sense. The idea of it, however, serves to show how little importance was attached to the bayonet as a weapon twenty-five years ago. But since that time the bayonet has been gradually improved up to the present form of a broad bladed knife, attached by a spring below the barrel of the rifle, to which it adds less than one pound in weight and about twelve inches in length.

The story of love is as old as the world, and as all embracing as the universe. It furnishes the sentiment for all romances—all novels—all plays.

The novelist considers it wholly from the sentimental, intellectual side, but there is another aspect even more important—the physical side. Sentimental love between men and women leads to close physical association—to marriage—to the rearing of children. And so health must be considered. A weak, sickly, head-achey, back-achey woman cannot be a good, helpful wife. She cannot bear healthy, happy children. She cannot give her children the proper care and training.

A sick woman has no right to marry. A sick woman has no right to attempt motherhood.

But no woman need be sick unless afflicted with cancer. There is a sure way for her to regain her health. She need not go to a local doctor and submit to the disagreeable questionings, "examinations" and "local treatments" so invariably insisted upon, and so justly abhorrent to every modest woman.

Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., has cured more cases of female weakness than any hundred local practitioners. He has proved that diseases distinctly feminine can be cured right in the privacy of home.

Write to him stating your symptoms and an account of your trouble and he will give your case careful, confidential consideration and prescribe for you free of charge.

Mrs. O. N. Fisher, of 2861 Lexington Avenue, New York City, writes: "I had been a sufferer from nervousness with all its symptoms and complications. In the spring of 1897 I began to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Now I am not cross and irritable. I have a good color in my face and have gained ten pounds."

Obituary.

We regret to chronicle the death of Miss Lottie O'Brien, daughter of Mr. Dennis O'Brien, Douro, which sad event occurred at the family residence on Wednesday last. The deceased young lady was only 19 years of age, and was beloved by all who knew her. She had been ailing for some time, and a fatal termination was looked for. Six months ago Mr. O'Brien lost another daughter, and much sympathy is felt for him and the sorrowing family. The funeral will take place this morning.

COUNTY COUNCIL SESSIONS.

The Whole Council May Go to Toronto re Chemong Lake Bridge.

The County Council assembled in session Wednesday afternoon, the Warden in the chair. A deputation from the Children's Aid Society was present to make application for the usual grant. It was composed of Ven. Archdeacon Casey, Rev. H. Symonds, Rev. S. J. Shorey, Rev. D. O. Crossley, Mr. J. J. McBain, Mr. J. H. Burnham, Mr. R. M. Dennistoun and Mr. F. W. Miller.

The Children's Aid.

On motion the deputation was heard. Mr. J. H. Burnham spoke first, stating that the number of purely county cases dealt with by the county numbered 18. The amount expended for these boys and girls during the year amounted to $211 He gave detailed figures though these took no account of the cost of the maintainence of the Shelter. He told of the cases from the county, in all of which good results had followed. Mr. J. J. McBain, president of the Children's Aid Society, pointed out that the work was being done for the general benefit of humanity. He asked for the hearty support the council. Ven. Archdeacon Casey, Rev. Do O. Crossley, Rev. H. Symonds, Rev. S. J. Shorey and Mr. R. M. Dennistoun all spoke of the good work that is being done. It was pointed out that there is no cause with which the people feel more sympathy than with that of orphaned and destitute children. The work is of the most deserving character.

On motion of Mr. Pearse, seconded by Mr. Buck, the matter was referred to the Finance committee. Both gentlemen expressed sympathy with the work and Mr. Fitzgerald stated that he would favor a larger grant than was given last year.

A Deputation.

The sending of a deputation up to Toronto to solicit the Government to make a grant towards the Chemong Lake bridge was discussed, the difficulty being that so many members of the Government being out of the city electioneering, it was impossible to get an interview with them. The matter was left to a joint meeting with the Town Council in the evening, the time of the going of the deputation being left uncertain. It was moved by Mr. Hawthorne that the whole Council go as a deputation if it can meet the Government this week, if not the Warden have power to appoint a deputation. This motion was carried.

The Council adjourned.

A Musical Treat.

The Callahan's Symphony Orchestra gave two concerts yesterday in Bradourn's Opera House. The music was superb, delighting those who were fortunate enough to be present.

Important Social Function.

Toronto Globe—Mrs. George W. Ross gave a very enjoyable lunch in the Parliament buildings on Monday in honor of Mrs. Stratton, wife of the new Provincial Secretary. Mrs. Ross received her guests, about forty in number, in the drawing room, where lunch was served. The long table was beautifully decorated with pink and white. Soft pink silk edged with delicate ferns was arranged down the middle of the table, and in the centre stood a tall vase of white hyacinths, below which were pink roses, beyond which down towards each end were alternate bowls of pink roses and white hyacinths. Mrs. Ross wore a grey silk gown, with a black hat, trimmed with sequins and black plumes. Among the guests were Mrs. Gibson, of Hamilton; Lady Thompson, Mrs. Edwin Thomas, Mrs. Allan Aylesworth, Mrs. Plunkett McGann, Mrs. Lister, Mrs. John L. Davidson, Mrs. John Hoskin, Mrs. Mulock, Mrs. Armstrong Black, Mrs. W. D. Matthews, Mrs. Cattanach, Mrs. Temple, Mrs. W. D. Riddell, Mrs. Janes, Mrs. George A. Cox, Mrs. J. K. Kerr, Mrs. Angus Kertland, Mrs. Joseph McDougall, Mrs. Bryon Walker, Mrs. Hartley Dewart, Mrs. H. S. Strathy and some ladies from Hamilton.

Wedding Bells.

On Wednesday morning at St. Peter's cathedral Miss Nellie Cronan and Mr. W. J. Caddigan were united in marriage. Ven. Archdeacon Casey officiating. The bride was assisted by her sister, Miss Nora Cronin, while Mr. T. Hanrahan acted in a similar capacity for the groom. After the ceremony the wedding party drove to the residence of Mrs. Eano, Elm street, where a sumptuous wedding breakfast was partaken of. Mr. and Mrs. Caddigan took the 4.45 p.m. train for Hamilton, where they will reside hereafter. Many presents were received, showing the high esteem in which the bride is held.

Young Girl Arrested.

Acting on the strength of letters from Toronto and under authority of the Children's Aid Society Act Mr. Miller of the Children's Aid, and P.C. Stewart visited the house of Mrs McDonald, who was convicted some time ago of keeping a house of ill-fame, but which conviction was quashed on appeal, and took therefrom a girl named Alice Bensigner, who it was claimed had been brought down from Toronto for immoral purposes. The girl claims to be sixteen years old but is said to be below that age. Yesterday morning the Chief received notice from the Toronto Chief of Police that there was a warrant in that city for her arrest. He sent back word that the girl was in custody and an officer arrived in town last night to take her back.

Business in the grain market has about reached rock bottom for dullness. There is signs of improvement.

It has been an easy winter for snow shovels and those who operated them, and the sidewalks have been kept fairly clear since the first snowfall.

Word comes from the lumber district that operations have been carried on under full swing, as the depth of snow has just "filled the bill" for the easy movement of logs.

The Times congratulates Mr. J. R. McNeillie of Lindsay, on his appointment to the position of Clerk and Treasurer of Victoria County. Mr. McNeillie will make an efficient officer.

The Committee on Appointments and Supervision of Police met last night.

espatch to the Standard from dysmith dated Dec. 27 and deribing the Christmas celebrations ys:—"Only a few were fortunate ough to get turkeys or geese, a ajority had to be content with the rd beef of wasted underfed oxen, the coarse goat flesh which does ty for mutton. On Saturday there as a provision auction. Potatoes ere brought at the rate of a shillg each, eggs averaged ten pence ch, carrots seven pence each, ducks alf a guinea, cigarrets forty-two ence per three packages and whisy from 5 to £7 a bottle. Everyody, however, was able to indulge Christmas pudding as the commissiart kindly issued the necessary gredients for the occasion."

London, Jan. 27

Times publishes the following from rere Camp, dated Wednesday morn g and evidently written before the apture of Spion Kop was known. After describing the position of the oers actively entrenching and bring g fresh guns forward, the corres ondent says:

eir front extends ten miles and we ill have to try to break in the iddle. Every prisoner says the oers will never let us reach Ladymith. This is their last chance of reventing us; for behind this hill ies open country without a single ortifiable position. Therefore they will strain every nerve to throw us ack here."

London, Jan. 27, 4 a.m.

ee days of fighting have left the main Boer position intact and Gen. Buller's army 706 men weaker according to the official casuality list which seemingly do not include the Spion Kop losses, as those last forwarded do not mention Gen. Woodgates wounding. England is depressed by a sense of failure. Although not a word in critism of the generals and soldiers is uttered. Not much effort is made to place a happy construction upon General Buller's bare 16 words telling of the retirement from Spion Kop, and there is an uneasy impression about were bought at the rate of a shilling regarding the news yet to come.

THE FIRST NEWS.

New York, Jan. 26.—A London cable says—Buller has abandoned Spion Kop.

London, Jan. 26, 11.10 a.m.—The War Office has just posted the following despatch from General Buller, dated at Spearman's Camp, Thursday last—

"Gen. Warren's garrison, I am sorry to say, I find this morning had, in the night, abandoned Spion Kop."

IN A TRAP.

New York, Jan. 26.—A somewhat further accoun tof the Spion Kop affair comes to the Journal from London. It says—

Harassed for hours by a heavy fire from the Boer guns, Warren was forced to evacuate Spion Kop, on Wednesday night, after holding it for a day under a heavy shell fire so incessant and accurate that the British troops were mowed down by hundreds. Warren's fight cost thousands in dead and wounded on both sides, and no attempt has been made as yet by Buller to send a list of Warren's casualties.

Boers' Cunning Plot.

The kopje carried by Warren in his night attack proved to be only a small part of the Boer defence, and the halfhearted fight put up by the Bers to hold it indicates a plot to lure Warren into a trap, where his troops could be cut to pieces without risk to the Boers. No sooner had Warren settled down in the captured trenches than the Boers unmasked the guns they had so sedulously hidden through all the five days of fierce preliminary fighting. From a high plateau dominating the captured trenches a tornado of shell and shrapnel broke loose. The Boer gunners had the range to an inch. All the time their guns had been silent, range-finders had been perfecting their work, and when the moment came to tea roff the mask, the effect of the concentrated fire was overwhelming.

Helpless in a Trap.

Warren was absolutely helpless, in a trap. Nog uns had been or could be dragged up the steep hill that led to the trenches. Retreat was out of the question, while the hail of steel swept across the hill top. The hillside would have been red with blood, had Warren attempted to withdraw in daylight.

Hour after hour, the men lay in the trenches, hugging close to every bit of cover available. Bursting shells swelled the number of dead and wounded every hour.

The gloom that pervades London is tenfold greater than that caused by any other shock of the war. High hopes had been raised by Buller's first report, though sober second thought showed there was still grave cause for apprehension. Great crowds swarm in the street. Traffic about the War Office, and wherever bulletins are displayed, is wholly blocked. Business is at a standstill.

Hundreds of women with tears streaming down their cheeks, are in the vast throngs. Many men, too, are in tears.

Buller's message was promptly telegraphed to the Queen. The position of Ladysmith is now considered hopeless. Practically all of Buller's army was engaged.

Six hundred were wounded in the first two days. No report of the killed has been sent, and no estimate of the wounded been given since Saturday night, but the fightin gof Tuesday and Wednesday was far more desperate than in any of the preceding battles.

DOES WAR OFFICE WITHOLD NEWS?

London, Jan. 26, 11.30 a.m.—Warren's retreat had a bad effect on the Stock Exchange. Consols fell one-half and South Africans were weak.

It is generally believed the War Office has further advices, but that they will be withheld for the present. The time of Buller's despatch indicates that it was received hours before it was posted, and was held, perhaps, with the hope that something more satisfactory might come from Buller to ameliorate the sting of Warren's retrograde movement.

The friends and relatives of the officers and men serving under Warren are anxiously clamouring for a list of losses, but the officials of the War Office say none have yet been received.

INSPECTED BY PRINCE OF WALES.

London, Jan. 26.—At the Life Guards' Barracks, Regent Park, this morning, the Prince of Wales inspected the first lot of Yeomanry, who start for South Africa to-morrow. A number of well known people were present, including Lady Essex, Lord Rothschild, and Lord and Lady Lonsdale.

The Prince of Wales, who wore the undress uniform of a Staff-General, walked along the entire line with Lord Chesham, making the most minute inspection of every man, often taking a rifle in his hands and examining all parts of the equipment.

The men looked very business-like in khaki and putties and cowboy hats turned up at the side, on which was a little bronze emblem representing the Prince of Wales' features. At the conclusion of the inspection the Prince of Wales made a speech, in which he said—

"I am proud of the privilege of inspectin gyou here to-day beofre you start for active service. I also feel it is a very high compliment that I have been asked to be your Honorary Colonel. You may be sure I shall take the deepest interest in your welfare and watch all your proceedings. Throughout you will, like all the men who have volunteered for active service, do your duty to your Sovereign and your country.

"I am sure that although you leave your homes and your country, you all feel that a great duty devolves upon you to maintain the honor of the British flag, and that you will assist the regular forces of Her Majesty and do credit to your corps. I wish you now God-speed and a safe return.

NOT IN NATURE OF A REVERSE.

London, Jan. 26.—The Westminster Gazette this afternoon points out that it is not unpatriotic for "decline to gloss over facts." As a matter of fact, Great Britain assumed that the point gained was more conclusive than it really was, hence the revulsion of feeling caused by the report of General Buller's announcement of the abandonment of Spion Kop. Considering that the Boers who held the position fled, that the British casualties in retaining it during subsequent attacks were heavy, and that the strategical value of the point has still to be demonstrated, until further particulars arrive it is impossible to estimate to what extent the public disappointment is justified. It is impossible at present to say whether the British the British suffered a reverse or whether the movement was dictated by strategic reasons. Obviously the position was useless, unless guns could be planted on it, and discovering this was impossible General Warren may had decided it was unsafe to attempt to hold the position any longer, or perhaps he is seeking a more profitable ascent elsewhere.

Too Hot to Hold.

The abandonment of Spion Kop, however, appears to have been so unexpected at the War Office that Gen. Buller's despatch caused something in the nature of consternation. The lobbies were soon crowded, and there was evidence on all sides that the news was keenly felt.

The only official comment was: "Apparently General Warren found the position too hot to hold."

Nowhere, however, in spite of the depression is there the least sign of abatement in the determination to carry the war to a successful issue.

BOER LOSSES VERY GREAT.

London, Jan. 26.—Special despatches from Durban say the Boer losses on the Upper Tugela during the fighting Sunday last were very great. They add that General Warren's men captured one hundred and sixty prisoners, and that 130 Boers were found dead in one trench.

DENMARK'S FRIENDSHIP FOR BRITAIN.

The People of the Little Kingdom Have Shown it in a Very Tangible Way.

Ottawa, Jan. 26.—The Journal publishes a letter from the Danish counsel as follows—

It was stated in the Canadian press some time ago that the people of Denmark had shown their sympathy with Great Britain in her present struggle with the Boers by contributing 50,000 tins of butter to the British soldiers. This being done it was further decided to ask, that the contribution be distributed to the army through the Princess of Wales. In this connection it will no doubt interest the readers of the Journal to see the text of a telegram recently sent to the contributors by Her Royal Highness. It reads as follows—

"I thank you, gentlemen, from my heart for the kind and practical way in which you have indicated your sympathy with our brave British soldiers by sending them a magnificent contribution of butter. You have expressed the wish, that I should distribute your generous gift among the sick and wounded in South Africa, and also in my own hospitalship. This I will do with great pleasure, all the more so as I can add, that it is a gift from my beloved native land."

"Alexandra."

As to the sentiments of the Danes in Canada on the present war issue, they are loyal to the British cause throughout, for what has made our nation welcome in this country, is the fact that we—once settled—become first and foremost Canadians, at the same time that we always remember with kindness our motherland.

CHINA IN HANDS OF REACTIONARIES.

The New Emperor's Father is a Leader of Societies Friendly to Assassins.

London, Jan. 26.—A special despatch from Shanghai, says—The father of the new Emperor is the head of the great secret societies known as "Great Sword" and the "Boxers," extending over the province of Chi-Li, Shang Tung and Honan, which were responsible for the murder of Mr. Brooks, the missionary.

Various edicts have been issued, with a view of assuaging public anxiety, and the ominour rumors respecting the fate of the ex-Emperor are spreading widely. It is alleged that his dethronement was decided upon at a council convened by the Empress-Dowager on Tuesday. The Manchu clan favors the change, but the Chinese proper oppose it, and predict a tremendous upheaval.

It is believed that the Russian and French Legations were notified of the impending change, and that they will support the new regime. It is also reported that a French naval force has already reached Pekin.

The British and United States Legations, who have been favorable to Kwang-Su, were kept in ignorance of the new departure; but it is asserted that Li Hung Chang was sent as Viceroy to Kwang-Tung, to support the Dowager's policy, and to repress any hostilities on the part of the Cantonese.

COL. OTTER REPORTS RE CONTINGENT.

His First Official Statement Sent to the Militia Department at Ottawa.

Ottawa, Jan. 26.—Lieut.-Col. Otter sends La report to the Militia Department which covers the doings of the first cotingent from December 4 to December 17. There is very little in the report that has not been already covered by cable and correspondents from the front.

Reference is made to the death of Chappell, one of the St. John and Charlottetown detachment, who died after two days illness. The report also refers to one of the New Brunswick company being court-martialled for having in his possession stolen property, knowing it to stolen. He got thirty days. The stolen property consisted of a revolver.

Col. Otter says that the members of the contingent had been working very hard for the period which his report covers. They were frequently on duty at 3 o'clock in the morning. In one instance they had all their camps taken down and everything on the train ready to start at 4 a. m.

Notwithstanding the hard work the men are in excellent spirits and doing well.

GEN. FRENCH IS FAST CLOSING IN ON BOERS

Every Day He Tightens the Net, Greatly to the Alarm and Uneasiness of the Enemy.

THE ARMIES OF FRENCH AND GATACRE IN TOUCH

Fortifications at Ladysmith Have Been Greatly Stnengthened Since Jan. 6th, and That Place is Now Practically Impregnable to Attack.

London, Friday, Jan. 26.—A despatch to the Standard from Rensberg, dated Jan. 23, says:

"General French, with the utmost deliberation and the greatest caution is drawing his lines more closely around the Boer position. Every day he tightens the net, greatly to the alarm and uneasiness of the enemy.

"The Boers have made several attack on our outposts.

"The tactics of these engagements are a repetition of those employed at Majuba Hill, but everwhere they have been pluckily replused.

"The Boers have been out-generalled in this region.

"Individuals frequently desert to our lines.

"The latest arrivals say that the Boer strength is now 17,000. Three weeks ago they were reinforced by 1,000 men from Ladysmith and Magersfontein.

"The centre of their position appears to be at Colesberg junction. Their lines of communication are strongly protected to Norvals pont, while they still command the road to Colesberg and the wagon road.

"General French's position, as viewed from Coles kop, is a great semi-circle.

"The Boer kopjes are lower than ours and are commanded by our guns.

"Our lyddite shells have apparently silenced the Boer artillery for good and all.

"General French could undoubtedly take Colesberg, which is two miles away, at any time he pleased, but he has refrained hitherto from bombarding the town because of the non-combatants, including women and children."

FRENCH AND GATACRE.

London, Jan. 26.—Despatch to the Times from Sterkstroom states that a patrol of Brabant's horse returned to camp Wednesday from Steinsburg, where connection was effected with Gen. French's patrol. This is taken to indicate that French's recent easterly movement was for the purpose of making the above mentioned connection. Sterkstroom is Gatacre's headquarters.

GENERAL BARTON IN ACTION.

London, Jan. 26.—A casualty list reported yesterday from Chievely shows that Major-General Barton's brigade was either reconnoitering in force or engaged with a detached force of the enemy on Tuesday. There are no indications that the British losses, apart from Spion Kop, have been serious since Sunday, although the despatches of correspondents describe the severity of the artillery fire on both sides.

LADYSMITH IS IMPREGNABLE.

Ladysmith, Sunday, Jan. 21, by runner via Frere Camp, Wednesday, Jan. 24.—The garrison is watching General Buller's guns shelling the Boers. Their fire can be seen at this distance and appears to be very effective. The movements of the Boers show that they are evidently determined to stubbornly oppose the advance of the relief column. They show no signs of removing their guns and have mounted new ones and are continually strengthing their fortifications. Our fortifications have been greatly strengthened since Jan. 6th, and Ladysmith is now practically impregnable.

Owing to the dry weather the fever has diminished and the number of convalescents returning from Intombi camp exceeds that of the patients being sent there. The supplies are spinning out splendidly, all the troops having sufficient wholesome food.

The heat is terrific, the thermometer registering 107 degrees in the shade.

ENGLAND'S GREAT AWAKENING.

London, Friday, Jan. 26.—Right Hon William St. John Brodrick, Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, speaking last evening at Newark, said:

"The Government have neither controlled the generals in their operations nor stinted them in the forces they have demanded. We have implicity followed the guidance of the military advice."

Later in the speech he remarked:

"It will be the duty of the Government and Parliament to see that our military organization is made equal to the needs of the empire. We have had a great awakening on this subject.

GENERAL WARREN'S LOSSES.

London, Jan. 26.—General Buller reports that the British casualties Jan. 24 are:

Killed—Officers, 6; Non-commissioned officers and men, 16.

Wounded—Officers, 12; Non-commissioned officers and men, 142.

Missing—31 men.

General Buller's despatch is dated Spearsman's Camp, Jan. 26, at 10.25 a.m., so there has been no delay in the communications passing between Gen. Buller and the War Office.

The killed include Col. Buchanan Riddell, of the King's Royal Rifles. He served in the Niger war of 1881.

It is not clear whether the casualties include those at Spion Kop, or only those resulting from the fighting prior to the Spion Kop engagement.

The Cabinet met this afternoon under the presidency of Lord Salisbury, and doubtless the Ministers fully canvassed the new situation, although primarily summoned to discuss the terms of the Queen's speech.

Under other circumstances the news from Ladysmith, showing greatly improved sanitary conditions, the plentifulness of provisions and the strengthening of the fortifications until the place is regarded as impregnable, would have inspired the nation. But these good tidings to the British are overshadowed by anxiety as to the situation on the upper Tugela

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

Baseball

It is given out now that the base ball ground in the United States and Canada is to be divided as follows:—

National League—Boston, New York, Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis.

Eastern League—Providence, Worcester, Montreal, Rochester, Hartford, Springfield, Philadelphia, and Washington.

Western League—Buffalo, Toronto, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, Kansas City, Indianopolis, and Louisville.

McGraw and Robinson are in great demand among the big clubs. Clarkson, Kelly and other $10,000 beauties of ten years ago are outclassed. Four National League clubs want them bad. This seems strange, for the above named players are leaders in the game of rowdyism, a thing which all the magnates pretend to frown upon. We suppose that under the more euphonic name of "aggressive ball-playing" it commands a big price.

Skating

Norval Baptie, of Dakota, arrived in Montreal last night to take part in the championship skating races there next week. The races will be for amatuurs only, with the exception of one matched race between the champion Nilsson and Baptie.

To-morrow Sunday, there will be held at Vienna, Austria, the world's championship meeting for figure skaters.

Hockey

To-nights game between the Colts and R.M.C. Cadets ought to be a hummer.

Collingwood was sassy to the executive, and the latter got mad and expelled them. Now, they will have to play in their own yard "mit themselups."

Stratford's fine for getting on the ice late the night they played Varisity was remitted by the executive, as it was proved that the train was late. If some of the Toronto teams had the same "cold justice" meted out to them, the O.H.A. would have quite a surplus of assets.

The Caps and Iroquos play off on Tuesday. This game if won by Iroquois will make the eastern section a tie all round; so it is to be hoped the Caps win.

Waterloo juniors have put Preston out of it for this year.

It will be just as well for the seniors to drop our of it for this season, as two or three of them are away off in form. Remember boys you can't play hockey and knock around at nights, too.

Cricket

F. H. Huish, an English professionla cricketer, was presented on Jan. 6, in London, with a souvenir of his splendid wicket-keeping performances of last season, when he caught seventy and stumped four in the twenty-one matches played by Kent—thus making a record in cricket analysis.

W. Bates, who toured Canada 1879 and 1881, died on Jan. 8, at Sefton, Eng. He was a good medium-paced bowler.

U. S. S. WILMINGTON CRUISES UP THE AMAZON.

Passing Craft were Few and Far Between—During the Day the Heat was Oppressive.

The cruise of the "Wilmington" 2,300 miles along the Amazon is the subject of a very readable article in Ainslee's for February.

"The dreary solitude and monotony of the interminable stretch of low banks and the knowledge that back of these shores lay hundreds of miles of unexplored, almost impenetrable forest swampy, stagnant, fever-breeding and pestilent, gave the journey up the great river a weird, mysterious tone.

"Passing craft were few and far between. Now and then rafts, or 'balsas,' as they are locally termed, would be discerned near the Amazon, and they are in common use. Their construction is simple enough. A number of buoyant logs are lashed together with vines, and upon this platform is erected a small bamboo house, with thatched roof. Several families equipped with provisions will embark upon one of these queer craft, and drift with the current until a desirable place for settling is reached.

"As the 'Wilmington' progressed it was noticed that the character of the vegetation changed somewhat. The forests grew more dense, and the luxuriant hues of the tropics were pronounced. During the day the heat was oppressive. There was a moist humid touch to the atmosphere and an ever present odor of decaying plants assailed the nostrils. Late in the afternoon, however, cooling rains invariably set in, rendering the night comparatively pleasant.

A YANKEE SETTLEMENT.

"About five hundred miles from Para, at the junction of the Tapajos River with the Amazon, a town was reached which proved extremely interesting to the gunboat's crew. Its name, Santarem, gave no evidence of the fact that it was originally colonized by Americans. That was in 1866, and the passing of thirty-three years has removed all traces of the Yankee settlers. It did not require this result of an attempt of Anglo-Saxons colonization to prove that the tropics form no favorable home for their race. Despite they orgeous panoramas of flaunting colors in forest and sky, the evidence's of nature's most lavish hand in flowers and fruits and mineral wealth, and a climate eloquent of perpetual rest and dolce far niente, not a solitary officer or "jackie" of the gunboat would have even harbored an inclination to exchange his home land for this.

"At Santarem were seen several typical Amazon River steamers. They were of various sizes, and looked not unlike the craft familiar to the Mississippi. The more pretentious were so constructed as to furnish two decks open at the side, the upper devoted to first-class passengers and the lower restricted to those travelling second class. As cattle, mules and freight are also carried on the latter deck, it can readily be understood that this location is not entirely desirable. There are no standing beds on board, hammocks being invariably used. These steamers ply to all parts of the great network of rivers [illegible], the Amazon system, and are utilized in transporting rubber."

THOUGHT THERE WAS WAR.

Wilmington's Salute in the Amazon Depopulated a Village.

In describing the course of the U.S.S. "Wilmington" up the Amazon River, E. I. Coleman relates the following amusing incident in Ainslee's Magazine—

"[illegible] days after her departure from Manaos the 'Wilmington' reached a point where the Solimoes ends and the Rio Maranon and Rio Javari has the distinction of serving as the boundary line between Brazil and Peru for some five hundred miles, and close to its junction with the Maranon is a small town, Tabatinga, at which is maintained a force of Brazilian soldiers, who have the monotous task of guarding the frontier.

"The 'Wilmington' fired a national salute as she slowly approached the station and sent a boat ashore to exchange the usual courtesies. On gaining the little wharf extending out from the bluff banks in front of the town the officer in charge of the gunboat's cutter noticed with some surprise that the crowd of spectators previously observed on shore had entirely disappeared.

"There were several Brazilian soldiers at the landing, and one of these ventured to approach the naval officer. The Brazilian seemed greatly disturbed, and from the actions of his companions it was evident that they felt unaccountably alarmed.

"'Senhor,' exclaimed the former hastily, 'we are without news, and we beg that you will enlighten us at once.'

"'News of what?' was the American's puzzled reply. 'I am sure I——'

"'Then there is no war?' broke in the soldier.

"'Not in this part of the world.'

"'But you fired?'

"The Wilmington's representative stifled his desire to laugh and gravely explained the gunboat's presence, and her well-meant courtesy in expending so much powder.

"'I am delighted,' finally confessed the Brazilian; 'but senhor,' he added, 'you have depopulated the village. All the natives have fled to the jungle, and I doubt if we can induce them to return until you are gone. Senhor, those guns, they echo yet!'

"A mile or two above Tabatinga several huts were noticed near the river's bank, but the most careful scrutiny with glasses could not discover signs of life. It was plainly apparent the salute of the 'Wilmington' had badly frightened every Indian within hearing."

RAN A RACE WITH DEATH.

Narrow Margin by Which a Man on a Railway Bridge Won.

A high trestle bridge more than a quarter of a mile long, supporting the single track of the Nickel Plate railroad, spans the valley of Grand river, east of Painesville, O. The bridge is little wider than the distance between the rails, and the ties are placed eight or ten inches apart, the space between being open to the river below.

A young man who crossed recently had a thrilling experience on the bridge. He had just passed the center when a fast train rounded the curve behind him. As the engine whistled he quickened his pace. With every step the train was rushing nearer, and there was not a moment to lose.

Once the young man stumbled and seemed about to fall, but quickly regained his balance and hurried on. As he reached the place for which he had started the train was close behind, and he had just time to swing himself over the side of the bridge as the locomotive thundered by. The ends of the ties were slippery with grease from dripping axle boxes, and his foot slipped wide as he left the track. His right hand, stretched blindly out before him, touched a round iron bar, bracing two parts of the bridge, and, with a grip like that of a drowning man, his fingers clasped around it. For a moment he swung in empty air. In another his left hand had found a place beside his right, and his feet touched the welcome edge of a brace below. With bleeding fingers clutching the slender iron bar that vibrated widely from side to side, moments seemed hours.

At last the train passed, and the young man was able to climb slowly to the track above. Unnerved by the trying experience, he lay for a moment stretched across the rails and, then rising to his feet, with blanched face and unsteady limbs, made his way to firm ground.—Cleveland Leader.

A Race With the Sun.

The London Daily Mail says if an aerial machine were capable of traveling at any rate up to 1,000 miles an hour a traveler in it, starting westward from London at a speed of 660 miles an hour, would arrest the progress of time. If he started at 10 a. m., it would always be to him 10 a. m. Should he find his unending day monotonous, he could reverse his direction and get a quick succession of short days and nights of some six hours' duration, but he could regulate the length by the speed of his machine. Suppose he traveled from London one night at 10 o'clock westward at a speed of 1,000 miles per hour. He would soon experience the sensation of seeing the sun rising in the west where it had set a short time before.

MYSTERIOUS OCCURRENCE.

The Remarkable Alpine Experience of a King's Messenger.

At a critical moment of international complication which occurred a good many years ago it was found necessary to send a king's messenger across one of the Alpine passes charged with dispatches the importance of which was so great that they practically involved the issue of peace or war. It was in the depth of winter, and in those days, even under the most ordinary circumstances, a journey across Europe meant no trifling undertaking. The first part of the journey was safely accomplished in postchaise as far as the foot of the pass, where a transfer to a sleigh was necessary. Here, on inquiring at the posting inn for horses and a sleigh, the messenger found to his dismay that none was to be had. "Impossible, monsieur, to go forward this night." Toward evening, however, a private carriage arrived, occupied by one traveler, with a sleigh, several spare horses and plenty of servants—evidently the equipage of a personage of distinction. The traveler halted at the posting inn and after a short parley determined to enter and have dinner, the journey across the pass to be continued at nightfall, when a clear moon might be expected.

Under these circumstances the king's messenger and the other traveler naturally dined together and entered into friendly conversation, with the result that an offer of a place in the traveler's sleigh was gladly accepted by the former. At nightfall the journey across the pass was commenced, the messenger carrying in his hand a small dispatch bag containing his dispatches. The route wound up and up the mountain side, all being soon covered deep in snow. The horses seemed fresh and high mettled and were urged at full speed by the driver. Suddenly, at a turn of the road, a man jumped out from a rock. The horses seemed to shy, and in less time than it takes to tell the sleigh was rolling over and over in the snow, with its occupants tossed hither and thither. Some moments elapsed before the half stunned messenger came to his senses, and when he did so the first thing which struck his astonished eyes was the sleigh tearing back down the pass at breakneck speed. No human being was to be seen beside him, his late companions and, worse still, his bag of dispatches, which had escaped from his grasp in the tumble, having vanished like magic. Nothing remained but to plod wearily through the snow back to the inn, where all that he could ascertain was that the strange traveler was unknown to the landlord and that he had returned by the way he had come with his own horses, explaining that there had been an accident. Neither the mysterious traveler nor the bag of dispatches was ever traced, nor has the full history of the adventure ever come to light up to the present day.—Quarterly Review.

Monkey and Mirror.

I saw a performing monkey the other day. He went through many tricks very successfully. Toward the end of the performance he was ordered to put on his cocked hat before a hand mirror, which he did. He was next told to set it straight, and he tried on his general's headgear repeatedly at different angles, causing much laughter. When all was over and the organ man, his helpers and the two monkeys were preparing to depart, I saw that "the general" had possessed himself of the little mirror and was studying his own countenance with great delight! He had placed the glass on top of the barrel organ, and he bent over it again and again, grimacing energetically. He afterward picked up his mirror and contemplated himself earnestly and contentedly at different angles. His face had been profoundly sad, like the faces of most monkeys I have seen, but now the wrinkles smoothed themselves out, and he nearly smiled.—London Standard.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Soak flannels in cold borax water. If very soiled, make a slight lather. Souse up and down and rinse well. They must never be rubbed.

Scrubbing brushes should never be allowed to soak in water, either hot or cold. Shake them when finished with and stand them in the air to dry.

Shoes that are not in use need to be aired and cleaned once in a fortnight at least, or they will not wear as long as if they had been worn each day.

A broom that is plunged into boiling suds once a week will become tough, so that it will last much longer, will not cut a carpet and will always sweep like a new broom.

THE OCEAN GRAVEYARD.

Just What Sable Island Is—Where it Lies—Its Fight against The Sea.

"Sable Island belongs to Nova Scotia, is 145 miles from Halifax and 85 miles east of Cape Canso," writes Gustav Kobbe in Ainslee's for February. "It is a treeless, shrubless waste, seamed by wind and wave and of ever-changing aspect. A cone-shaped hill near the east end, once a mere undulation of sand, is now over a hundred feet high, and is still growing. Other hillocks are gradually being mowed away by storms. The hillocks are liable to be undermined so swiftly and swept out of existence that they are carefully watched from the various stations on the island, and, there being no certainty how far an inroad of the sea will extend after each successful attack. Even the coarse grass of the island grows in a different manner from that of the mainland. It does not bear seed, but shoots up from roots which run along under the sand. During the winter the sand is blown over they ream, and buries it sometimes three or four feet deep. But the hardy blades grow up the next season, as if the island sands had protected them from the cold of winter in order to make them all the stronger.

"The island itself is fighting for self-preservation. It seems as if it drew ships into its fatal embrace as rallying points for its loose and shifting sand, thus to protect itself by a loose bulwark of wrecks against annihilation by the sea. Tradition says that when Sable Island was discovered by Cabot in 1447, it was eighty miles long and ten miles wide. In 1802, when a rescue station was established there, it was only forty miles long. Since then it has shrunk to little more than twenty miles in length, and in width it is only a mile at its widest. Within twenty-eight years the western end lost seven miles. Shoals over which the ocean now surges are pointed out as former sites of light-houses. One of these was so swiftly undermined by the sea that it had to be abandoned with the greatest precipitation. The spot where one stood the superintendent's house is now under two fathoms of water.

"The island, rapidly diminishing as its western end, is slightly gaining at its eastern. Slowly, like a ship dragging its anchor, it is moving eastward. Will it ever reach the edge of the shoals, stand tottering on the brink of the abyss till it receives its coup-de-grace and plunge over the submarine bank forever into the depths? Unfortunately, its end will probably be less dramatic. There is good ground for believing that this gray sand bar will slowly wear away until it becomes another submerged shoal added to an ambuscade already some sixty miles in length—for aline of breakers extends sixteen miles from one end of the island and twenty-eight miles from the other."

The Center of Population.

"Census experts estimate," says the Chicago Post, "that the center of population will be found next year to be in Indiana, close to the Illinois line, at a point not far removed from the town of Vincennes. The last census showed the population center to be between Columbus, Ind., and Cincinnati. The increase in the population of Georgia, Texas, the Indian Territory, Oklahoma, New Mexico and Arizona during the last ten years has been sufficient, it is thought, to offset any increase in the northwest and to possibly pull the center somewhat to the south of the 1890 parallel. The wealth center is thought to be in the neighborhood of Sandusky, O."

Animal Criminals.

A writer in Forest and Stream says that the criminal tendency is manifested to a greater or less extent by all the lower animals, and he has compiled a list of 18 crimes which are commonly committed by birds, beasts or reptiles. The indictment includes murder, parricide, fratricide, suicide, theft, kidnaping, highway robbery, polygamy and drunkenness.

Successive Waves.

The following waif is going the rounds of the state press: We are told of a young lady in a neighboring town who waved her hand at a stranger, and in three days they were married. Two days later the young lady waved a flatiron at her husband, and the next evening he came home waving a divorce.—Nashville Banner.

CHURCH AND CHURCHMEN

The old "Second church" in Boston celebrated its two hundred and fiftieth anniversary recently.

The Universalist church reports 1,003 parishes and 47,471 families, an increase of about 1,200 families over last year.

The Rev. Dr. Edward Everett Hale will not occupy the pulpit of his church in Boston again until spring. Dr. Lyman Abbott will be the supply for the month of January.

Rabbi Emanuel Schreiber of Youngstown, O., who has been chosen rabbi of the Emanuel synagogue of Chicago, is 45 years old and a native of Austria. He is a doctor of the Royal college of Vienna and has written a number of religious works.

KITCHEN HELPS.

Glassware should be washed in warm water with a dash of soap powder, rinsed off in clear, warm water and polished with soft linen towels.

Hot or cold water cans or jugs should be turned upside down when not in use, so that they can drain and dry thoroughly. If left damp, they will rust inside and be spoiled, because rust eats holes in the metal.

For dishwashing kerosene oil has been found to form an emulsion with the grease, so that a few drops of kerosene dropped into cold or tepid water will keep knife handles from being injured, as in the case where soap and hot water are used.

His "Dear Old Jim."

"Corbett is my friend and benefactor," says Mr. Jeffries. "I was once his sparring partner, and he treated me as a gentleman. Hence I have gladly agreed to fight him as a return for favors—I am bound by all the ties of friendship and gratitude to give him a chance to fight me." Was there ever such a touching instance of devotion? Mr. Jeffries will reward his old patron and benefactor by beating him into pulp and knocking his head off. One can fancy him saying, as he puts his terrible right into his friend's ribs, "Dear old Jim!"—Kansas City Star.

The Billing and Cooing.

Uncle George—You do not appear to think it necessary to spend so much time at home as you did when you were first married. I suppose the billing and cooing are all over now.

Harry—There doesn't seem to be much of a let up in the billing, and, as for the cooing, I am dreadfully afraid of it. It is sure to mean a new hat or a new gown or a new something.—Boston Transcript.

Skin.

Each average human being has about 15,000 square feet of skin to look after and nearly 2,000,000 oil and sweat glands. The outer layer of skin is constantly wearing off and must be constantly removed to allow the new skin beneath to form fresh, white and beautiful.

Wedding Bells.

On Wednesday morning at St. Peter's cathedral Miss Nellie Cronan and Mr. W. J. Caddigan were united in marriage, Ven. Archdeacon Casey officiating. The bride was assisted by her sister, Miss Nora Cronin, while Mr. T. Hanrahan acted in a similar capacity for the groom. After the ceremony the wedding party drove to the residence of Mrs. Bano, Elm street, where a sumptuous wedding breakfast was partaken of. Mr. and Mrs. Caddigan took the 4.46 p.m. train for Hamilton, where they will reside hereafter. Many presents were received, showing the high esteem in which the bride is held.

RHEUMATIC! YOUR CURE IS ABSOLUTE!

When the wall between Suffering and Health Seems Impregnable, South American Rheumatic Cure Comes to the Sufferer's Relief---"Shells" the Stronghold of Disease.

Drives out the Hostile Forces--Breaks the Shackles of Rheumatism's Prisoner--and Guarantees him Perpetual Liberty.

This Great Remedy is Invincible—Gives Relief in a Few Hours and a Cure in from One to Three Days.

Of all the tortures that disease can inflict upon man perhaps there are none more agonizing than Rheumatism, and its kindred ailments, such as Gout, Lumbago, Neuralgia and Sciatica—and these are no respecters of persons—they attack the old and the young alike.

The active, irritating cause of Rheumatism in all its phases is Uric Acid, a poison that collects in the blood. It is the waste or effete matters of the system, which, from various causes, are not carried away through the natural channels; the joints and muscles become affected; they swell, stiffen and inflame; and the pain and torture of it none can describe but those who have passed through the ordeal of suffering that Rheumatism entails.

In its more acute and inflammatory form it oft-times attacks vital parts, such as the heart, and on the evidence of expert testimony it is believed that many cases of sudden death that are to-day diagnosed as heart failure have really been caused by Rheumatism of the Heart, and it behooves rheumatism sufferers not to dally with so powerful and relentless a foe. It is a relentless disease, but so common that in many cases the suffering is borne unheeded when the patient may be within a step of death.

South American Rheumatic Cure is no respector of cases. It is a never-failing specific—a panacea for rheumatic sufferers—it enters quickly into the circulation; it drives out the foreign and irritating matter; it starts in at its work of purification, and in a trice its healing power is felt, and, as if by magic, pains disappear, joints are reduced to the normal, natural size, stiffness of the muscles makes way to suppleness, and where was a few hours or days at most, all suffering and torture, is the calm of peace that comes after the great struggle. South American Rheumatic Cure has a thousand times made the erstwhile sufferer discredit that "the days of miracles are past."

The most obstinate, obdurate, acute and chronic forms of rheumatism have been absolutely cured in from one to three days. The remedy is simple and harmless, and leaves no bad after-affects. Here's the testimony of one who ought to know its real worth—

Mrs. E. Kisner, a professional nurse, 82 Cornwallis street, Halifax, N. S., says—

"For six years I was a great sufferer from Rheumatism, and while in my profession I met and consulted many prominent physicians as to my case; none of them gave me any treatment that was permanent. I tried many remedies which claimed to be cures, with the same results. I noted the almost magic relief which came to a patient of mine in using South American Rheumatic Cure, and I decided to try it on myself, and I proclaim here and now a great remedy, the only thing that I ever took that did my rheumatism any noticeable good. When I had completed taking the second bottle I was free from all pain, and although that is some three or four years ago, I have not had the slightest return of it. I do strongly recommend it."

South American Kidney Cure is a searching remedy—it cures permanently and quickly all bladder and kidney ailments. Relieves in six hours.

South American Nervine is a health builder—it acts directly on the nerve centres—good for the stomach—aids digestion—gives tone to the nervous system—richness to the blood.

OCTOPUS AN UNCANNY MONSTER.

HIDEOUS CREATURE WHICH IT IS DANGEROUS FOR MAN OR FISH TO MEET.

Creepy Experiences of a Scientist While Experimenting With One of Them.

One of the most disagreeable animals of the sea to handle or contemplate is the octopus. The tangle of arms, the snakelike movements, the strange flashes of color, the green, glittering eyes are all features that arouse a strong feeling of aversion on the part of the observer. I have had under observation several octopi at the Santa Catalina aquarium and it has been interesting to note the characteristic features of the various individuals. In a small tank were confined three individuals having a radical spread of perhaps eighteen inches. One affected a light yellow hue and was timid, sulking behind a rock. Another, of a dark reddish tank, was continually flourishing his tentacles, rising and fallin gon the side of the glass until an observer nicknamed it the "skirt dancer." A third was almost black and was a vindictive fellow, ready an any time to make an attack.

When I introduced my hand into the tank this octopus would as quick as a flash seend out one long, attenuated tentacle and coil about it; then, if an advance was made, it would suddenly release its hold upon the rock and quickly my hand with its eight arms, pressing the round, serrated disks into the flesh, while a termulous motion would be felt. At the first attack of this kind the sensation was one of horror. The hideous creature flattened out, assimilating the color of the flesh to a marked degree and evidently endeavoring to smother the hand with its folds, as the tentacles were distended to their utmost limit.

To hold the hand firm under such circumstances required some effort, and I confess when it was first attempted, with a Florida specimen, I beat a rapid and decided retreat, but in the latter case I waited to see if the animal's object was to bite, knowing that the bill of so small a specimen could not make a serious wound. But the octopus merely pressed his mouth on the back of my hand, apparently trying to intimidate the supposed enemy. While fastened to the hand, it still held to the rock, and it was with difficulty released. When I remained quiet the animal began to creep along like a huge spider, but at the first movement of my fingers it pounched upon my hand again, enveloping it in the eight snakelike arms. I finally twisted out of its grasp and seized it firmly by the body, when its rage became intense. Flushes of color passed over it in rapid succession; now red, black, yellow and when at the height of its anger it was it was mottled and splashed with black—a frightful creature. It made a desperate effort to escape, but when released ejected a cloud of ink, darting of rapidly under its color.

The octopus resented any intrusion and advanced to the attack at once. When a strange octopus was placed in the tank, although much larger, it came out of its corner without hesitation, eyed the newcomer a moment, then in some incomprehensible way literally hurled itself at the enemy, and in a second the two were rolling over and over in a contest that was amazing to witness. The sixteen tentacles wound about each other with the rapidity of light, and both animals ejected the inky fluid from their siphons. They resembled a ball of snakes rolling along and striking at each other more than anything else. A close examination of the writhing mass showed that the object was apparently to smother the opponent. Finally the newcomer beat a retreat; it was badly wounded and succumbed a few hours later.

A student of Washington told me that once when visiting the shore he was advised by the fisherman with him to avoid the pools, and when it became necessary to cross them to pass over as quickly as possible, as large octopi frequented them. He considered this the exaggeration of a fisherman and paid but little attention to it, but once in crossing a pool, stepping from stone to stone, suddenly a long, livid arm shot out of the water and reached insinuatingly for his legs, the entire animal moving rapidly toward him. He, however, reached the rocks safely and bombarded the animal with stones. He estimated its size at twenty-five feet across, judging the tentacles to have been twelve feet in length. It cannot be determined from this whether the animal would have seized him, though the observer was confident that it would, and that it was large enough to have held him under water had he been pulled in.

The octopus is a favorite subject with popular writers on natural history, and many accounts have been written of its ferocity, which are almost invariably denied by naturalists, yet I am inclined to think that in some instances certain individuals are more or less pugnacious. I have handled scores of them from the Gulf of Mexico and California, and observed only one instance—the one cited—where the animal deliberately rushed to the attack, though I know of two others. One was observed by Ralf Arnold, a geologist of Pasadena. He was wading among the pools at low tide at Point San Pedro when suddenly he heard a cry and, turning, saw some children in a pool wading, and moving toward them a large octopus, its long arms raised above the water. Whether the animal would have attempted to attack them is a question, as it was interrupted in a more or less violent manner.

Without Hearing—Catarrh Induces Deafness—Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder Gives Quick Relief.

W. Ernest Louis, of West Flamboro, was so bad with Chronic Catarrh that his hearing seemed permanently impaired. Doctors treated, specialists tortured for five months, but his hearing grew worse. New Readers

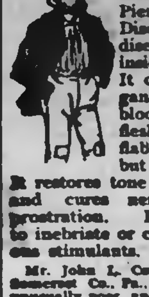
We have just received a neat little book of new readings in Scotch and English for social gatherings. The selections are from the works of Mr. John Imrie, Toronto, and are up to date. For sale at the Times Bookstore.

A CLEAN MAN.

Outside cleanliness is less than half the battle. A man may scrub himself a dozen times a day, and still be unclean. Good health means cleanliness not only outside, but inside. It means a clean stomach, clean bowels, clean blood, a clean liver, and new, clean, healthy tissues and fibers in every organ of the body. The man who is clean in this way will look it and act it. He will work with energy and think clean, clear, healthy thoughts.



He will never be troubled with liver, lung, stomach or blood disorders. Dyspepsia and indigestion originate in unclean stomachs. Blood diseases are found where there is unclean blood. Consumption and bronchitis mean unclean lungs. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery prevents these diseases. It makes a man's insides clean and healthy. It cleans the digestive organs, makes pure, clean blood, and clean, healthy flesh. It doesn't make the flabby fat of corpulency, but the firm flesh of health. It restores tone to the nervous system, and cures nervous exhaustion and prostration. It contains no alcohol to inebriate or create craving for injurious stimulants.

Mr. John L. Coughenour, of Glen Savage, Somerset Co., Pa., writes: "My appetite was unusually poor, and I was as weak and nervous as though I had been starved for months. My heart kept throbbing continually and I was short of breath. Finally I wrote to you for advice and you informed me that I had indigestion and a torpid liver. I did not think your diagnosis was right, but I ordered six bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' from you and began its use. After using three bottles I began to improve slowly and soon went to work, and I have been working ever since."

Constipation is the most unclean uncleanliness. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure it. They never gripe.

THE MILL RUNS ITSELF.

Economical Way of Doing Business on a Connecticut Farm.

Joe McCormick of the International Pulp company tells a delicious story of paper making in Connecticut, which shows that operating a mill is not such a serious matter as these big proprietors would have us believe. Strolling along the countryside in haymaking time, Mr. McCormick happened on a little paper mill which buzzed merrily in a shady dell, with everything clean and sweet around it. A look in the office showed no one there, and the visitor then wandered over the mill, hoping to find some one to whom he could talk business. The machine was humming along, and it seemed impossible that there should be no one in attendance. But even shouting failed to bring forth signs of life, and Mr. McCormick was about to leave when he spied some men in a hayfield some distance away.

"I say," he called out to the nearest one when he got within hearing, "who runs this mill?"

"I do," was the reply.

"Well, who's the owner?"

"Why, I am, to be sure."

"Do you mean to say that the mill runs itself?"

"Cert. We start her up at 6 in the morning, and she runs till 6 in the evening. This mill's been weaned, stranger; she don't need a nurse. While I'm getting in hay she puts half a ton of paper on the roll. Gee up, Bess!"—Paper Trade Journal.

Table Talk.

Rather curiously Roxane in "Cyrano de Bergerac" belongs to the modern type which dates from the days of the Hotel de Rambouillet and has always had its votaries in France. To those precieuses mere conversation was une betise. They liked declamations; discussion, not on the right of woman to the ballot, but whether she should be held a little higher than the angels or consent to be beloved. This phase of preciosity led up to the French salon, where that hothouse fashion of preparing an intellectual bill of fare for guests found its most acceptable phase.

Mme. Campan, whose advice may be said to have formed a whole generation of charming women, used to prescribe the subject of talk for dinner tables, just as certain coteries of women prescribe it today. This was her system: "With 12 at table, talk voyages and literature; with eight, the fine arts, science, invention; with six, politics or philosophy; with four, sentiment, romantic adventure; with two, talk of yourself; egoism belongs to the tete-a-tete."—Ellen Olney Kirk in Lippincott's.

A Scotch Scheme.

The following appears in a Glasgow paper. It would be interesting to know whether it has led to business. If so, the supply of grand pianos in Scotland must be considerably in excess of the demand.

"Lady having large drawin room would gladly store grand plan in return for use; references given."—London Truth.

SOME QUEER DREAMS.

VISIONS THAT RESULTED IN THE CAPTURE OF CRIMINALS.

Marvelous Manifestations That Baffle the Ingenuity of Man to Explain and Which Prove Anew That Truth Is Stranger Than Fiction.

A very remarkable instance of the tracing of a criminal by means of a dream occurred in St. Louis. A woman named Mary Thornton was detained in custody for a month, charged with the murder of her husband. A week or so after her arrest she requested to see one of the prison officials and told him she had dreamed that an individual named George Ray had murdered her spouse, giving the official at the same time full details of the tragedy as witnessed in her vision. The man Ray was not suspected at the time, but the prison authorities were so much impressed by the woman's obvious earnestness that a search was at once made for him.

After some delay he was traced and charged with the crime, the details of the same as seen in the dream being rehearsed to him. Overcome with astonishment, he then and there confessed that he had committed the crime. Curiously enough, the woman had only met the murderer once and believed him to be on the very best of terms with her husband.

Almost as remarkable was the case of a woman named Drew, who dreamed one night that her husband, a retired sailor, had been murdered by a peddler at a Gravesend tavern, where the said husband was in the habit of putting up when visiting the town in question. The first news that awaited her on rising in the morning was that her spouse had been assassinated at the very tavern she had seen in her extraordinary vision, whereupon she burst into hysterical tears and cried out that her dream had come true.

She calmed down somewhat after a few hours and then handed the police officials an exact description of the peddler of the vision, giving a minute account of his dress, which included a blue coat of a very peculiar pattern. Marvelous as the fact may appear, a man wearing such a coat and following the occupation of a peddler was discovered two days later at an inn some six miles from Gravesend, and, on being taxed with the crime, he at once admitted that he was guilty and that robbery had been the motive of the outrage. He was hanged soon afterward, his doom having been brought about by the flimsy evidence of a woman's dream.

Women as dreamers seem more successful than men, but a rather peculiar instance of a crime being traced by a vision and in which the dreamer was a member of the male sex comes from Rennes, in France. A worthy merchant, having quitted his office one Saturday evening, proceeded home to dinner and after enjoying a substantial meal lay down on the couch and fell into a light doze. A very vivid dream then came to him wherein he saw two men of the burglar type engaged in rifling the safe in his office, and so much impressed was he by the vision that he resolved, upon awakening, to at once go to the office and see that everything was under lock and key.

His amazement may be imagined when, on arriving there, he discovered the door forced and a burglary in progress. To summon a couple of gendarmes was the work of an instant, and five minutes later the thieves, who proved to be notorious housebreakers, were on their way to the police depot, where the prosecutor told his extraordinary story. In view of the fact that the safe contained valuables to the extent of some thousands of pounds, the dream in question proved a very fortunate one for the dreamer.

How to explain these marvelous manifestations, which prove once more that truth is stranger than fiction, is a task beyond the ingenuity of man to compass. Perchance the theory of telepathy may have something to do with the mysterious business, but even that theory would appear rather inadequate in such cases as the aforementioned.

A skillful forger who moved in the highest circles of society was once detected by the agency of a dream. The affair occurred in Boston and caused the greatest excitement of the time.

The forger, a young man of eight or nine and twenty, had become acquainted with a rich publisher, at whose house he became a constant guest. One day the publisher's bankers discovered that some one was forging their client's signature to various large checks, and two detectives were at once instructed to look out for the culprit.

Their efforts proved useless, but one evening the publisher's youngest daughter, a little girl of 11, dreamed that she saw a man whom she described as "like Mr. Blank," the visitor to whom reference has been made, sitting in a room in Maine street copying her father's signature. The child's dream was communicated to the police, who, though inclined to ridicule the same at the outset, eventually promised to have the gentleman in question watched, with the result that his lodgings were raided and a complete plant for the making of bank notes found there. It then transpired that he was a man who was wanted for manifold forgeries throughout the Union, and he was sent to prison for a very long term.

The child's dream was all the more extraordinary in view of the fact that she was too young to understand the leading incidents of the business and attributed the copying of her father's signature in the dream to the "gentleman wanting to write nicely, like papa." Strange, very strange, but none the less true, and proving once more that, as Hamlet remarked, "There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio, than are dreamed of in your philosophy."—Philadelphia Times.

CECIL THE FIRST

Rhodes, "The Man Who Eats a Country for His Breakfast.

A very readable character sketch of Cecil Rhodes appears in Ainslee's, written by Allen Sangree, a correspondent, recently returned from South Africa. He says in part:

"In the land that bears his name, Cecil Rhodes receives the homage of a monarch. He stands for the country's rise or fall. He is the source of good and evil; praised for completing a rail road and blamed for a continued drought. Among white men he is a subject of hero worship. To black men he represents the whole Anglo-Saxon race. They call him 'Separator of Bulls,' 'Son of the Great White Queen and the man who eats a country for his breakfast.' To them he is destiny itself.

"The first thing you notice abotu Mr. Rhodes is an absence of affectation. He receives alike the day labor and the foreign minister. In voice, manner and conduct he is ever the same. Nothing is stuided. Unlike most human beings he is not an actor. There is nothing mysterious about him. He makes use of no subterfuge, but comes straight to the point. In conversation he meets your eye squarely and impresses you with his sincerity. 'I could not stand out against him,' wailed Barney Barnato, when berated by a friend for merging his diamond interests with the De Beers Syndicate. 'He just roped me in—roped me in because I knew he spoke the truth.'

"This ingenuousness disarms you one moment, but engages your admiration the next. It is instantly forced upon you that here is a man who holds life too serious and brief for a masquerade, whose thoughts are detached from petty things and engrossed in vast ideas. Mr. Rhodes gives evidence of this by breaking off conversation when it becomes small, and concentrating his mind on some entirely foreign subject.

Rhodes Thinks in Tons.

"You need not talk with Mr. Rhodes five minutes to learn that he is a thinker. Dr. Jameson and other lieutenants who have achieved more or less distinction, seem but as moths flying about an arc light. They think in pennyweights; Rhodes in tons. He never bothers with details; they take care of themselves. Half the time he does not even have pocket money. Traveling on a street car in Cape Town one day, he found himself without the necessary 'ticky' threepence, and accepted a loan.

"'Rhodes,' exclaimed the American conductor in writhing sarcasm, 'Dusty Roads, I guess.' Indeed, the Colossus looked rather dusty, having been on a tramp along the docks. The detail of dress, however, is one to which he is especially indifferent. His favorite garb is a white flannel shirt with a polkadot tie, soft felt hat and modest gray or black clothes. He wears no diamonds. In this costume I saw him call upon Sir Alfred Milner at the Executive Mansion. The flunkey at the dorr, nevertheless, cracked his spine in making an obeisance.

"But Mr. Rhodes' clothes attract your attention last, so domineering, almost oppressive, is his presence. Not that he is unlike other men—an immune to human passions, frailties and luxuries. Far from it. I noticed that he greatly enjoys a good cigar, drinsk Scotch whisky and champagne.

His Indifference to Women.

"Cecil Rhodes is a keen observer, a philosopher, shrewd of wit, not given to long speeches, brave and lavish with money when he thinks it profitable to be so. His countenance is not an encouraging study for the sentimental In the knowledge of South Africans he has never shown attention to any woman. Disappointed-in-love stories about him go the rounds at intervals, but are never verified. There seems to be little room in his make-up for that sort of thing. He treats the gentler sex with indifference and even rudeness. For his two sisters alone does he exhibit fondness, and they in turn, have the reputation of being 'man-haters.'

"Nothing aggravates Mr. Rhodes more than for one of the Chartered Company's employees to get married. I came down from Beira on a German steamer with a newly wedded couple who were returning to England most dejected. The bridegroom had been a trusted lieutenant in Rhodesia and went home on leave of absence at his general's suggestion. When he returned with a rosy-cheeked bride, however, Rhodes received him coldly, and remarked shortly that the climate in South Africa was ruinous to a woman's beauty.

"While this might be construed as a 'littleness,' it is a peculiarity of the man that falls in line with his life's aim and work. He holds that the unmarried man will take greater risks and accomplish more for him on the fring of civilization. He looks at it in a purely business way, and is willing to pay the highest prices for the most efficient work.

"Rhodes' face and form command your respect. His forehead is massive The grayish light hair lays rather close to his head, and is inclined to curl. The ears and nose are big; the chin firm, prominent and double. The brows are heavy and overshadow bright, keen and thoughtful gray eyes. His mouth indicates severity, sarcasm and determination. His neck is thick, his shoulders strong, his hands muscular, with fingers broad at the ends. He is of medium height, his body heavy. In his forehead you see where gigantic ideas are generated; in his chin how they are carried out. The lines of his mouth tell you plainly that slight infringments of the ethical code are not to interfere in his project; that the end justifies the means."

Family Peacemakers.

More family troubles are adjusted by the magistrates in this city than the average person would willingly believe. There is hardly a day passes that every member of the minor judiciary is not called upon by a determined husband or wife, usually the latter, to issue a warrant. Nine cases out of ten the applicant is considerably excited and is eager to invoke the aid of the law in settling some trifling controversy. By calm argument and assurances the visitor can usually be persuaded to give the offender of her or his peace and happiness another chance, and a home is perhaps saved from being broken up.—Philadelphia Call.

GLIMPSES OF SOUTH AFRICA.

n Peace and in War—A Splendid Lot of Views

Southern Africa, that enormous ex- anse of tropically verdant territory ex- nding from the Lambesi River to the ape of Good Hope, has for a century or ore lain dormant to the eyes of the civ- ized world. Only within the past two cades has public attention been drawn the wonderful natural resources and ineral wealth of this wild and rugged nd, and yet, within this period, mar- lous creation of brilliant modern cities ave supplanted the desert lands and aunts of savage tribes. The steady arch of civilization, the all-pervading mbition to accumulate the wealth of iamonds and gold that lay beneath the rust of this benighted land, each has rne its part in the metamorphosis and eralded to the world the wonderful poss- bilities of that "Dark Continent" for the nergy and enterprise that the 20th cen- ury will bring to light.

In no other country of the world has rogress been marked with such adver- ty and strife as Africa. From the time e early Dutch settlers landed in the ape Colony up to the present, there has isted almost a constant state of war- re; the natives disputing the advance f the Dutch and they in turn resenting e inroads of civilization. In spite of this, strenuous were the efforts of the col- nists in their determination to turn to ccount the beauties and resources of the nd of their adoption, that today they njoy the fruits of their successes in a aradise of tropical vegetation, a salub- ious climate and surrounded by the ighest advantages of intellectuality and uxuries of civilization.

Cape Town is the metropolis and seat of overnment of the Cape Colony. Its his- orical past and present is firmly linked the traditions of the early Dutch and e Huguenots. True, the old forts and uildings of distinctly Dutch architecture till remain but magnificent edifices of e most modern type, beautiful bot- nical gardens and the public improve- ents are evidences of the wonderful ad- ance of civilization.

Port Elizabeth is the Liverpool of South Africa. It is a great commercial center, oupled with some of the largest ship- ing interests in the world; a city of the ost modern type, essentially English in aracter, and possessing some of the argest as well as the most architectur- lly magnificent buildings and public in- titutions in South Africa.

Natal is the beautiful, tropical Garden olony. Its luxurious vegetation and lorious climate, its wide avenue of trees nd fine buildings, the native Zulu ser- nts and the picturesque costumes of e Orientals, lend an air of peace and ranquility, while the marks of civilizat- n and progress are in evidence at every rn.

Johannesburg, the Golden, with its fine rchitectural creations, public institutions nd parks, possesses many attractions that asily place it as the foremost city of outh Africa. Its great industry, min- ng, the apparently inexhaustible veins of old-bearing quartz, in which upwards f seven hundred millions of dollars are vested, have been the attraction for the housands and thousands of "Uitlanders," whose "grievances" are substantially the ause for the cruel war between Briton nd Boer, the battles of which have been anked as the "bloodiest of the century."

So great has been the interest mani- ested in South Africa and the progress f the war, and so eager the thirst for formation, coupled with the demand for Pictorial History incident to the cenes of warfare, that the publicat- on of "Glimpses of South Africa" has een undertaken upon a scale of gran- eur, fidelity and completeness never efore though of, involving as it has n expense of extraordinary mag- itude. In order that the work might e absolutely reliable and thorough in ts character, the publishers have con- racted for its authorship with Mr. Wymble Flemming, an Afrikander, whose authority upon South African matters is world-widely acknowledged. This gentleman,—born in the Cape Col- ony, having travelled over nearly ev- ery inch of the country south of the Lambesi River and lived in South Africa for nearly thirty years, with an extensive newspaper experience in Africa, England and America, the author of many interesting sketches of South African life and scenery, formerly connected with the consular service at Port Elizabeth, whose comments on the war have been so favorably received by the American press, and whose magnificent collection of photographs will appear in this work,—will present South Africa as it is today, with views of everything of public interest, including most of the important scenes of battle and a graphically illustrated description of each stage in the progress of the war.

This great work is published in serial form, and when complete will comprise the most magnificent collectoin of photographic reproductions of the British-Boer war and South African obtainable in this country. Portfolios distributed by the Morning Times. For particulars see announcement on another page of this issue.

BELMONT MINES.

The Delora and Belmont Gold Mines are Highly Prosperous.

Seldom is the curtain lifted behind which the operations of the big gold mines at Delora and in Belmont are conducted; but a representative of the Times has succeeded in obtaining a peep behind it. The fact was thereby disclosed that both mines are now highly profitable and that in the near future, they will, by a large increase in the extent of the operations, become great producers.

At Delora three tons of arsenic, which ranges in purity from 99.7 to 99.47 per cent. and which is worth is worth $85 per ton at the mine, is turned out daily. The gold output brings the net product up to $800 per day. Under the skillful management of Mr. Kirkegaard the plant has been put in an entirely satisfactory condition and a thorough test of the veins has been made which shows that they are of great richness and practically inexhaustible.

Affairs at the Belmont mine are in an equally satisfactory condition. The mine is producing steadily and profitably; a number of test shafts were sunk by means of which a vast ore body has been developed and the scale of operations will shortly beg reatly enlarged. It is safe to say that this is one of the finest properties on the continent.

BILLS OVER A CENTURY OLD

They Show Tea to Have Been a Cambridge Student's Favorite Drink.

There is a bill for groceries, etc., furnished for an undergraduate at Cambridge in the year 1798. The bill contains one or two items of furniture. Apparently the undergraduate took over rooms already furnished at a valuation, and certain articles had to be bought new, such as a hearth brush, a pail, a mop and a "Holland gotch." One knows not what this means, but it cost 2 shillings 9 pence (43 cents).

The undergraduate would seem at first sight to have consumed tea in a most reckless manner. On Oct. 24 he is charged 2 shillings for Hyson and 1 shilling 6 pence for Congo. On Nov. 1 he is charged 2 shillings for tea and on the same day, which looks odd, 6 shillings 6 pence for tea. On the 9th of the month he buys a new teapot, the old one, one supposes, worn out with hard service. However, this tea lasts him till the end of the term, so that his tea costs him for the two months no more than 11 shillings, or $2.75, and as the price of tea at this time varied from 8 shillings to about 25 shillings we may conclude that he got through no more than a pound during the term.

In other words, this young man took for breakfast a slight repast of weak tea and bread and butter. Dinner was then served at 12, so that breakfast was only what the Indians call a "chota hazri." On sugar he spent 4 shillings, which means six pounds at 8 pence a pound. On candles he spent 24 shillings 8½ pence, or about 3 shillings a week. He burned wax candles, mold candles and "wax twist." Salt was a shilling a packet. On two occasions he bought sand. Was, then, the floor of his room sanded? It would seem so.

An Unprofitable Bone.

Last summer a friend presented us with a tortoise. I do not know whether our dog had heard of turtle soup or whether he regarded the creature as a new kind of bone that walked about; at any rate, he determined to eat it.

Whenever the tortoise started out on a constitutional down the garden path Gyp arrested it and carried it into his kennel, where he gnawed at the impenetrable armor till his jaws ached.

The calm and philosophical manner in which the tortoise resumed its interrupted promenade irritated the dog exceedingly, but no failure discouraged him. Whenever we reminded him of the tortoise, he would go in search of it all round the garden, peering into every crevice, till eventually the creature was found, and then fresh but futile attempts were made to extract the meaty portions from the shell.

A UNIQUE MILLIONAIRE.

The Difference Between Rhodes and Rockefeller—"If I had a Son He Would Get No Legacy From Me.

"In theg enius millionaire Cecil Rhodes is unique. On the face of the earth today there is probably no other rich man who would use his private fortune to build a railroad in a savage country or defray the expenses of a war, not knowing whether there shall be a reimbursement. It is sacrifice of this unusual sort, in an age when money is king, that commands the admiration of statesmen and mechanic alike; while capitalists from very wonder are constrained to give aid.

"This explains why, through the length and breadth of South Africa, you cannot find a man who envies Rhodes his fortune, since he neither spends money on himself nor does his hoard it for posterity. 'If I had a son he would get no legacy from me,' says this world-unique millionaire. I like to see a young man begin poor. It will bring out the best that is in him.'

"To a Rockefeller, Gould or Vanderbilt disinterested use of millions must seem like insanity. Here is a man that husbands his fortune with one hand and lavishes it with the other, much as Napoleon kept the recruiting sergeant busy at one end of the scale, while he never hesitated to fling a few thousand men to certain death at the other. He lives a plainer life than his associates. Heowns no steam yachts or private cars, and consistently declines all titles and peerage honors. He shuns society and prefers knocking about on the veldt in a Khaki suit to attending a court reception. He has spent a million dollars to provide Cape Town a zoological garden and beautiful park, yet he lives himself for the most part in a thatched hut in Mafabeleland. Three time have incendiaries burned down his villa at Groot Schur. On each occasion has he rebuilt it at greater expense, though he is seldom there to enjoy its luxuries. 'It is a good way to distribute money to the working man,' he says."

LOSER SETS UP A ROAR.

Card Player Anxious to Play, Howls When He is Beaten.

After the conclusion of the night's play he made an awful roar. He is one of those men who have an abiding faith in his skill at cards, but in the performance his faith is not always justified. But, like all men of his class, he attributes lack of success not to the acumen of his opponents, but to a bad run of the pasteboards. He always wants to sit in a game, but is a bad loser of course.

The other day a couple of rounders who knew his little weakness went to the place where he works during the night and began a game of cribbage with a drink as the stakes. They played for some time with varying fortune, all the time trying to inveigle the old fellow to take a hand. This was finally accomplished and the night man and a friend whose assets were not immediately available sat in against the original due.

Then the fun commenced. The two knew each other's game to perfection, a fact more desirable in cribbage than in most games. They also had clear notions concerning the style of plya of both opponents, so they were willing to give a few points in counting to peg on their rivals. The scheme was a brilliant success. The two young men never lost a game during nearly a whole night's play. The black bottle steadily fell under the fire of the antagonists until as dawn began to show the arrival of a new day it was empty.

The old fellow had collected a measly quarter for his share of the proceeds and was out something over a quart. He roared like a pig when the game ended, but the plan of the two men had worked all right and they made it worse by telling him how they had fooled him. He swears he will never play again.

SOME COVETED SCRAWLS.

Rare Autographs For Which Immense Prices Have Been Paid.

The most prized autographs in the world are those of Shakespeare. Only seven are claimed to exist, three signatures to his will (each with a different spelling), two to conveyances of property, one in the folio edition of his plays (doubtful) and one in a Tudor translation of Montaigne. This last is in the British museum and cost over 3,000 guineas.

One thousand guineas was the price given by the late Mr. Alfred Morrison of Carlton House terrace for an autograph letter written by Marie Stuart to the archbishop of Guise. This and two other letters (one to the pope and the other to the king of France) were written by the unfortunate queen of Scots on the morning of her execution. The letter to the French king was destroyed during the days of the terror, while that to the pope is still preserved at the Vatican.

The well known bookseller Bernard Quaritch gave £1,000 for an autograph of Columbus, which was exhibited at the World's fair at Chicago. A Chicago autograph dealer is said to have offered to give $100,000, or over £20,000, for a genuine autograph of Shakespeare if brought to him within a year of making his offer. It was a safe bluff, for since the tragic fate of Chatterton no forger has cared to tackle the quaint scrawl of the Bard of Avon.—Collier's Weekly.

Queer Cards of Shrewd Lawyers.

Not all men of the legal profession are content with the severe inscription on their cards to which etiquette and custom usually confine them. An Ohio lawyer who makes a specialty of collections calls attention to this fact by a novel device printed on his cards and letter heads. On a great red splotch intended to represent a drop of blood are the words, "Claims collected in cold blood," the capital "C" for the three first letters of these words being of sufficient size to encircle the other words.

In Maryville, Mo., a lawyer presents his portrait on his card, with the suggestive motto: "He that is not with you is against you. See me early."

Steel Combs.

A man who saw in a sidewalk showcase some steel combs and who wondered what steel combs could be used for found upon inquiry that they were used by furriers in combing furs. There was one of these combs that looked much like a comb of the ordinary kind, coarse toothed for half its length and finer toothed the other half. And then there was one comb that had teeth for half its length, the solid end serving as a handle.

There are other steel combs that are used for a similar purpose, as steel combs made to comb dogs with. The dog' comb looks somewhat like the fine toothed comb in its general shape, but it is larger, toothed on one side only and coarser toothed than the so called fine comb. The untoothed side combs of this sort are used on various kinds of dogs, including, for instance, long haired dogs like the French poodle.—New York Sun.

PETERBOROUGH, JANUARY 26, 1900

THE [illegible] VICTIMS OF WAR.

Not soldiers alone are put to the test in time of war, as is shown by the report that three British subjects were shot in the market square at Harrismith, for refusing to bear arms for the Boers. When the history of this war is written, there will probably be some black chapters in which will be recorded the treatment of non-combatants by the Boers. During the heat of the strife we are disposed to feel some doubt of the accuracy of the news that come regarding Boer treachery. Many false reports come from the front, and circulate around the world, and some of the reports accusing the Boer soldiers of treachery and brutality, may be untrue, but when a man like Sir Redvers Buller finds it necessary to caution his army against being deceived by the misuse of the white flag, we may conclude that the enemy have been resorting to that form of treachery. War is never a gentle business, but tactics of this kind invite sterner war than usual.

That three good British men, civilians, tradesmen, with no particular credit to be gained, should stand out and be shot on the market square, rather than seem to take sides with the enemies of their people, is an instance of devotion and fortitude that should not escape the notice of those foreign critics, who say the Britisher lacks sentiment. No man is more willing to die for an idea that he, if he can but take self-approval with him.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

For the nine months ending December the British revenue is $22,000,000 in excess of the corresponding period of 1898. But these and other millions will be required to keep up the establishment.

In the Philippines, Aguinaldo's forces have evidently pretty much melted away. They fought bravely and hopefully at first, but as time wore on and their limited means and men fretted uselessly against a foe of overwhelming means and strength, the fire died out of their hearts. It will be the same with the Boers.

There is no universal rush to inspect it just yet, but people are beginning to take an interest in the thermometer by degrees.

In spite of the damage that has been done at Ladysmith by shells from the Boer guns, there are still many projectiles which are practically harmless through imperfections. These shells simply sprinkle metal scraps around without force enough to penetrate even the tents, which gives some point to a "cartoon" conversation between two of Gen. White's officers one of whom suggests that they carry umbrellas, as it threatened to shell. A correspondent of the London Times says that the guns fire both common shells and sharpnel. The former weighs about 94 pounds, but has either an unsatisfactory fuse or an inferior bursting charge. The sharpnel is a mixture of sharpnel and segment shell and consists of a thin wall of steel filled in with alternate layers of segments and bullets, with a solid base of wrought iron badly coated with lead. An opinion exists among the artillery men in Ladysmith that about all the heavy-calibre sharpnel which has burst in the air has burst after ricocheting and that this accounts for the lack of penetration.

Distribution of Samples of Seed Grain.

Editor Morning Times.

Dear Sir,—Under instruction of the Hon. Minister of Agriculture another distribution of sample packages of the best and most productive sorts of cereals, &c., is now bein gmade from the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa. The distribution will consist, as heretofore, of samples of oats, spring wheat, barley, field pease, Indian corn and potatoes. Each sample will weigh three pounds. The quality of the seed will be of the best, the varieties true to name and the packages will be sent free to applicants, through the mail. The object in view is the improvement of the character and quality of the grain, &c., grown in Canada, an effort widely appreciated, and the choice of varieties to be sent out will be confined to those which have been found to succeed well at the Experimental Farms.

These samples will be sent only to those who apply personally, list of names from societies or individuals cannot be considered. Only one sample of one sort can be sent to each applicant, hence if an individual receives a sample of oats he cannot also receive one of wheat or barley. Applications should be addressed to the Director of Experimental Farms, Ottawa, and may be sent any time before the 15th of March, after which dates the lists will be closed, so that the samples asked for may all be sent out ing ood time for sowing. Parties writing will please mention the sort of grain they would prefer and should the available stock of the variety named be exhausted, some other good sort will be sent in its place. Letters may be sent to the Experimental Farm free of postage.

Director Experimental Farms.

THE NEW DREIBUND.

The Association of Germany, England and the United States the Greatest Guarantee of Peace the World Has Known.

"The association of the German Empire, the British Empire and the United States for purposes of mutual advantage is the greatest guarantee of peace the world has ever had," writes George Leland Hunter in Ainslee's for February. "The united power of the three nations, even without Japan and Italy—I say nothing about Austria-Hungary—is so preponderant that war against them would mean the annihilation of the French and Russian fleets, and even though French and Russian armies should—which is more than doubtful—be victorious on land, it would be a barren victory, and they would, in the end, be obliged to capitulate to the powers that control the seas. Even if war were a possible contingency, the stake for which the Germans, who would have to bear the brunt of it, are playing it so tremenduous as to justify their taking the risk. With the assurance that war is out of the question, Germany cannot hesitate. On the one hand is a sure prospect of commercial progress, which will cast into the shade the brilliant record made by the German Empire in the past thirty years; on the other is uncertainty and doubt.

"There are many in Germany, England and the United States, as well as elsewhere, to oppose the modernizing of the world, many in whom the spirit of anarchy is so strong that the prefer a feudal world in which petty States are allowed to perpetuate misgovernment, many who decry commercial civilization and fight with words for what they term the rights of barbarism, many who object to a world peace obtained by means of an international policy. But their protests will grow fainter and fainter as civilization, confident in its reorganizing ability, fertilizes the desert and brings plenty where poverty was before, substitutes systems of imperial juctive for petty tyranny, teaches millions to know necessities they never dreamed of, and shows them how, by patient work, to satisfy the new wants, educated them mentally, uplifts them morally and puts them into vital touch with the rest of human kind."

WHEN BULLETS FLY.

A Few Stories of Singular Happenings on the Battlefield.

"Speaking of the British officers in South Africa standing up to be shot," said a man who was at San Juan Hill, "it certainly takes a lot more courage to be a soldier now than it did in the days when they fought with muzzle-loaders. Then a fellow could see exactly who was shooting at him, and if the chap missed, which was usually the case, he could stroll over and spit him on the bayonet while he was reloading. That needed courage, of course, but it was courage of the hip, hip, hooray! sort—not the cold desperate nerve that holds a man together when bullets are buzzing like bees and there isn't a enemy nearer than a mile, you feel that then it's all a matter of blind, brutal courage, and such a feeling let me assure you, is a very demoralizing one.

"An officer, for instance, has been standing erect a quarter of an hour without a scratch, he takes two steps and a bullet knocks out his brains. It seems actually as if he had been waiting to get into its way. Another man stretches out his arm exactly in time for a Mauser to smash his elbow. Still another sees a bit of shelter and makes for it. He's just stretched himself when a ground shot plowed through him lengthwise. I've seen all those things happen and a good many more of the same kind, when there was a single Spaniard in sight, and the best we could do was to blaze away at the Landscape. Its pretty trying for an officer to stand up at such a time, but there's no doubt about it steading the men.

"One of the most peculiar things about high power bullets is that they always seem a good deal nearer and more numerous than they really are. A soldier on the ground thinks the air is literally full of them, and if he hadn't seen the officers walking around quietly he might have difficulty in jumping up himself when the order was given to charge. It would seem like simple suicide. On the second day of the Santiago fight I thouht the bullets were passing over us in a solid sheet, and I was much surprise to see our Captain get up and begin polishing his field glasses with his hankerchief. If it hadn't been for that I might be hugging the ground there yet."

THE PARAMOUNT RACE OF THE HUMAN KIND.

Magnificent Proportions of the Present British Empire—French, Germans and Dutch Reaching for Territory.

[From Pearson's Weekly.]

John Bull's island home being rigidly limited, his expansive nature war forced to expand over sea, in far-off lands, wherever his bold adventurers could gain a foothold. And so, bit by bit, our huge Indian and colonial empire was built up, until it now covers nearly a fourth of the earth's surface, and includes, probably, a fourth of its entire population. The actual figures are—Area, 13,000,000 square miles; population 400,000,000. These figures are absolutely without parallel in the history of the world.

John Bull's commands then, are, more or less, willingly obeyed by a vast host of no fewer than 350,000,000 subject people, and this host includes nations and tribes of almost every known race on the globe.

Let us take India as the most conspicuous and, numerically, the most important example. A small, but fit, British army of 75,000 men, aided by a native force under British officers of about twice that number, keeps in admirable order a teeming population of 300,000,000, a population equal to all Europe, exclusive of our own 40,000,000. India is, in fact, a continent in itself. It contains many distinct nations and races. The census returns divide the people on the basis of language into no less than 118 groups and even then there were some hundreds of people speaking an "unrecognizable" language.

A Babel of Tongues.

Out of the 300,000,000 English is the customary language of barely 250,000 and the British-born population of India is less than half that number. There are about 86,000,000 speaking Hindu, 50,000,000 Bengali, 25,000,000 Telugu, 20,000 000 aMhrathi, 18,000,000 Punjabi and 16,000,000 Tamil. On the basis of religion considerably over 200,000,000 are Hindoos, 60,000,000 Mohammedans, 7,000,000 or 8,000,000 Buddhists and only 2,500,000 or 3,000,000 and as much more favorably disposed towards their Christian rulers than the rest.

In the Straits Settlements a few Britons keep their eye on 250,000 Malays, the same number of Chinese and some 55,000 East Indians. In Hong-Kong and Kowlun over 250,000 Chinese are British subjects. The "spicy breezes" of Ceylon are inhaled in settled peace and comfort by Tommy Atkins—the 2,000,000 Cingalese, 1,000,000 Tamils, 250,000 Moors and some 10,000 Malays never disturbs his serenity. In Borneo the Dyaks and other warlike Malays have been and may be troublesome, but the unrivaled tact and calm courage of British colonial administration may be trusted to smooth down any and every disturbance of peace.

The famous bay of the south side of the Gulf of Pe-Chee-Lee, responsible for the feeblest and most widely spread diplomacy of modern times—Wei-Hai-Wei—is to be garrisoned by a British officered Chinese regiment, who can, at any rate, be trusted to keep their fellow pigtails in order.

The English in Africa.

The African command of John Bull is a particularly heavy burden, and has cost him millions in money and thousands in men. Besides 1,500,000 blacks in Cape Colony and its dependencies, there are nearly 750,000 Zulu Kaffirs in Natal; 250,000 Basutos, about 500,000 Matabeles and Mashonas, with perhaps 200,000 Bechuanas, in southern Rhodesia; 650,000 Barotses and other Bantus in northern Rhodesia, besides the 850,000 negroes of the Nyassaland or British Central Africa protectorate. Between the Zambesi and Tanganyika less than 300 British, about the same number of Sikh soldiers and a small native force under British officers "administer" the homeland of 1,500,000 blacks.

South of the Zambesi, and including the Boers of the Transvaal and Free State, the entire white population is very small in comparison with the number of blacks. Farther north, on the east coast, in British east Africa and Unganda, John has to keep the peace among 2,500,000 truculent tribes, and on the other side of the continent his Niger coast protectorate and territories on either side of the great river put upon his broad soldiers the immensely heavier burden of controlling some 30,000,000 negroes, mostly warlike Mohammedans, trained fighters, with a military organization of high efficiency.

British governors—not long-lived in those "white man's graves"—have also the care of 1,500,000 negroes in the Gold Coast, 3,000,000 in Lagos, some 50,000 on the Gambia and 75,000 in Sierra Leone.

Savage Tribes Controlled.

According to a recent official report there are over 100,000 Indians in Canada, but they have been and are so well treated by the Dominion Government that they are particularly friendly and cause little or no trouble, even in the wilds of the northwest. In Jamaica a third of the population are negroes, as also is the bulk of the inhabitants in the Leeward and Windward islands and Trinidad. The Bahama people are nearly all whites, but in British Guiana there are 100,000 negroes, 105,000 East Indian coolies and 4,000 Chinese. In British Honduras 500 white people live among 25,000 blacks.

In Fiji there are 3,500 whites to 100,000 Fijians, and in our other Polynesian islands the white population is very small indeed. In British New Guinea a handful (300) of Europeans forms the "law and the Bobby" to over 350,000 frowsy headed Papuans. The native inhabitants of Tasmania are as extinct as the dodo, but New South Wales contains some 5,000 full blacks, Queensland probably 12,000, South Australia 3,000, West Australia 3,500 and Victoria only about 500. In the northern territory of South Australia are 5,000 Chinese coolies, and Queensland has imported some 10,000 Polynesian laborers. New Zealand has now only about 40,000 Maoris, little more than a twentieth of that prosperous colony.

France and Germany's Burdens.

Frenchmen are proverbially a stay-at home people and only about 500,000 French folk live out of France. But France has, nevertheless, a splendid colonial empire of some 3,250,000 square miles, with a population, almost entirely colored, of over 53,000,000; 22,000,000 of these are in Asia, 30,000,000 in Africa and some 80,000 in Oceanica.

In farther India the French are regarded as masters of some 6,000,000 Annamese, 1,500,000 Cambodians, 3,000,000 Cochin Chinese, 12,000,000 Tonquinese and it would not be at all an easy matter to control these obstinate and defiant people, but that the French officers govern them mainly through their own native rulers and officers.

In addition to 6,000,000 Arabs and Kabiyes in Algeria and Tunis, the French have to keep an ever watchful eye on some 2,500,000 marauders in the Sahara wilds, while their west coast authorities must exercise a strong control over the 7,000,000 Fulahs and other negroes in the Senegal colony and the western Soudan, 2,000,000 on the ivory coast and in Dahomey, 9,000,000 in the Garbun and French Congo and a few thousands on the other side of the continent, besides 3,500,000 Malagasys.

Germany's burden in the way of dependent colored races is a light one compared to John Bull's, her entire colonial population being considerably under 11,000,000. On the west African coast Germany martinets maintain a severe authority over 2,500,000 negroes in Togoland and 3,500,000 in the Cameroons. German east Africa has a population of some 4,000,000 Swahili Arabs along the coast and negroes in the interior. The Damaras and Namaquas of German southwest Africa do not exceed 250,000 in number.

In the Pacific German New Guinea includes some 110,000 unkempt Papuans, the Bismark archipelago contains 188,000 and the Solomon islands 90,000 specimens of the same treacherous and intractable race; 13,000 Polynesians in the Marshall islands complete the subject race burden of Germany.

The Dutch and Americans.

Holland is a very small country, but still it is the "heart" of a big dominion over sea. The Dutch colonial empire in the Indies, East and West, has an area of 783,000 square miles and a total population of 35,000,000, of whom 25,000,000 are in Java, 3,000,000 in Sumatra, 2,000,000 in Celebes and 1,000,000 in Bali and Lomlok. Dutch New Guinea, though the largest section of the island, does not contain more than 200,000 people. In her Dutch East Indian possessions Holland finds 400,000 Chinese, 24,000 Arabs and 27,000 other orientals; the rest, 32,000,000 in number are natives of the Malay race. The Dutch West India islands only contain 50,000 and Dutch Guinea 65,000.

In spite of the Monroe and other doctrines to the contrary, the United States now finds itself burdened with over sea responsibilities, in the shape of peace and good government in Cuba, with a population of 1,500,000—blacks, 35 per cent., Porto Rico, with 300,000 blacks and 500,000 whites, and the Philippines with at least 8,500,000 ,most of them still to be "pacified."

The heavy burden of excessive armaments is not placed on the white man's shoulder so much by the "black terror" or the "yellow danger" as by the mutual distrust of otherwise civilized nation, and an ineradicable suspicion of each other, strongly marked now as they were a hundred years ago. Huge armies and powerful navies are maintained at a frightful cost, ready at a moment's notice to fly at each other, to destroy, to kill, to harry, to waste.

The cost of actual war, as in the present desperate conflict for supremacy in South Africa, though enormous, is, however, often enough less burdensome than the losses caused by rumors of war.

The cost of war—a really great war such as we are now waging in South Africa—is enormous, but unless some terrific political convulsion throw the great powers of Europe and America into collision, none of the wars of the early twentieth century is likely to cost anything like the colossal struggle in which England and her allies on the continent were involved a hundred years. The twenty seven years' war against the arrogant French republic, and then against Napoleon cost England in actual hard cash nearly £800,000,000. Add to this the destruction of property, the waste of life, the loss of labor, stagnation of trade and the burden—which we still to an enormous extent bear—laid upon the century by that war alone, is almost incalculable. The present war is estimated to cost nearly a million a day.

The cost of a war crisis, a mere rumor, is often very heavy. The direct loss in this case falls, of course, upon individual holders of securities, which lessen in value and plunge thousands of people in bankruptcy. For instance, on the mere threat of war with Russia consols shrank in value some £25,000,000.

The Ledger Monthly for February.

With the Ledger Monthly for February is incorporated Demorest's Family Magazine. The Fashion and Pattern Departments of the latter magazine are continued in the Ledger Monthly, making this a home periodical beyond comparison. The February number has on its cover one of Harry Roseland's most amusing "coon" pictures, called "Granny's Hungry Little Pichaninny," which is beautifully reproduced in colors. The Frontpiece by Edgar Taylor, entitled "Ye Ancient Custom," is a beautiful engraving emblematical of Valentine's Day. The editorial page has bright articles on Ian Maclaren's "Life of the Master" and Markham's "The Man with the Hoe." "Sunday Among the Boers" is an interesting article with photographic illustrations. John Strange Winter's new serial story, "The Binks Family," is commenced in this number. Henry Cleveland Wood contributes a story in two parts entitled "An Old Dominion Home Wedding," to be concluded in the March number. "The Land of the Six Nations," by Richard Cramer, is a very beautiful pictorial account of the conquest and settlement of Central New York, with memorials of J. Fenimore Cooper. "A Delayed Valentine" is a charming sketch by J. C. Harbour. Stella Stuart has an interesting article on "Cultivation of Physical Beauty," containing receipes and exercises for the development of the figure. Mrs. Gesine Lemcke, of the Greater New York Cooking Schools, tells how to cook and prepare fish. The interesting departments "Half-Minute Talks" and "The World's Progress," in this number are a continuation of the special series of articles which have appeared in Demorest's Family Magazine. This is one of the most interesting numbers of the Ledger Monthly which has ever appeared. Price 5 cents a single copy, 50 cents a year. Published by Robert Bobber's Sons, Ledger Building, New York.

SHAVING ACCIDENTS.

THE BARBER DISCUSSES THEM WITH THE MAN IN HIS CHAIR.

Chances to Cut Throats That Are Not Often Taken Advantage Of—Narrow Escapes From Serious Mishaps—A Father's Dream.

"Did it ever strike you," asked the little barber, "how easy it would be for the man that shaves you to kill you?"

The man in the chair sat up quickly and looked carefully at the barber, who was feeling the edge of the razor with one finger. The barber smiled to reassure his customer and said:

"It seems a queer question, I know, but it is a wonder to me that there are not a number of people killed in that way every year. It would be the easiest thing in the world for the barber as he wielded his razor to make one sweep with it and sever the jugular vein, and you would be dead almost on the instant. Suppose, for instance, that the barber should go insane. There would be nothing to prevent his doing such a thing, and you would have no warning nor any opportunity to save yourself.

"There is always a chance of a serious accident happening to the man in the chair. I have seen a number of such accidents and have a horror of even nicking the man I am shaving. In fact, such an occurrence makes me feel out of sorts for the rest of the day. It was only a few days ago that I almost had an accident that gave me a great fright and completely unnerved me. I was shaving a young man, and in passing from one side of the chair to the other a button of my waistcoat caught in his hair. It pulled a trifle, and he moved his head suddenly just as I went to put the blade to his face. I came within an ace of slashing him, and only a quick jump back saved him. The perspiration stood out on me, and I had to call one of the other men to finish shaving my customer.

"But the worst accident I ever saw in a barber shop occurred while I was working in a small town in the west. One of the patrons of the place was a business man whose 8-year-old daughter was lying at the point of death. Her father put in most of his time at her bedside. One afternoon while she was asleep he came in here to get shaved. He was so exhausted through lack of sleep that he fell asleep immediately after he had taken his seat in the chair next to the one behind which I was at work.

"He dreamed that some one had come into the place to tell him that his child had died. With a cry of alarm he started up just as the barber laid the razor against his neck. Into the flesh it sank. He was not yet thoroughly awake, and as he imagined that some one was holding him back from his child he threw out his hand to free himself, and his fingers closed over the blade of the razor. So dazed was he that he could not realize what had happened, but sat there in the chair, with the blood streaming from his throat and fingers.

"The man who had done the cutting was the first to act, although half crazed. He hurried for a doctor while we stanched the flow of blood the best we knew how. Even as the doctor was at work sewing up the wounds a messenger came to say that the little girl had died suddenly in the greatest agony, calling for her father just before she died. He was under the influence of ether at the time and did not know, but afterward, when he heard of the circumstances attending her death, he insisted that he had heard her call as he lay there asleep in the chair and that it was her cry that had caused him to make his sudden movement.

"For years after the accident he continued to shave in the same shop where it had occurred, and it was never mentioned. He carried a reminder of it for the remainder of his life. In addition to the scar on his throat, the fingers of his right hand were all drawn up and useless.

"Sudden movements while in the barber's chair are always apt to be attended with serious results, and I could recall dozens of instances where it has been only the merest chance that has prevented serious if not fatal mishaps. Nine times out of ten where the person getting shaved receives a nick and lays the blame on the barber he should thank the wielder of the razor that it was no worse. The probabilities are that it was quick action by the barber that prevented a bad cut. A slight nick often would have been a case for the doctor or coroner were it not for the watchfulness of the barber. Here yesterday I happened to draw blood from a young fellow's face near his ear, and he made a great fuss about it, until I showed him that it was only the sudden withdrawal of the razor which resulted in the slight nick that prevented him losing a good part of his ear. Then he was grateful and thanked me, besides promising to be more careful in the future.

"But there are other ways the barber has of getting even," continued the little barber after relathering one side of his customer's face. "There is no need of his slashing a man. He can inflict injuries that will make his victim decidedly uncomfortable, and at the same time the latter will not be aware of what is being done." What the barber meant by this last remark his victim did not ask.—New York Sun.

A WRECK OF A WRECK.

Two Hundred Lives Lives Lost on Sable Island in a Year.

"In the space of a single year Sable Island claimed more than two hundred lives. In fact, so many wrecks line the shoals of this ocean graveyard that the new pile up on the old like bodies heaped in one ditch. The Crofton Hall, an iron sailing ship wrecked two years ago on the northeast bar, broke in two about amidships. The pieces have drifted together again, and the islanders suppose that she struck crosswise upon an old submerged wreck, and is settling over it, which accounts for the two parts coming together. Nor is the island satisfied with the awful tribute which it exacts from the living. The same informant who writes me about the Crofton Hall adds that the barque John McLeod, which was wrecked off Devil's Island at the entrance to Halifax Harbor, has drifted ashore on Sable Island bottom up—a wreck of a wreck!"—Ainsley's Magazine for February.

Jimmy and the Baby.

Jimmy's mother kept cows and sold milk. Jimmy himself had nothing to do with the cows, though sometimes he used to carry the milk pail to his mother's customers. The customers all liked Jimmy, with his round, freckled face and bashful grin, and they used to ask him how business was, for, although Jimmy was only 13 years old, he had a business. He made coffins—baby coffins—and sold them to the undertaker. They were nice pine coffins, with all the edges carefully joined. Jimmy received 50 cents for each one.

One day Jimmy stopped at the house of one of his mother's customers to leave some milk. A little boy met him at the door.

"We've got a new baby!" said the little boy. "Would you like to see it?"

Jimmy nodded. The little boy's aunt laughingly led Jimmy to the cradle where the new baby was. Jimmy gazed at the infant for some time, speechless with admiration or some such emotion.

"What do you think of it, Jimmy?" asked the aunt.

Jimmy grinned.

"I guess I'll have to make a nice little coffin when I go home," he said.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Boers Great Pioneers.

The Boer is the ideal pioneer. From the days of the great trek, in 1837, and even before that he opened up countries hitherto unexplored by a white man. A great deal of fuss has been made of mighty travelers, English and foreign, who have traversed Africa, to the vast pecuniary benefit of their publishers and with no small meed of fame to themselves, but there was scarcely one of the old voortrekkers and hunters of the forties and fifties who did not accomplish feats of endurance, pluck and lengthy travel which were ten times as trying.—London Mail.

A RESIDENT PHYSICIAN—That's what you could rightly call Dr. Von Stan's Pineapple Tablets—for after all how few are the family complaints that cannot be reached and treated directly through the stomach. These wonderful little physicians—60 of them in a box—35 cents—heal all stomach disorders in old or young—incipient cases or chronic cases—they are pure and palatable. Sold by Ormond & Walsh.

The Occasional, an American magazine which pays particular attention to the progress made throughout the United States in the direction of municipal ownership reports this month numerous towns and cities which are purchasing a water works system. Not so many but an increasing number are getting control of their electric lighting. The latest to move in this direction are Glenville, Ohio, Tallahassee, Fla., and Muskegon, Mich. Municipal ownership says the Occasional, is the answer which municipal government makes to the question—How shall the people protect themselves against the monopoly which arises by reason of the consolidation of capital?"

"Jimmy" Knows How

Mr. James Graham, as many of our readers know, recently acquired the leading hotel in Omemee, and has made it a first class house. Heretofore a crowd of toughs have been in the habit of occasionally taking a hand in running the hotel, and could not be prevented from so doing. They usually came in in a squad, and wound up with a free fight. Recently the gang visited the hotel and begun making a "noise." Jimmy, who is an expert boxer, sized the gang up, and ordered them to desist. They simply laughed at him, and continued the noise. Jimmy jerked off his coat and sailed in. He had three of them down as fast as he could strike them and threw a couple more out. Jimmy's action terrorized the gang so much that there is no further trouble.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

Mr. H. P. Kennedy told the Times that he talked over the telephone between Peterborough and London, Ohio, a distance of over 700 miles. He heard as distinctly as if the speaker at the other end had been only a few miles away.

There is no truth in the report that the entire Peterborough police force have volunteered for service in South Africa in the Strathcona Horse. The rumor probably gained currency from the fact that Chief Rozel was seen riding his bicycle the other day.

A rumor has gone abroad that Mr. Boyd, of Bobcaygeon, who recently purchased the steamer Alice Ethel, on the back lakes, had also secured the City of Peterborough. There is no truth in the story.

It is of special interest to dairymen to learn that the price of cheese remains firm, and that there is a most hopeful sign of "good times" in the cheese industry this year.

The Union Bank of Canada will receive subscriptions to the National Patriotic Fund at its branches in Norwood and Hastings.

An alarm of fire was sounded last night about 10 o'clock, caused by a burning chimney. No damage was done.

Mayor and Mrs. Kendry entertained the choir of the George street Methodist church on Thursday evening. A very pleasant evening was spent.

Notwithstanding the intense cold the Publich school concert last night given by the Public school of Ashburnham in the Town Hall in that village was well patronized. The programme was a particularly good one and was well rendered.

The License Committee of the Council agreed to grant a rifle range license to Mr. R. N. Roddy on George street, on payment of $5.

A Bad Accident.

Mr. Dennis Gleeson, an employee of the moulding shop of the Peter Hamilton Manufacturing Co., was badly burned by moulten iron on Wednesday last. He was engaged in carrying some molten metal when he stumbled and a quantity of the liquid came in contact with different parts of his body. The pain he suffered was, as might be imagined, most excruciating, but everything possible was done to relieve his sufferings. He was driven to his home, and is now doing as well as might be expected.

Veterans' Medal.

Col. Bell showed the Times last night his medal in connection with the Fenian Raid, which he received yesterday. It is understood that Mr. A. P. Poussette and Mr. Peter Thompson have also received their's, these gentlemen having served in in other districts. Colonel Bell's medal is very handsome, and consists of the silver medal itself, on one side of which is the Queen's head, surmounted with the words "Victoria Regina" and "Et Imperatrix." On the reverse side is the word "Canada," under which is the British flag with Canadian emblem surrounded with a wreath of maple leaves. There are two silver bands attached to the medal, on the top one of which are the words, "Fenian Raid, 1870" and the lower one "Fenian Raid, 1866." Around the edge of the medal are the words, "Bugler R. W. Bell, Carleton Place, A Co." The balance of the medals are expected daily.

A Pointed Question.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir—Don't you think it is fraud to sail under false pretences? A "Patriotic Concert" is advertised for next week; into what fund do the proceeds go? I have heard that it was for the sole use and benefit of the society getting it up, but in order to draw a crowd they sail under the false pretence of a "patriotic" concert. Is this the right thing for a so-called Christian institution to do?

Yours, etc.,
ARGO.

[The Times called up Rev. Mr. Shorey yesterday in reference to the above, and that gentleman took the view that there was nothing misleading in the way the entertainment is being advertised. The proceeds will go to the Methodist Sabbath School, and there has been no attempt to conceal this fact. The entertainment will consist of views relating to the war and is therefore, Mr. Shorey contends, patriotic. The Times thinks, however, that the object of the entertainment might have been plainly stated in the advertisements so as to prevent any misapprehension.]—Ed. Times.

Obituary.

It is our sad duty to chronicle this morning the somewhat sudden, though not unexpected, dicease of Mr. Thomas Choate, senr., at the remarkable age of ninety-one. The deceased was one of four sons, who, with their parents and sisters, came to Canada at the time of the U.E.L. secession from the United States, and located originally at what is now Port Hope, the greater part of the site of which was at one time in their possession. In the days when Peterborough was known as Scott's Plains, the deceased settled at Warsaw. Being a man of unusual physical endurance and moral determination, he proved himself to be a competent and successful business man, and continued to do so till the period of impaired vigor. He was the happy possessor of a phenomenal talent for music, and this gift, coupled with instructive refinement of disposition, won him a host of admirers and friends. Often has he been known to seat himself at his melodion, and, while playing it with his right hand, manipulate the bow of his bass violinello with his left. In politics the late Mr. Choate had been a life-long Liberal, while according to his opponents the freedom he claimed for himself. The funeral will leave the residence of his son, Arthur F. Choate, Warsaw, this morning, connecting with the G.T.R. train for Port Hope, where, in the family burying-ground, interment will take place.

Local Legal.

Tew vs. Routley.—Judgment on appeal by Mary Ann Routley, the defendant, from judgment of Morgan, Junior Judge of the County Court of York, in favor of plaintiff in action in that court to recover $300. The plaintiff is the assignee for creditors of one Kutzbach, a trader at Peterborough, and sues to recover back from the defendant, as purchaser of the assets of the insolvent estate, certain rent of the premises on which the business was carried on, which rent was paid by the plaintiff in advance; See Tew vs. Toronto Savings and Loan Co., 30 O.R., 76. Further evidence was allowed to be put in by affidavit. Held, that the Savings Company is leasing to this defendant's husband elected to forfeit the lease to Kutzbach and their distress was not a waiver of the forfeiture, but refrreed back to the time of the breach by assignment; that the plaintiff might have avoided the forfeiture and acceleration of payment by giving notice in writing to the lessors electing to retain the store under R. S. O., ch. 170, sec. 34, sub-sec. 2, which he did not do; that the only support to his action is the condition in the agreement to purchase the goods as to checking the inventory and then assuming the rent and taxes and arranging with the landlord as to tenancy, and though it is difficult to say what is the proper construction to be put on it in this case, it cannot be held to mean that this defendant was to assume any part of the rent and taxes, which became due on Jan. 24th, 1899, by reason of forfeiture on Kutzbach's assignment to plaintiff, but rather that this defendant should arrange as to rent and taxes payable by virtue of her tenancy to be arranged. Appeal alowed with costs. Aylesworth, Q.C., for appellant. C. D. Scott for plaintiff.

BULLER'S ARMY WITHDRAWN TO SOUTH BANK OF THE TUGELA RIVER

RELIEF OF LADYSMITH AS FAR AWAY AS EVER

Open Talk is Heard of the Absolute Necessity of Abandoning Ladysmith to its Fate.

BOERS CLAIM BRITISH LEFT 1500 DEAD ON FIELD

Lord Roberts May Revert to the Original Plan of an Advance Over the Orange River Upon Bloemfontein—The Week Opens Gloomily for British Public.

London, Jan. 28.—11.35 p.m.

The War Office announces that it has no news from the front.

Boer Head Laager, Ladysmith, Jan. 25.—6 p.m

The British dead left on the field yesterday numbered 1500,

London, Jan. 28

General Buller's despatch to the War Office states that Spion Kop was abandoned on account of the lack of water in ability to train artillery there and the heavy Boer fire. Gen. Buller gives no list of casualties. His whole force withdrew south of the Tugela with the evident intention of reaching Ladysmith by another route.

London, Jan. 28

The War Office yesterday issued a list of casualties.

This includes two killed, six severely wounded and four slightly wounded at Rensburg on January 25 and four deaths from disease.

London, Jan. 28

The following is the text of General Buller's despatch dated Spearman's Camp, Saturday, Jan. 27, 6.10 p.m.

"On January 20, Warren drove back the enemy and obtained possession of the southern crests of the high table lands extending from the line of Acton Holmes and Hongers Poort to the western Ladysmith hills, from then until Jan. 25 he remained in close contact with the enemy.

"The enemy held a strong position on a range of small kopjes stretching from northwest to southwest to southeast across the pleatue from Acton Homes through Spion Kop, to the left bank of the Tugela.

"The actual position held was perfectly tenable, but did not lend itself to an advance, as the southern slopes were so steep that Warren could not get an effective artillery position and water supply was a difficulty.

"On Jan. 23 I assented to his attacking Spion Kop, a large hill, indeed a mountain which was evidently the key of the position, but was far more accessible from the north than the south.

"On the night of Jan. 23 he attacked Spion Kop, but found it very difficult to hold and its perimeter was too large, and water, which he had been led to believe existed, in this extraordinary season, was found to be very deficient.

"The crests were held all that day against severe attacks and a heavy shell fire. Our men fought with great gallantry. Would especially mention the conduct of the Second Cameronians, and the Third King's Rifles, who supported the attack on the mountain from the steepest side, and in each case fought their way to the top, and the Second Lancashire Fusiliers and Second Middlesex, who magnificently maintained the best traditions of the British army throughout the trying day of Jan. 24, and Thorneycroft's Mounted Infantry, who fought throughout the day equally well alongside them.

"General Woodgate, who was in command at the summit, having been wounded, the officer who succeedde him decided on the night of June 24 to abandon the position and did so before dawn on June 25.

"I reached Warren's camp at five a.m. on January 25, and decided that a second attack on Spion Kop was useless and that the enemy's right was too strong to allow me to force it.

"Accordingly, I decided to withdraw the force to the south of the Tugela. At 6 a.m. we commenced withdrawing the train, and by 8 a.m., Jan. 27, (Sunday) Warren's force was concentrated south of the Tugela without the loss of a man or a pound of stores.

"The fact that the force could withdraw from actual touch, in some cases the lines were less than a thousand yards apart, with the enemy, in the manner it did, is, I think, sufficient evidence of the morale of the troops, and that we were permitted to withdraw our cumberous ox and mule transports across the river, eighty-five yards broad, with 20 foot banks, and a very swift current, unmolested, is, I think, proof that the enemy has been taught to respect our soldier's fighting powers."

London, Jan. 29.—4.15 a.m.

The week has opened gloomily for the British public and the reaction is all the stronger because of the high hopes that were reposed in General Buller's turning movement. open talk is heard of the absolute necessity of abandoning Ladysmith to its fate while Lord Roberts reverts to the original plan of an advance over the Orange River upon Bloemfontein.

To Ladysmith the disappointment must be very bitter. A despatch from the Boer Laager near the town, dated January 24, describes the garrison as "very evidently preparing a desperate coup in order to effect a junction with Gen. Buller's advancing army." It may be regarded as a certainty that in the confident hope of early relief, Sir George White has lately been issuing extra rations and this fact has given rise to an exaggerated idea as to the length of time the provisions would last. Even should it be decided to send Gen. Buller reinforcements and to attempt to reach Ladysmith by a movement through the still more difficult country east of Colenso, it is extremely doubtful whether the garrison could hold out long enough, as such a movement would occupy at least a month

MAFEKING HAS BEEN RELIEVD.

Lorenzo Marques, Delagoa Bay, Friday, Jan. 26.—It is reported on good Transvaal authority that Mafeking was relieved on Tuesday, Jan. 22.

SILLY STORY FROM BERLIN.

Berlin, Jan. 27.—Some of the papers here claim to have an absurd telegram from Pretoria saying that General Warren was enticed into Spion Kop, where the Boers fell upon him; that seventeen of his cannon were captured, and that Buller's hasty retreat over the Tugela river alone can save him.

NOT VERY SERIOUS.

London, Jan. 27.—1.15 p.m.—The War Office has no news of the catastrophe to General Buller's force reported from Berlin, and discredits the story. Neithre has the War Office any explanation, at least for publication, of the abandonment of Spion Kop and there are no advices in this connection from independent sources.

The disposition to-day is to regard the evacuation as not so serious as at first thought. Commentators are abusing the military authorities both at home and at the front for publishing hasty accounts of an incomplete, half understood operation, thus alternately thrilling and depressing the nation.

CROSSING NEARLY CARRIED.

London, Jan. 26.—The Official Gazette to-day publishes a number of despatches from Gen. Buller to the War Office, enclosing reports from Generals White, Hildyard, Methuen, and other generals regarding the various operations, but containing nothing later than the record of occurrences to the middle of December.

Describing the battle of Colenso, Gen. Buller under date of Dec. 17, says:—

"When I heard of the disaster to Long's artillery I believed the six naval guns had shared the same fate, and decided immediately that it was impossible to force the passage without guns. Long was dangerously wounded, and was unable to obtain explanations.

"I had personally instructed him where to go into action, and with the naval guns only, but Long advanced so fast that he left the infantry escort and naval brigade behind.

"I believe that but for the failure of the artillery we would have carried the crossing.

Gen. Buller recommended the Victora Cross for Captains Congree and Reid, Lieut. Roberts and Corporal Nurse, all in connection with the attempts to save the guns.

HOW THE BOERS FIGHT.

London, Jan. 27.—Private Secker, of the 60th King's Royal Rifles, who has been invalided home from Ladysmith and has five near relatives serving in South Africa, says: "Only the State Artillery and Kruger's bodyguard are in uniform, the rest being dressed like workingmen. They always fight with their coats off and sleeves rolled up above the arm. A novel form of fortification was the filling of soldiers' kits with sand. The Boer shells are very good but the fuses bad At Lombard's Kop some of the enemy's own shells were fired back and behaved splendidly.

BULLER'S COMPLAINT.

London, Jan. 26.—Gen. Buller, commenting on the action at Zoutpan's drift, Dec. 13, says:—

"I suppose the British officers will learn the value of scouting in time; but in spite of all one can say, our men seem to blunder into the middle of the enemy."

BRAVERY ON THE FIELD.

London, Jan. 26.—Among the many acts of bravery displayed by our men in South Africa, that of Private Fitzmaurice of the Grenadier Guards stands out prominently. During the thick of the fight at Belmont Colonel Crabbe, commanding the Grenadiers, became detached from his regiment and was immediately surrounded by Boers. Seeing his Colonel's danger, Fitzmaurice rushed to his assistance. He shot two Boers, bayonetted a third and amid the firing carried Colonel Crabbe to the ambulance wagon. The colonel was shot in the wrist and injured in the thigh, and these were the wounds he described as scratches when wiring the result of the battle to Windsor. He was soon about again and recommended Fitzmaurice for the Victoria Cross.

McKINLEY'S EXCUSE.

New York, Jan. 27.—Dr. Garvin B. Clark, member of Parliament, interviewed in Washington, is quoted as saying—"I am told on good authority that President McKinley's only excuse for not offering his services as a mediator in the Boer war is that the Senate has not yet ratified the Hague conference treaty. I am also told that the United States Senate stands ready at any moment to ratify that treaty, and that the only reason action is not taken is because President McKinley does not want it ratified, that he may continue to have his excuse.

LAST OF THE VOLUNTEERS .

London, Jan. 27.—The last detachment of the infantry section of the London volunteers, numbering 134 men, were entrained this morning for Southampton, where they were to embark to-day for Africa. The route from Wellington barracks to Nine Elms station was thronged with cheering spectators, but not in the same degree as on previous occasions, and the order of march was undisturbed. The Lord Mayor and sheriffs accompanied the troops to Southampton. The battery section and ammunition column completing the regiment will leave on Feb. 3.

ROUGH RIDERS HAVE SAILED.

Immense Throngs Cheered the Fine Corps From Canada's Western Plains.

Halifax, Jan. 27.—The Rough Riders embarked for South Africa to-day under much more favorable conditions than prevailed last Saturday. The weather was fine but cold. The men were paraded at the armory at 9.30 a.m., after having been kept hard at work for several hours. The rumour which was in circulation last night to the effect that the men would be kept back owing to an outbreak of scarlet fever among the mounted rifles, proved without foundation, and preparations were completed in short order.

The men presented a fine appearance as they line up for inspection and to listen to the address by Governor Daly Thousands were present, and cheered them over and over again. During their stay in Halifax they had become very popular and made a host of friends.

Their neat khaki uniforms set off their splendid physique, and the general decision is that they were the finest corps ever seen here.

The speeches were all of an inspiring nature, and had a marked effect on the men, who, although anxious to go to the front, were loath to leave their homes.

After inspection the men were marched about the city, and immense crowds, including many strangers, gave them a great send-off. Decorations all along the line were superb, and as the force was better organized than the artillery, the parade was more successful than that of last Saturday.

The day was practically a public holiday, as employers, at the request of Mayor Hamilton, allowed employes to remain off, and business was practically suspended.

At the dockyards the gates were opened to those with passes and hundreds took advantage of the opportunity to see the steamer leave the wharf.

The men embarked amidst strains of all the city bands. The music was of an appropriate order, and the spectators cheered themselves hoarse, and the men responded heartily.

The steamers Newfield, Cheduco and Lunenburg are accompanying the steamer out of port.

WHAT MILITARY CRITICS SAY.

Buller Must Win Because Boers Can Cut Off His Retreat if He is Reversed.

London, Jan. 27.—The Morning Post critic says; The British must either attack again until they have again driven off the Boers and can keep the hill against a counter attack, or they must find another means of bringing about a Boer retreat. The explanation of the success of the Boers on Wednesday is probably that they were reinforced.

On Wednesday two battalions of Lyttleton's Brigade suffered losses which would indicate serious fighting. Could it be that it was these batalions which were all day on Spion Kop? If so, Lyttleton's Brigade is counted as part of Warren's force. If not, then the fighting on Wednesday was serious, not only at Spion Kop, but in front of Potgieter's Drift also.

The Boers appear to have no lack of men, for it turns out that the affair of Tuesday at Chieveley was not a British, but a Boer reconnaissance. The Boer efforts against Ladysmith have also increased.

The difficult side of the situation is the fact that the Boers in front of Gen. Warren are as near the British line of retreat, either at Chieveley or Estcourt as the British troops opposing them, and the Boers can move faster. That is why Buller must win the battle.

The Morning Leader's military writer says General Buller is very sorry to say that the capture of Spion Kop has been abandoned. So, we dare say, General Warren, for it knocks the bottom out of his tactics. His true tactics were to move by Acton Homes with a week's supply of ammunition and food.

BOERS CONCENTRATING TO OPPOSE THE BRITISH

They Assemble on the Plateau at Acton Homes to Prepare for a Final Fight.

BODIES OF DEAD BOERS FILL THE TRENCHES.

Boer Laagers in Neighborhood of Ladysmith Have Not Been Removed Since Buller's Movement Began—Boers Are Bringing Up Fresh Guns,

London, Saturday, Jan. 27.—A despatch to the Daily Chronicle from Ladysmith dated Jan. 21, reports that the Boer laagers in the neighborhood of the beleaguered town have not been removed since Gen. Buller's movement began, not even those behind the ridge overlooking the Tugela River. Parties of Boers are continually riding to and fron on the road from Hester's to Potgieter's drift.

They seem to be concentrating towards the plateau at Acton Homes, apparently with the intention of checking the relief forces.

The correspondent of the Times at Frere, in a despatch dated Jan. 24, describes the activity of the Boers. They are digging within range when the shells allow them to do so, and they are always at work outside the range.

They are also bringing up fresh guns.

Every prisoner caught says that the Boers will never let the British reach Ladysmith, whatever else happens.

This is their last chance of preventing the relief of the town, for behind the ridge they occupy lies open country without a single position that can be fortified.

HUNDREDS OF DEAD BOERS.

The Morning Post, in a second edition, prints a despatch from its correspondent at Spearman's camp, dated Jan. 23, which says—

"There was heavy firing at Ladysmith yesterday. General White is attacking and making a diversion.

"After the assault on January 6 Gen. White sent to Commandant General Joubert for interment seventy-nine dead Boers collected in the British trenches."

The Post's correspondent describes the operations of the relieving column from Jan. 17 to Jan. 23, and greatly praises the pluck, devotion and cheerfulness of the soldiery. He says that General Warren's guns fired 3,000 shells on Jan. 20.

His left on Jan. 21 moved up Bastion hill, which opens a cleft in the enemy's lines. The object is no longer to turn the Boer right, but by introducing a wedge of infantry into the cleft to split the right from the centre.

The gap was widened during the day, and General Warren's right completed the capture of the whole edge of the plateau and occupied the first line of the Boer trenches.

In the trenches he found about 200 of the enemy who had been killed by the shell fire.

A TERRIFIC BRITISH FIRE.

Boer Camp, Modder Spruit, Upper Tugela River, Tuesday, Jan. 23.—The British are now endeavuring to force with 40,000 troops the Spion Kop route to Ladysmith. The firing on General Botha's position yesterday was terrific. The grass was fired, rocks dislodged and trenches pierced, but the battle was practically one-sided, the federals only firing thirty shots. The firing ceased at dark, but was resumed this morning in the vicinity of Ladysmith and here.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

Hockey

Oh, dem colts! They are greased lightning on their own ice! Royal Military College Cadets beat Frontenacs Peterborough's old rivals of last year, and came to Peterborough on Saturday night, expecting to give our boys a dose of what they had given the Frontenacs. "But what a difference in the morning!" The score was 18 to 1 against them. It is no use going into details—harrowing details; if you want to know how it feels ask the Osgoodes. Schlaght of Toronto referred the game but had very little to do, except try to keep track of the games.

If the cadets give up the round now, the Colts next game will be with U.C.C. who being a Toronto team have had the luck of not having a league game yet.

The Seniors have defaulted to Osgoode, as there was no use playing the game after Wellingtons had actually won this district championship.

There seems to be a lot of teams in the O.H.A. seniors who don't know that the number of goals has nothing to do with the actual result.

At the last game between the teams of the N.Y.A.C. and the Crescent A.C of Brooklyn on Friday night, Harty our Harty, engaged in a trial of fisticuffs with Hunt of the New York team It was the largest crowd of the season and the game was very fast and exciting—the players indulging in all the tricks of the trade.

The Ring

The Toronto Crescent Athletic Club had a good show Saturday night. They had three bouts, a local five rounder to start with, and a ten round go between Hennesey, of Syracuse and Willie Popp, of Toronto, at 108 lbs.

Popp got the decision on points. The main event was the bout between Mahoney, of Philadelphia and Tom Duggan, of Chicago, at 145 lbs. Mahoney won easily.

All bids from clubs for the heavy weight championship battle between Corbett and Jeffries, to take place in March, will close on Thursday next.

The Broadway A.C. have had so many bad decisions in their boxing contests that they have left the beaten path and in future it will take two judges and a referee to decide the winner. It will be the duty of the judges to select a winner; if they fail to agree the referee will order five more rounds, the man having the best of these five rounds to be declared winner. In event of the judges again disagreeing the referee shall decide or order five additional rounds.

The Frenchmen are bound to see how boxing is done in this country, as plans for a big fistic tournament in Paris, during the exposition, are now being made. Wm. A. Brady is at the head of the syndicate. He proposes contests between Tommy Ryan and Kid McCoy, between Terry McGovern and Pedlar Palmer and between Jeffries and Fitzsimmons.

Those who saw the moving pictures of the Jeffries—Sharkey fight should be able to saw whether this picture of Sharkey is overdrawn.

From certain not to be denied evidence it would appear that Tom Sharkey's McCoy are being made somewhat injudiciously. The rib which Jeffries broke for Tom in the big fight last October has stubbornly refused to heal, and before leaving this city for the East Sharkey had made a stronger elastic vest than he has worn since the rib was fractured, says the Chicago Democrat.

Undoubtedly the main cause of Sharkey's trouble is his continued activity.

The belt which Sharkey has been wearing failed to protect his broken rib, and the latter was still protruding at every respiration of the pugilist when he donned his new protection.

The injury is painful, and, but for the sailor's wonderful constitution it doubtless would have proved quite serious, and may still give him a great deal of trouble.

Sharkey's trip to Hot Springs was for the purpose of building him up and in the hope that the injury might improve there, but on account of the defect in the bandage the wound failed to heal.

Sharkey's lame shoulder also continues to bother him, and he had a new belt placed upon it very recently.

The present condition of the Sailor confirms the prediction made by Referee George Siler after the fight that Sharkey's injuries were of such a serious nature that they would disable him for weeks.

Cycling

The prediction is being made at the annual cycle show in New York that in less than five years there will be as many motorcycles in use on this continent as there are safety bicycles now. Both the English and American inventors agree on this point.

Bald says he will compete in cycle races at the Paris exposition, but he will not race in America again.

There is a possibility that the cycle trade of the U.S. will again become allied with the sport of cycle racing, for it is stated on excellent authority that the cycle trust members will consider favorably the racing proposition at a very early date.

Baseball

The new, long-talked of league, in opposition to the National, seems to be receiving very little encouragement from baseball men in the east. Baltimore seems to be the only city east of Chicago that shows any enthusiasm over the project. We guess the scheme is doomed to an early death.

Snowshoeing

Charley Gladwin, the champion snowshoe runner, has challenged Vinci, the champion of the Blackfoot Indians, to a race with snowshoes on ice at any distance up to ten miles. The Indian is at present giving exhibitions around New York. Although Gladwin was born in England he learned his snowshoeing in Canada and has a number of records to his credit.

Vinci, the Indian, is a Canadian, from Winnipeg, and is known there as Capt. Charles Hart. His record for one mile is only one second slower than Gladwin's.

Golf

They are having a number of golf tournaments in Florida just now. Smith and Low seem to be getting the best of it. In the driving competition 186 yards is the best record they have made yet.

WAR REMINISCENCES.

A story is told in the Birmingham Daily Mail of the departure of one of the reservists for the front, showing the sublime confidence which a British soldier's wife has in the prowess of her spouse. As her husband left in the train from Snow Hill station, a woman was to be seen weeping bitterly. Full of sympathy, a bystander tried to speak words of comfort to the grief-stricken wife, when he was met with the following answer—"Oh, it ain't 'im I'm troubling about, it's them poor Boers I'm a-thinkin' of. Bill's such a terror when 'e starts." So saying, the woman started off home, shuddering at the dire fate that awaited the enemy in South Africa.

London Chronicle—A little ray of humor is thrown across the tragedy of war in a schoolboy story which is going the rounds. Major W. R. P. Wallace, of the Gloucester Regiment, who was among the captives at Nicholson's Nek, has a nephew at Borlase School, Marlow. One day one of the form masters there was reading to his boys a newspaper account of the capture of the ill-fated column, and when he came to the mention of Major Wallace's name the thrilling narrative was suddenly interrupted by a gleeful exclamation from one of the boys—"Then my old uncle is bagged, too."

English newspaper abound at present in battle, one of the best of which is the following from a book of reminiscenses relating to the seige and capture of Gowilghur in 1803—"I must here paust to relate an anecdote of our brave and kind-hearted brigadier, Col. Wallace, during this siege. We had been one night working very hard at a battery half-way up the hill, and afterward cleared a road up to it, but no power we possessed could move our iron battering guns above a few hundred yards from the bottom, so steep and rugged was the ascent. I was just relieved from working by a fresh party, and enjoying a few moments' rest on some clean straw, when the officer commanding the working party came up to Col. Wallace and reported that it was impossible to get the heavy guns up to the battery. The colonel, who was brigadier of the trenches, exclaimed—'Impossible! hoot mon! it maun be done. I've got the order in my pocket.'"

HANDLING OUR LITTLE ARMY

As a people, we have reason to be proud of the way in which the Militia Department handled the big job imposed upon it in enrolling, mobilizing, equipping and transporting Canadian volunteers to South Africa. The whole thing has passed of so smoothly that nothing but praise has been bestowed upon the much-worried and hard-worked branch of the Government that had this new and most trying work to perform.

It was both a new and a big duty. To gather troops for home service would have been comparatively easy, for the Department necessarily always had in contemplation the possibility that such a service might some day be required of it. But that two or three contingents, of all arms, should be got together, and sent off to service in Africa, was not contemplated either by previous heads of the Militia Department, or by the commanding officers. Yet this work has been so smoothly done that even the irritation that is generally thought unavoidable, when big things are put through in haste, has here been lacking.

SPION KOP.

Warren has capped the ridge of Spion Kop, and, if the calculations of the home critics have been well founded, should now be able to render the Boer position untenable. This is the brightest news for many a day. The long, costly "turning movement" has succeeded; and the successful relief of Ladysmith can only be prevented now by the possibly too great exhaustion of the British forces to follow up their advantage. However, every hour should bring them recuperation, while their artillery keeps the Boer busy.

The movement Ladysmith is relieved, the great question will be, to what extent the Boers can be harassed during their retreat. If it is possible to compel them to abandon any large number of their guns, so much will be gained for the fighting that may be to come. Now is the time when plenty of cavalry would have told tremendously. It is possible, of course, that the enemy have utilised the time when their riflemen were holding back the British to get their guns safely away by rail way to use them again in the passes and about the defences of Pretoria.

But this is not a day to see clouds ahead. British soldiers have mounted Spion Kop, and the defeat of the Tugela has been covered from our eyes by the flag of victory.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Something ought to be heard soon from the British reinforcements arriving in South Africa. Eighteen thousand men have been or due during the latter half of the present month. Apparently the censor has been stopping all news of the arrival of steamships. Three were due at Cape Town yesterday carrying 2,500 soldiers, and (including these) eight have been due since Saturday last with the total of 18,000 troops, but not a word has come in the despatches about any of the vessels.

•• • ••

Spion Kop, which General Warren has taken, is being confounded in some of the despatches with Sproen Kop, a much more important point. Sproen Kop is the centre and strongest part of the Boer position opposite Buller's present advance, and if the British got that they would have a sure way into Ladysmith. Spion Kop is a lower hill seven miles further to the west from Ladysmith, and at the extreme west of Ladysmith.

•• • ••

To permit Lord Strathcona to equip five hundred horsemen for the war, or to let Cecil Rhodes and his company do the same, is no way parallels privateering on the seas, as the imaginative New York World professes to think. Regiments raised by private capital are not plundering the enemy, to enrich themselves, but are merges in the army at the front. Lord Strathcona, in making a princely contribution to the British war fund, has merely, through his Canadianism, been led to stipulate that the money shall be spent in demonstrating to the world the fighting qualities of the men of our West country. His action is new only in its magnitude.

•• • ••

British soldiers working in the vicinity of Ladysmith ought to be paid for overtime.

•• • ••

One of the most generous contributions to the second Canadian contingent was made by New Denver, B. C. That little town sent its whole police force to the front. The force, it may be timely to observe, was composed of one man.

Bicycle v. Cow.

A farmer drifted into The Peterborough Hardware Company's store and was asked by one of the clerks—"Don't you want to buy a bicycle to ride around your farm on? They're cheap now. Can give you one for thirty-five dollars." "I'd sooner put the thirty-five dollars into a cow," said the farmer, "But think," said the clerk, "how foolish you would look riding around town on a cow." "Oh, I don't know," said the farmer, "no more foolish, perhaps, than I would milking a bicycle."

Origin of Diamonds.

The origin of diamonds, which for so long has been a debated question, appears to be explained by a recent discovery near Kimberley.

In both the Indian and the Brazilian diamond fields the gem occurs like a pebble in certain gravelly strata, but has not been traced back to any rock that gives any indication of its genesis. After the discovery of diamonds in the river sand of some South American rivers a peculiar material of a brownish buff color, which turned to a dark bluish tint, was found. It became darker as the miners dug down. The diamonds lay in this material, together with several other materials, such as garnets, iron ores, augite, olivine, etc. Excavations, begun systematically, were eventually carried on on such a large scale that near Kimberley they reached a depth of more than 1,400 feet. Here the rock is about as hard as ordinary limestone. The blue ground is found only in limited areas. The rocks around are of dark shades, banded with hard sandstone, in which sheets or dikes of basalt or some material which was once in a molten condition are occasionally found. The blue ground fills a sort of shaft of colossal size in these other rocks and is itself cut up by similar dikes. The opinions of geologists differ as to whether the gems are produced where they now lie or have been formed of some volcanic explosions. Experts now tend to the belief that the blue ground in which diamonds were found is not the true birthplace. The bowlders are often watermarked and may have rested for ages in an ancient gravel at the very bottom of sedentary rocks of the district. In course of time volcanic explosions shattered the rocky floor in which the diamonds were imbedded, of which the bowlders were only samples, and dispersed it, together with the overlying materials. It is believed that this is the true explanation of the formation of the diamand bearing blue ground.

Tea Drinking and Cold Feet.

Professor Hutchinson, F.R.S., reports the case of a lady who could not take tea because it made her feet icy cold and wet with perspiration. She thought that the soles were chiefly affected and that the hands were also made cold, but not so markedly as the feet. Mr. Hutchinson had long been familiar with the fact that tea made the feet of some persons cold, but did not know that cold prespiration attended it. He believed the coldness to be caused by contraction of the arteries, inasmuch as the feet shrank. Alcohol had usually an opposite effect.

IPSES OF SOUTH AFRICA.

e and in War—A Splendid Lot of Views

zern Africa, that enormous ex- of tropically verdant territory ex- g from the Lambesi River to the f Good Hope, has for a century or lain dormant to the eyes of the civ- world. Only within the past two s has public attention been drawn wonderful natural resources and al wealth of this wild and rugged and yet, within this period, mar- creation of brilliant modern cities supplanted the desert lands and of savage tribes. The steady of civilization, the all-pervading tion to accumulate the wealth of nds and gold that lay beneath the of this benighted land, each has its part in the metamorphosis and ded to the world the wonderful poss- es of that "Dark Continent" for the y and enterprise that the 20th cen- will bring to light.

no other country of the world has een been marked with such adversity and strife as Africa. From the time arly Dutch settlers landed in the Colony up to the present, there has d almost a constant state of war- the natives disputing the advance e Dutch and they in turn resenting roads of civilization. In spite of this, requent were the efforts of the col- s in their determination to turn to nt the beauties and resources of the of their adoption, that today they the fruits of their successes in a ise of tropical vegetation, a salub- climate and surrounded by the t advantages of intellectuality and ries of civilization.

e Town is the metropolis and seat of rnment of the Cape Colony. Its his- al past and present is firmly linked e traditions of the early Dutch and Huguenots. True, the old forts and dings of distinctly Dutch architecture remain but magnificent edifices of most modern type, beautiful bot- l gardens and the public improve- ts are evidences of the wonderful ad- e of civilization.

rt Elizabeth is the Liverpool of South a. It is a great commercial center, ed with some of the largest ship- interests in the world; a city of the modern type, essentially English in racter, and possessing some of the st as well as the most architectur- magnificent buildings and public in- tions in South Africa.

atal is the beautiful, tropical Garden ny. Its luxurious vegetation and ious climate, its wide avenue of trees fine buildings, the native Zulu ser- s and the picturesque costumes of Orientals, lend an ear of peace and quility, while the marks of civilizat- and progress are in evidence at every e.

ohannesburg, the Golden, with its fine itectural creations, public institutions parks, possesses many attractions that ily place it as the foremost city of th Africa. Its great industry, min- , the apparently inexhaustible veins of d-bearing quartz, in which upwards seven hundred millions of dollars are ested, have been the attraction for the usands and thousands of "Uitlanders," ose "grievances" are substantially the se for the cruel war between Briton Boer, the battles of which have been ed as the "bloodiest of the century."

great has been the interest mani- ed in South Africa and the progress the war, and so eager the thirst for ormation, coupled with the demand for Pictorial History incident to the nces of warfare, that the publicat- n of "Glimpses of South Africa" has en undertaken upon a scale of gran- ur, fidelity and completeness never fore though of, involving as it has expense of extraordinary mag- tude. In order that the work might absolutely reliable and thorough in characte ,the publishers have con- acted for its authorship with Mr. Wymble Flemming, an Afrikander, hose authority upon South African atters is world-widely acknowledged. his gentleman,—born in the Cape Col- y, having travelled over nearly ev- y inch of the country south of the ambesi River and lived in South frica for nearly thirty years, with extensive newspaper experience Africa, England and America, the uthor of many interesting sketches of outh African life and scenery ,form- rly connected with the consular ser- ice at Port Elizabeth, whose com- ents on the war have been s ofav- rably received by the American ress, and whose magnificent collect- n of photographs will appear in this ork,—will present South Africa as t is today, with views of everything public interest, including most of he important scenes of battle and a graphically illustrated description of ach stage in the progress of the war.

This great work is published in ser- al form, and when complete will com- rise the most magnificent collectoin photographic reproductions of the British-Boer war and South Africa btainable in this country. Portfolios distributed by the Morning Times. For particulars see announcement on an- other page of this issue.

GERMANY'S GREAT STRIDE.

Emperor William The Star Expansionist To-Day—In Sixteen Years The Germans Have Acquired Colonies Five Times As Large As The Mother Country.

In an article on "The United States of the World," written by George Leland Hunter, in Ainslee's we find this interesting outline of Germany's progress in the last twenty years: "The German Empire, learning wisdom from England, and perhaps remembering the ambitions of the Great Elector two centuries before, refused to be content with land empire, and longed for the freedom of the sea. They went to British shipyards and learned how to put together the enormous shells of steel that are used to-day for commerce and for war upon the ocean. In many respects they have already surpassed their teachers.

"In the short space of sixteen years the Germans have acquired colonies with five times the area, and one-fifth the population of the mother country. As the most fertile spots of the earth had already been preempted, however, they were obliged to take what had been neglected by others as of no account. The first rich prize they secured was Kiao Chau Bay, with the province of Shantung as a sphere of influence. Here they will have an opportunity to show what German patience, German thrift and German method can accomplish. Judging by what had been done in less promising colonies, the result will be gratifying to German expansionists, of whom Emperor William is first.

Germany in China.

"In China there is every reason why Germans should align themselves with the great commercial nations. German manufacturers have reached a point where they can compete in open market with any in the world. What they ask now is that their government should give them an opportunity to compete. And while Agrarian influence has in the past hampered trade relations—notably with the United States—the industrial growth is such that the political power of the Agrarians is diminishing. Of course the Germans would not be too modest to undertake alone the exploitation of the whole of China, but that is impossible.

"While no one can prophesy with certainty what great power is some day to occupy Constantinople, it is significant that the Germans are exploiting commercially not only Turkey, but also the Balkan States. German capital has taken advantage of the personal friendship existing between the Kaiser and the Sultan to secure concessions in Turkey for the building of railways and the introduction of steamship lines. The influence that France once exercised in the Levant has been superseded by German influence. The influence of Russia, still great because of fear, becomes less in proportion as the Sultan leans more upon his friend, Emperor William. The theatrical trip of the latter to Palestine was an outward sign of this. England, it should be noted, appears to be content to allow Germany to grow at the expense of Russia.

Her Sweep Into Persia.

"In Persia, again, German and English interests are opposed to Russian interests. When the Germans build to Bagdad, the railway for which they already have a concession, and which the Sultan is eager to have constructed, it can be made to pay only by extending it through Persia to connect with the English railway in India This would complete the overland route from Berlin and the West to Bombay, and would make Persia to a considerable extent commercially subsidiary to German merchants in Turkey. On the other hand if Russia seized Bender Abbas, on the Persian Gulf, and connected it by rail with the Persian railway systems to the north, Russia would have in Persia another vassal State, and would be in a position to weaken German influence in Turkey. Alone, England would find it difficult to prevent Russia from becoming predominant in all Persia, as she now is in northern Persia Together, England and Germany can to their mutual advantage open Persia to the commerce of the world, and, while maintaining its nominal independence ,introduce moderrn civilization."

GENERAL BARTON IN ACTION.

London, Jan. 26.—A casualty list reported yesterday from Chievely shows that Major-General Barton's brigade was either reconnoitering in force or engaged with a detached force of the enemy on Tuesday. There are no indications that the British losses, apart from Spion Kop, have been serious since Sunday, although the despatches of correspondents describe the severity of the artillery fire on both sides.

A PLUCKY POSTMASTER.

Worked the Dundee Telegraph After the British Had Retreated.

H. H. Paris, postmaster at Dundee, Natal, has written home a graphic account of his experiences. After describing the fighting at Glencoe, he proceeds—

"As you know we lost over 200 killed and wounded in storming the hill, and the Boers also lost very heavily; they lost more than we did. Unfortunately our own shells killed a number of our own men who were eagerly climbing the hill. I went over the battlefield and saw the dead and wounded.

"I saw Gen. Penn Symons brought in mortally wounded in the stomach. He was suffering intense agony, and said, 'Oh, tell me, have they taken the hill yet?' That was at 10.20 a.m., and the hill was not taken for hours later. After the doctors has injected morphine, his pain was easier, and he said he would be with the column on the following day. Instead of that he is under the sod.

"On the following afternoon I went up the hill with the buryial party and saw our dead. There were eight officers awaiting buryial lying side by side in an outhouse on the farm, including Lieut.-Col. Gunning, Lieut. Col. Sherston, Capt. Pechell and others ;and in the next outhouse were 22 men exhibiting the most frightful wounds. In one house on the other side of the hill about 80 wounded Boers were lying with only one doctor to attend to them. They were very downhearted and said they had no idea that our artillery fire was so terrible.

"On the evening of the 21st we received orders to leave the town and proceed to the South African collieries. My staff and I were about the last to leave, and we got off at a three miles walk. It was a pitch dark night, and no lights were allowed. About half way we were stopped by our outposts who demanded the password. I replied that I did not know it, but that I was the postmaster. The password was given to us, and further on we were again stopped. Here I asked to see the officer in charge, and was led into a dirty colliery store, where I found him with his head bandaged up, drying his trousers before a wood fire. It appears that he had fallen down a well in the dark. I told him I was willing to go back and work the instruments if they though it was safe, but he advised me to go forward instead of back.

"Journeying through slush and mud and a pitilessly cold rain, we came to the machinery shed of the collieries. We were ordered up a steep ladder to a room alone. Here we stumbled over sleeping bodies, because no lights were allowed, and, finally, we wedged ourselves in, lying on the bare floor on a night that seemed to wither one's marrow. At 3.30 a.m. we were again ordered to get up, and we made the best of our way to the new camp, which was at Rowlan's farmhouse, about a mile away. When we arrived, there was nothing to eat, and we found hundreds of civilians huddled together, shivering. When daylight came they broke open the cupboards in search of food, and a little tinned fish was found.

"Maj.-Gen. Yule then took up his position in this house, and he sent for me, asking me to go to the office with a message stating that the Boers had surrounded us. He required reinforcements from Ladamyith, and expected they were near at hand; in fact he was going to Glencoe Junction to meet them.

"As I rode in the Boers were shelling the town with two 40-pounders. The shells went whizzing over the office, and you may be certain I got the messages sent as soon as possible.

"I also ascertained that no reliefs were being sent, which surprised Gen. Yule very much. Previous to starting I was given a biscuit and some corned beef, which I ravenously ate, as I rode along. Altogether we were at the office four different times during the day, having to travel the distance in full view of those 40-pounders.

"At 7 a.m. the General asked me to go in with another telegram, adding that he wished us to destroy all mulitary messages that had been sent. I replied that my staff and myself would go in, but I pointed out we did not desire to be abandoned, and I asked him if he would let us know when they were retreating to Ladysmith. He said he quite understood the position, and if they decided to leave Dundee he would send a mounted orderly to inform us.

"As we could not get horses we walked into the town, and we did as requested, while we also kept up telegraphic communication with Pietermaritzburg. The Postmaster-General wired congratulating us on sticking to our posts to the last. The camp field telegraph staff had bolted the day before.

"At 11.30 p.m. a friend, who is a guide to the military, rode up very excitedly, saying he had come to inform us that the troops had gone, and that their last wagon was then moving down the street. The General had forgotten about us.

"Needless to say, we soon had our lights out, and after cramming the registered letters into the safe, and carrying away what office cash and stamps we could, amounting to £200, we soon caught up to the last wagon, and walked throughout the night, toiling through slush, mud and rain over a very bad, hilly road.

"We caught up the camp a mile and a half past Beith, where the artillery had drawn up into position to cover us. Some of the men of the Royal Irish Fusiliers shared their rations with us, and we were very grateful to them.

"We travelled mostly at dead of night, so that the Boers would not see us. They were endeavoring to cut us off, but this move was frustrated by a column from Ladysmith sent to our relief. We had little ammunition, and toward the end of the journey the men were put on half rations.

"I shall not dilate further on the miseries and discomforts of that jolting journey. Suffice it to say that I hope never to have such another experience; yet I would not have missed seeing the battle for anything."—London Daily Mail.

ENGLAND'S GREAT AWAKENING.

London, Friday, Jan. 26.—Right Hon William St. John Brodrick, Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, speaking last evening at Newark, said: "The Government have neither controlled the generals in their operations nor stinted them in the forces they have demanded. We have implicitly followed the guidance of the military advice."

Later in the speech he remarked: "It will be the duty of the Government and Parliament to see that our military organization is made equal to the needs of the empire. We have had a great awakening on this subject.

CLEVER, BUT SOULLESS.

One Woman's New Way in Which to Pay Social Debts.

"I don't know much of the ways of fashionable people," said a young physician not long ago, "for I am not in society, but if many society women are like one I know here in town I think I'm safer to be out of it. It was not this season, but it wasn't so long ago but that plenty of people can remember the circumstances. I had among my patients an elderly woman who lived with the daughter's family. The daughter lived, if not beyond her means, at least up to the very edge, went out a great deal and was entertained a great deal.

"The mother fell sick with a complaint which I knew would prove fatal. I did not inform the family till one day the daughter asked me to tell her frankly what her mother's condition was and just how long she could live. I told her that the old lady could not possibly last more than a fortnight. She begged me not to let anybody know how serious the case was. She didn't want her young daughters distressed, she said.

"Of course I told nobody, and just a week after that I read in the papers that Mrs. Dash, the daughter of my dying patient, had sent out invitations for a large dancing party, to be given on an evening a fortnight away. My patient did not live as long as I had expected. The day after she died I read in the papers that 'owing to the sudden death of her mother Mrs. Dash had been compelled to recall her invitations.'

"She had never intended to give a ball. She could not have afforded it, and she 'bluffed.' I have cold shivers every time I see her."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

AN EXCITING LIFE.

Why the Chicago Girl's Brown Hair Turned Golden Hued.

"Gosh, Marier, but that wuz a close shave!" exclaimed Uncle Eben as he dragged his worthy spouse out of the way of a street car that was yet 20 feet away. "This yer Chicago life is 'nough to make a man's h'ar turn gray."

"Turn gray!" snarled his wife. "'Twouldn't be so bad ef thet wuz all it done. It's decent and respectable to have gray ha'r, but when it comes to makin a poor young gal's ha'r turn yaller jist on account of the excitement uv all these cars an railroads on stilts an howlin people then's when I say it's a sin to hev sich big cities. I'm a-goin right out to 'Liza Jane's house, ef I kin ever find it, an stay right in it till we leave Chicago."

"How do you know it makes people's ha'r turn yaller?" asked Uncle Eben. "I ain't never hearn tell of ennything of that kind."

"Well, I see it with my own eyes—leastwise I see it turn brown agin after the poor dears wuz rested all summer in the country. You know them four gals what staid all summer over at Cousin Ellen's? When they fust come, they'd big brown eyes an fa'r complexions an right yaller ha'r. Purty soon every one of 'em's ha'r begin to get streaked in spots, an before the summer wuz gone they all had rich brown ha'r. Then I ast one of 'em what made their ha'r turn brown, an she said it wuz alla's brown, but that the excitin life she'd been livin in Chicago, whar she had to act in a theater every night, made it turn yaller. Poor thing! She looked so much better at the end of the summer that I hate to think of her comin back to this great, wicked city."—Chicago Journal.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES

RAISED FROM THE DEAD.

STRANGE STORY OF A MIRACLE COMES FROM MAINE.

Where a Woman Who Had Passed From This World is Restored to Life by the Founder of a New Religious Sect.

Shiloh, Me., Jan. 26.—People in this section of the state are still wondering over and discussing the recent reputed miracle by which Olive A. Mills was restored from death to life through the instrumentality of Rev. Frank W. Sandford, founder of a religious organization known as the "Holy Ghost and Us Society." Miss Mills is positive that she was dead and Rev. Mr. Sandford and scores of members of the society are equally certain that the woman was dead and restored to life.

"The Holy Ghost and Us Society" is a peculiar religious sect which for seven year has made this place its headquarters. A temple has been built on Durham sand hill on the edge and the elders have claimed it as the beginning of a scheme for evangelizing the world. The members of the society are looked upon by their non-believing neighbors as good citizens. They pay their bills promptly; they feed the hungry. All are welcome at the temple. The persons who dwell there devote themselves to a life based upon all the precepts of the Bible to the letter. The farmers have had opportunity to watch the doings, for though little has been said about the movement until recently, the work has been going on for seven years. Recently the members celebrated the seventh anniversary of the date when Mr. Sandford, an evangelist gave away all his possessions, abandoned his parish in New Hampshire, and started out into the world without the least idea of where he was to lay his head.

In the seven years he has built the great temple without passing the contribution box, has erected a children's building near by—a structure—of stone—and has completed and equipped a $25,000 brick building that is called "Bethesda" and which is used as a hospital for the healing of persons by the power of God. In this building of Bethesda was wrought the alleged miracle that has attracted such wide attention.

Miss Mills Experiences Death.

Speaking of her experience Miss Mills says:

"I had been ill for several days but I was not very much worried at first. Then I grew worse. The elders at Shiloh prayed with me, but in spite of theirr appeals I know I passed out of this life. I knew when my jaw dropped. It was death. Then for a time I was in darkness. It seemed to me as though I were groping about somewhere striving to find exit from some place in which I was imprisoned. Then it seemed that I rose gradually out of and above my body. The 'I' in me rose. I have no idea what this second self looked like. I simply understood that I rose above what I realized was the body in which I had dwelt. I could look down upon it. I could see the people gathered around as it lay on the bed.

"Then Mr. Sanford came in and looked at me and knelt. He prayed in a whisper. I could hardly get the whole sense of the prayer, but I could interpret those parts that had references to me.

Experiences Heaven.

Then it seemed to me that I was content to drift away. Some force impelled me away from the room and those friends. It seemed that I went through a valley of darkness, or rather, the impression was as though I was passing through a dark tunnel. I felt rather than saw that there was light—a great radiance—at the other end. Slowly I drew forward into that light. And as the light gleamed brighter and brighter my joy grew more and more profound. I knew that I was approaching the kingdom of God Almighty. I was afraid just a moment—there in the dark; then I got out of the fear into the great, wonderful peace of God that I shall never forget. I know I went almost in heaven. I know—I know that, for the joy touched my spirit. As you approach a vineyard you scent the fragrance of the grapes before you get where they are. Well, I was near enough to heaven for the fragrance to touch my spirit. It was beautiful!

Called Back to Earth.

"Then, from away back somewhere, came thinly and faintly the words, 'In the name of Jesus of Nazareth, Olive Mills, come back.'

"But I didn't want to go back. I rebelled. I kept on into the brightness. At the mouth of the dark place I saw a word written on the wall in letters of fire. The word was 'Preach!' I stopped to read and wonder. And again came from far behind the command, 'Olive Mills, come back!'

"Oh, how hard it was to turn away from all the radiance ahead. But somehow I knew that the word of God himself was in that faint voice I heard. I had to go back.

"And again I was over the body from which I had departed. The people were gathered about. It seemed to me that this poor, sunken casket of flesh was some old, soiled, discarded garment. I rebelled at putting it on again. But I knew that there was good reason for the command that had been laid upon me. After what I had experienced I was in no mood to withstand the commands of God. So I went back into my body."

What Rev. Mr. Sandford Says.

In describing his experience in restoring Miss Mills, Rev. Mr. Sandford says—

"When I entered the room where Miss Mills was lying my heart sank. She was on her bed, where she had been confined for several days. The smell of death was in the room. Her jaw had dropped and her eyes were uprolled and staring. Those who were about the bedside told me she had quivered and passed away. There was, so far as I could judge, not a sign of heart beat, no pulsation, no evidence of breathing.

"'Oh, God, give her back to me!' I cried.

"Then I knelt by the side of the bed and prayed as it seemed I had never prayed before. As I prayed there came to me the consciousness that God was hearing me with the intend to grant my prayer. The feeling flooded my heart that here was one of the rare occasions where God proposed to act through the power of His Holy Ghost. He didn't commission me to act for Him. He simply acted through me.

"I stood up beside that bed of death. I placed my hand on the brow of that woman. I cried with the perfect confidence of faith and almost without volition on my part—

"'In the name of Jesus of Nazareth, Olive Mills, come back!'

"There was then no intreaty, no supplication for her to come back—it was command—and she came!

"In a little while her eyelids commenced to twitch, her lips to flutter, her breast to heave. She was with us again. In an hour she was sitting up in bed, and a little after she was down in my office telling me her wonderful experience. I had hardly dared realize until then that in reality this woman had been in the hands of death."

MUNICIPAL MATTERS.

Lansing, Mich., has a driveway 83 feet in width.

Philadelphia is to have a labor temple to cost not less than $100,000.

Indianapolis has 3,500 dogs licensed and 1,500 unlicensed and still has no public place where one of them can get a drink of water.

New York has a school in connection with the fire department where firemen are taught to scale buildings, catch dummies and handle furniture.

Sing While Marching.

A German army doctor has discovered that singing possesses health giving properties. He claims that it intensifies the respiratory movements, thus rendering the lungs capable of dealing with more air. This increases and strengthens the action of all the organs of the body. Appetite and thirst increase, and the more frequent movements of the diaphragm materially aid digestion. German foot soldiers are therefore encouraged to sing on the march.

Electric Bell Substitute.

A substitute for an electric bell has been devised by a deaf couple. Not being able to hear the bell themselves, and having no servant, they have fixed up an arrangement by means of which when the button at the front door is pressed, the electric lights all over the place light up, and remain so until the button is released. By a reversal of the arrangement, all the lights are switched off when the button is operated after dark.

LOVE ON THE FARM.

A potato went on a mash
And sought an onion bed.
"That's pie for me," observed the squash,
And all the beets turned red.
"Go away," the onion, weeping, cried;
"Your love I cannot be;
The pumpkin be your lawful bride,
You cantaloupe with me."

But onward still the tuber came
And laid down at her feet;
"You cauliflower by any name,
And it will smell as wheat;
And I, too, am an early rose,
And you I've come to see,
So don't turn up your lovely nose,
But spinachat with me!"

"I do not carrot all to wed,
So go, sir, if you please,"
The modest onion meekly said,
"And lettuce, pray, have peas!
Go think that you have never seen
Myself or smelled my sigh,
Too long a maiden I have been
For favors in your eye!"

"Ah, spare a cuss!" the tuber prayed,
"My cherryshed bride you'll be;
You are the only weeping maid
That's currant now with me!"
And as the wily tuber spoke
He caught her by surprise
And, giving her an artichoke,
Devoured her with his eyes.

HE WASHED DISHES.

The Hard Job One Boy Had All the Way to Europe.

The girls who have complained in various keys because they had dishes to wash may be glad to hear of a young man who can look at the matter through their eyes, perhaps more so. He had shipped as "boy" on a cattle steamer for Europe because he wanted to save as much as possible on his transportation, and—but the rest of the story sounds better in his own words:

"About 4:30 in the morning I was awakened and told to go to work. I hastily dressed, for the first and last time on board, for during the rest of the voyage I took care not to undress. It seemed scarcely worth while. I arrived on deck and found the steward waiting for me. He showed me into the pantry, introduced me to 'Pants,' as the pantryman was called, and told me that my chief duty during the voyage would be to wash dishes.

"There was already a large pile of dirty dishes waiting to be washed, and I rolled up my sleeves, fixed the hot water and began to work. I had these almost done when another and larger lot was brought in from the dining room. This proved to be the daily programme. I no sooner had one pile washed than others were brought in, and I was never done. I don't think I ever saw so many dishes before in my life, and I hope I never shall again. There were 60 passengers aboard besides the cattlemen, and six meals were served each day. From the dishes that came out to be washed, I think that each passenger must have used at least six plates at a meal."—Detroit Free Press.

Destroying the Point.

Every one knows the man who is notorious for so telling a story as to destroy its point. An English nobleman, Lord P., was noted for his success in thus ruining the prosperity of a story. The author of "Collections and Recollections" exhibits a specimen of his lordship's peculiar art.

Thirty years ago two large houses were built at Albert Gate, London, the size and cost of which seemed likely to prohibit tenants from hiring them. A wag christened them "Malta and Gibraltar because they can never be taken."

Lord P. thought this an excellent joke and ran round the town, saying to every friend he met:

"I say, do you know what they call those houses at Albert Gate? They call them Malta and Gibraltar because they can never let them. Isn't it awfully good?"

Some one told Lord P. the old riddle, "Why was the elephant the last animal to get into the ark?" to which the answer is, "Because he had to pack his trunk."

Lord P. asked the riddle of the next friend he met and gave as the answer, "Because he had to pack his portmanteau."

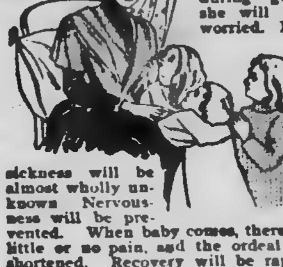
Did you ever notice how some women break down after marriage? As the family increases, the poor mothers lose their graceful, symmetrical forms, their faces are full of lines and no vestige of youth remains. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription works wonders for such women. A woman need never lose her shape or beauty. If she will take "Favorite Prescription" during gestation, she will not be worried. Morning sickness will be almost wholly unknown. Nervousness will be prevented. When baby comes, there will be little or no pain, and the ordeal will be shortened. Recovery will be rapid, and the patient will emerge with her old-time attractiveness of face and figure. The mother who takes this wonderful medicine can keep her health and youthful looks, even though a half-dozen children play about her knees. No other women's remedy is its equal. Never allow the medicine dealer to substitute something else.



This remedy contains no trace of alcohol, nor opium, nor any of the dangerous drugs which enter so largely into many advertised "compounds," recommended for the cure of invalid women. It will not create craving for stimulants.

"For five years my wife was in an almost helpless condition, suffering from female weakness," writes J. S. Everitt, Esq., of Hagerman, Washington Co., Fla. "Last September I decided to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. She took several bottles of the medicine and gave birth to a ten pound son on January 31st, 1898. She is now sound and well and doing her housework."

Every family needs a medical guide and instructor. The best ever published is the Common Sense Medical Adviser, 1008 pages. It will be sent free on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps to cover cost of customs and mailing only. This book has been not inaptly termed "The Bible of the Body," for it is to the body what the Bible is to the soul,—the great chart of salvation.

THE WRITERS.

Michael Davitt, during his days in parliament, did nearly all his literary work in the house writing room, where silence is enforced, sitting invariably in the same seat.

Paul Bourget has announced his intention of paying a second visit to this country. He will come next spring and gather material for a novel dealing with American social life.

Theodor Mommsen, at the age of 82 years, has published a new work, "Roman Criminal Law," as a companion to his great "Roman Constitutional Law." It is a volume of 1,078 closely printed, large octavo pages.

Bjornstjerne Bjornson lately saw for the first time the statue of himself set up before the National theater in Christiania. He turned red in the face and demands that it be removed, as it is a libel on his personal appearance.

THE PARIS SHOW.

The Paris exposition catalogue will contain 100,000 names.

The parks of Milwaukee will be part of the exhibit of that city at the Paris exposition. A series of photographic views of the public parks of that city will be shown.

It took a bid of 275,000 francs to secure the privilege of letting out seats for the Paris exposition of 1900. For the 1889 exhibition the successful bid for the monopoly was 39,000 francs.

Governor Mount of Indiana is personally supervising an elaborate exhibit for his state at the Paris exposition. One of the features of this will be a series of large photographs to show the progress of the "good roads" movement in Indiana, where there are now 50,000 miles of graded and graveled highway.

House of Refuge.

The matter of establishing a house of refuge for the town and county does not seem to be gaining much headway. A committee of the Town Council waited on the County Council, and after discussing the matter, a resolution was passed appointing a committee to gather information and statistics in regard to it, and report at the June session. It is safe to assume that the matter is in a fair way of being shelved for some years at least.

MILITARY MATTERS.

Peterborough is Well Represented on the Winnipeg Contingent.

The Winnipeg Free Press says—Trooper F. J. Elmhirst is a native born and belongs to Peterborough Ont. He served with "A" squadron for two courses, enlisting in Quebec, and holds a first class cavalry certificate. He formerly belonged to the first artillery, Kingston, and served in the Cuban war with the Third Regular U. S. Cavalry. He recently joined "B" squadron.

Trooper F. W. Wallace comes from Souris, where he was a member of the Manitoba Dragoons. Born in Millbrook, Ont. Has a second class "B" certificate, from the Quebec School of Cavalry, and was formerly a sergeant in the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons, of Peterborough. His father, W. G. Wallace, resides in Souris.

John J. Harvey is an ex-member of the Manitoba Dragoons. Born at Peterborough, Ont. His relatives reside at Oak Lake. His father, Dr. Harvey, is a former resident of Peterborough.

George A. Bellamy is an ex-member of the Manitoba Dragoons, Virden. He was also in the Northwest Mounted Police for three years and has had a three months cavalry short course. He was born in Port Hope.

D'Arcy E. Boulton is a rough rider. He is a son of Colonel Boulton, who for many years was commanding officer of the 3rd Prince of Wales Canadian Dragoons.

Should be Encouraged.

Mr. George Stevens applied to the Council for permission for the men employed by him and living in town to be allowed to buy junk at their residences and keep it there until they had collected a load or some such convenient quantity—to establish branches, as it were, of the business. The license committee took no action. The Times is of opinion that Mr. Stevens' should be encouraged. He is putting a lot of money into circulation by buying old scraps. Not only this, his work tends to keep the town in a better sanitary condition by the removal of old junk and similar stuff.

Coontown on Skates.

When in Peterborough a couple of weeks ago the colored members of the "Trip to Coontown" company indulged in a skate on the rink with more or less success. At Barrie they tried hockey and had, so the Gazette says, a particularly hot time of it. During the fun one of the girls fell on her face with such force as to split her lip and knock her out for two hours. The services of Dr. Palling were required to attend to the injuries.

OVER THE BRIDGE

DID THE 264 EXPRESS TRAIN CRASH THIS A.M.

Graphic Account of the Terrible Affair Given to a Times Reporter—Full Details of the Occurrence

With a terrible rumble of swiftly revolving wheels, and a clash of steel as the iron rails were struck by the encroaching rolling stock, the 2.45 express crashed over the Locks Bridge at 1.46 this morning. The train was made up of an engine and tender, bagge and express car, 3 passenger coaches and a Pullman sleeper. In the cab of the engine was Engineer Lever, of Belleville, and Fireman Fireuppe, of Millbrook. The cab contained nothing else except a large oil can and a monkey wrench for turning curves.

Citizens will remember the terrible accident which occurred at this bridge some five years ago, when engine and baggage car dashed over the abutments at the open bridge and plunged into fifteen feet of the raging waters of the Otonabee. This terrible affair, although terrible as terrible can be, is only out terribled by the terrible occurence which occurrd early this morning.

The train left the depot at 1.30 this morning. As was stated above, the train was made up of passenger coaches, and therefore, not being a freight train, the depot was left at this time. The train was in charge of Conductor Fairpleas, who has only been in the employ of the company about two weeks. He is spoken of as a careful, conscientious man, and no blame can be attached to him. His version of this horrible catastrophe is straightforward and fearless. His crew, outside of the engineer and fireman (who are not cannibals) is composed of John R. Belle-Chord, of Kingston, brakesman, and Thos. Veighbase, baggageman, both of whom corroborate the story of the conductor in every important particular.

THE CONDUCTOR'S STATEMENT.

Conductor Fairpleas when seen at the scene of the occurrence said—

We left the depot at 1.30, just 7 minutes late, and pulled up to the semaphore at the rate of 4 or 5 miles an hour. I was in the first car to the baggage, when we stopped at the semaphore. I stepped down from the train to look at the signal lights myself, for since the last accident some years ago I have made it a point to do this. The lights plainly signalled all clear, and a few minutes later we started off for the bridge." (At this point the conductor seemed to be overcome with the horror of the scene at the bridge, for he staggered with faintness and murmured, 'you know what followed.")

THE STORY CORROBORATED.

The brakesman and the baggageman both corroborated the story of the conductor. They are both willing to swear that the lights signalled all clear. They are positive they waited at the semaphore for about four minutes before they pulled out from the semaphore. This clear proves that the conductor is in the right.

WAS THE ENGINEER TO BLAME?

Engineer Lever says that the lights were against the train, but not enough to shove it off the track. He would not have gone had not the gong in the cab been rung to go ahead. He was surprised at this for he could see the bridge ahead of him. However, as the signal to go ahead was repeated he opened the throttle, and the train speeded on its terrible destination. The water in the river was very rough and with rare presence of mind he took the oil can and squirted its olieferous contents upon the waste below. This act no doubt saved many lives.

The story of the engineer was corroborated by Fireuppe, who was in the tender at the time, shovelling snow off the coal. He told the same story in every particular, and it is clearly to be seen that no blame can be attached to the engineer.

WAS IT A FIENDISH PLOT?

The Conductor emphatically denies that he pulled the bellrope, and the question now is, who did? It is the general opinion that some malicious person, who had a spite against the brakesman for not putting ice in the cooler, did the deed in a spirit of cold blooded revenge. The conductor can furnish a clue which may likely lead to the arrest of the party. There was a man on the train, thick set, and wearing salmon-tinted underwear, who showed a pass when the conductor called for fares. It is thought that this man had a "pull" and pulled the rope. If he can be found the mystery will be solved.

HOW IT OCCURRED.

The train left the semaphore at 2 a.m. and crashed over the bridge. People living near the bridge were awakened by the noise, but knowing it was the train going over the bridge, rolled over on their several beds and resumed their several sleeps.

The train reached Belleville in safety. There will be another train going over the bridge to-day.

SUNDAY MORNING BLAZE.

Bickle's Cheese-box Factory, Ashburnham, Totally Destroyed.

Shortly after three o'clock yesterday morning the village of Ashburnham was visited by the most serious fire that has occurred for some time, and as a result the cheese box factory of Mr. Samuel Bickle was totally destroyed, together with a considerable amount of valuable stock. The alarm was sounded, and the brigade soon on the spot, but the building was an old one composed wholly of timber, which burned like match wood. At one time there was considerable danger of the fire spreading to McCallister's flour mill, but the members of the brigade worked like Trojans and prevented it spreading. The flames lighted up the sky and attracted quite a crowd of spectators. From the south end it looked as though the market block were ablaze. In an hour's time the whole structure was in ruins. It is understood that the building was covered by insurance.

WARREN'S GREAT FIGHT IN TRAP SET BY BOERS

The Boer Maxims and Rifles Converted the Summit Into a Perfect Hell of Fire.

SIXTEEN SHELLS FELL IN A TRENCH IN A MINUTE

ut the Gallant Troops Held Position Tenaciously for Twenty Hours and Then Taking Advantage of Darkness Abandoned it to the Enemy.

London, Jan. 30, 12.40 a.m

e War Office announces that no further news has been received from South Africa, except a report from Lord Roberts that the situation is unchanged.

London, Jan. 30

special despatch from Frere Camp, dated Friday, Jan. 26, 9.10 p.m., says—"I have just ridden in here, having left Gen. Buller's forces in the ew positions south of the Tugela, to which they retired in consequence of the reverse at Spion Kop. The fighting both before and after the occupation of the mountain was of a desperate character. Spion Kop is a precipitous mountain overlooking the whole line of kopjes along the upper Tugela. The nek was strongly held by the Boers, who also occupied a heavy spur parallel with the Kop, where the enemy was concealed in no fewer than thirty-five rifle pits and was thus enabled to bring to bear upon our men a damaging cross-fire, the only possible point for a British attack being the south side, with virtually spur precipices on the right and left. A narrow foot path admitting men in single file only to the summit opens into a perfectly flat table land probably of 300 square yards area, upon which the Boers had hastily commenced to make a transverse trench. Our men were able to occupy the further end of this table land, where the ridge descends to another flat, which was again succeeded by a round, stony eminence held by the Boers in great strength. The ridge held by our men was faced by a number of strong little kopes at all angles, whence the Boers sent a concentrated fire from their rifles, supported by a Maxim-Nordanfeldt and a big long range gun. What with the rifles and the Maxims the summit was converted into a perfect hell. The shells exploded continually in our ranks, and the rifle fire, from an absolutely unseen enemy, was perfectly appalling. Reinforcements were hurled up by General Warren, but they had to cross a stretch of flat ground which was literally torn up by the flying led of the enemy. The unfinished trench on the summit gave very questionable shelter, as the enemy's machine guns were so accurately ranged upon the place that often 16 shells fell in the trench in a single minute. Mortal men could not permanently hold such a position. Our gallant fellow held it tenaciously for twenty hours, and then taking advantage of darkness, abandoned it to the enemy."

London, Jan. 30

e Times has the following heliograph message via Modder River, from Kimberley, dated Jan. 26—"The bombardment continues. It is now directed towards the inhabited portion of the town rather than to the fortifications. Between midnight and 4 p.m. there were 240 shells fired. They seem to have been of the Transvaal manufacture, and not bursting widely. One child was killed and four persons injured."

DUNDONALD'S FORCE IS SAFE.

London, Jan. 29.—Great anxiety has n removed by the announcement at Lord Dundonald's cavalry forces, hich it was feared had been isolated ong the hills in the neighborhood Acton Holmes, are safe on the south nk of the Tugela River.

BULLER LOST ENORMOUSLY.

London, Jan. 29.—The War Office nies the report that Ladysmith has rrendered, and announces that a ry heavy list of casualties will be ued to-night.

THE SITUATION IN NATAL.

London, Jan. 29.—There is no need r despondency over the latest phase the campaign in Natal. It is true at General Warren's flanking movent has failed and that Buller has en compelled to fall back over the gela after a week of ineffectual hting. It is also true that the ers have demonstrated the powerness of one small modern army to ove against them with sufficient pidity to execute the military movents which in ordinary cases would an victory, but in their case mean ly a change of battle ground. But itish generals and British soldiers ve done all that could be done under e circumstances. The former have ted prudently and the latter have ght pluckly against a foe, the most termined and courageous they have r had to face. The truth is that neral Buller has not enough men. He has all along been trying to perform a feat which his own military text books advice him is unadvisable, not to say impossible. If Buller had three armies of thirty thousand men apiece he would have none too great a force for the relief of Ladysmith. For no fault of his own he has been endeavoring to accomplish a formidable task with barely thirty thousand troops, when ninety thousand were necessary It is not hard to fix the blame. Troops have been poured into Africa lavishly. Their distribution in widely seperated places is only questionable, and for this the political exigencies must be held responsible.

The war is one of the great wars of history, and the British people are only just beginning to grasp the fact. Moreover, great wars are not concluded in a few weeks. Massena sat down before Wellington's army in Portugal for six months and then marched away disheartened. The Peninsular War lasted five or six years, the American Civil War three years, and the war of 1812 three years. So far only three months have passed and the full resources of Britain have not been put in the field, though the Boers have exhausted a considerable portion of their own. Considering the smallness of his army, General Buller did wisely to retreat over the Tugela. Of course he might have carried the Boer position extending from Acton Holmes to the Tugela at tremendous loss of life, but what would have been the value of such a position with an army reduced by ten thousand casualties? Could such an army have entered Ladysmith? If it did relieve the gallant garrison, would it not swell the number of the belengured garrison, being too weak to continue the work of driving the Boers from Natal and having to be relieved in its turn by a third army. Buller cannot afford to lose the men who would assuredly have fallen if the attempt had been continued. With an army of 90,000 or 100,000 men he might have carried the position, filled with the assurance that the gods fight on the side of the largest battalions. But, in his own peculiar circumstances, the risk was too great and the retrograde movement must be considered a wise one.

The Times this morning prepares the public for the fall of Ladysmith, stating that ere long we shall learn of a catastrope without parallel except in the case of Cornwallis at Yorktown. It is to be hoped, however, that the straits of the garrison are not so desperate, and that General White, rather than surrender, will cut his way to the south. Even if he loses half his men such a deed would furnish a nobler example than that of ten thousand men laying down their arms. There is also the possibility that the Boers, recognizing the impossibility of carrying the town by assault, may allow the garrison to march out with the honors of war and join their comrades to the south.

The Boer account of the retreat from Spion Kop differs so much from that of General Buller that it must be considered exaggerated and distorted. That the enemy recaptured the hill by fierce charges cannot be believed in face of Buller's statement that it was abandoned during the night.

It now turns out that the fight in which General Lyttleton's brigade was engaged on the 24th, and in which Lieut. Osborne, of the Cameronians, lost his life, was the result of an attempt by that brigade to flank from the east the Boers who assailed Woodgate's brigade during the day following the seizure of the hill. The abandonment was rendered necessary, as previously hinted in this despatch, by the impossibility of mounting artillery upon the captured position with the immense difficulty of defending its too large area.

A LONG PAUSE INEVITABLE

London, Jan. 29.—The usual airy attempts to minimize the seriousness of the situation in South Africa are entirely lacking this afternoon, and it is frankly acknowledged that the most serious effort of the present war has failed. There is no sign of a wish on the part of the leaders of public opinion to disguise the ugly facts, and there is every disposition to face the full difficulties and discover the best way out. In short, the policy voiced everywhere is the gathering up of forces for more effective blows. All hopes of the speedy relief of Ladysmith have been abandoned and the concensus of expert opinion urges the immediate shifting of the theatre of war from the rocky kopjes of Natal to the open veldt of the Free State. One thing appears certain, another long pause is inevitable unless the Boers assume the offensive, because, even in the event of General Buller further attempting to reach Ladysmith, the planning of a new move will necessarily occupy time.

The afternoon papers are drawing attention to the closeness of the parallel between the Federal attack on Gen. Lee at Fredericksburg and the operations on the Upper Tugela.

Curiously enough, there is visible, especially in military circles, an under current of relief at the news that the British are safely south of the Tugela, for the rumors of Saturday had conjured up visions of an immense catastrophe.

The St. James' Gazette this afternoon returns to scathing criticism of the language of General Buller's reports. It says: "General Buller's reflection on the terror he put into the foe reminds us of things we have heard about Chinese Mandarins."

CONSCRIPTION SUGGESTED.

London, Jan. 29.—The afternoon newspapers are discussing whence are to come the troops for a protracted campaign. It is becoming generally recognized that some form of compulsory service is more and more imminent than previously thought of. The St. Jmes Gazette, however, suggests that the solution of pouring more troops into South Africa savors of the Spanish action in Cuba, adding that the solution of making better use of thousands already there has never suggested itself.

PRESIDENT STEYN AT PRETORIA.

Pretoria, Jan. 26.—President Steyn, of the Orange Free State, and A. Fisher, of the Executive Council of that Republic, arrived here this morning. They were met at the railroad station by President Kruger and other officials, and were cheered while driving to the residence of the President of the Transvaal.

MACRUM'S SECRET MISSION.

Rome, Jan. 29.—Charles E. Macrum, formerly United States Consul at Pretoria arrived here to-day. He says there is much sickness at Pretoria.

The ex-Consul told reporters that he must be silent as to his reasons for leaving Pretoria until he had reported to the United States Government. He denied that he had left the Transvaal because of any disagreement with President Kruger or State Secretary Reitz. He admitted that he was the bearer of letters from President Kruger to President McKinley of the United States and President Loubet of France, but stated that he was merely moving as a carrier in this matter and no official function was involved.

Mr. Macrum said that although he believed the British campaign would ultimately be successful, he thought it would take a long time to convince the Boers that they must submit. When he left Pretoria, Mr. Macrum said, there was the greatest enthusiasm. There was still an ample supply of war material and food-stuffs. The South African Republic, he said, had prepared for a long war.

THE TAKING OF SPION KOP.

Spearman's Camp, Jan. 26, 6.40 a. m.—On Thursday night last a force under General Woodgate attacked Spion Kop and took the position at the point of the bayonet.

At 1.45 a.m. Wednesday the British were half way up to the summit, and the field guns were pushed forward.

General Lyttleton's brigade was extended to the centre opposite Potgieter's drift.

With telescopes Boers could be seen beckoning to comrades, who were climbing the rocks on the west side of the hill.

While the British advanced from the east there was a tremendous cross-fire from the highest point of the hill.

The troops must have suffered heavily while crossing the zone of fire.

The Boer guns were hard to locate. Their positions had been selected with masterly skill.

At 10 a.m. the Boers began climbing down over the nek, the naval guns playing lyddite on them.

At 2 p.m. the whole hill up to the nek was held by the British, who began throwing up entrenchments.

At about 3 o'clock advances began on the west side.

The Third King's Royal Rifles and the Second Cameronians made a magnificent assault up the most precipitous side of the Sugarloaf mountain, reaching the summit at 5.15.

This is the north-east extremity of the key of the position.

IS THE POSITION IMPREGNABLE?

London, Jan. 29.—The Queen's speech at the re-assembling of Parliament to-morrow is awaited with unusual interest in the expectation that a considerable increase in the naval and military expenditure will be necessitated by the lessons of the war and be altogether apart from the special war vote.

As the afternoon papers are commenting without full knowledge of the facts they are not disposed to offer any apologies for General Buller's defeat. The St. James Gazette says—"The meaning of the retreat is obvious. We have to recognize that we cannot force our way through the enemy's lines to Ladysmith. Why, we do not know. If the Boer position is impregnable it ought never to have been attacked. If it is cable of being taken, we were repulsed because the leadership was bad, and it is idle to attempt to conceal that the latter is far from incredible.

"The remedy for South Africa is not to add to the numbers, but to put the troops where their force can come into play."

BOERS WERE ASLEEP.

Spearman's Camp, Jan. 26.—About 2 o'clock on the morning of January 24, when heavy clouds rested upon the kopjes, the main point of the Boer position, Tabanyama, was stormed by the British infantry under General Woodgate. Our force crossed over a ravine and climbed the mountain side steadily, getting within thirty yards of the enemy's first line of trenches.

The Boers, who had been asleep, decamped, leaving everything behind, and the British, with ringing cheers, climbed to the summit.

The Boers opened fire from several points, but it was apparent that they had been taken completely by surprise and their resistance was dispirited. The western crest of the hill was soon won, and the infantry crept along the top of the hill.

At daybreak, however, the Boers, from a high point on the extreme west, sent a withering fire among the British, which momentarily staggered them. The Boers had the range fixed to a nicety, and their artillery sent several shells right to the top of the crest, forcing the infantry to take cover. The Boer Nordenfeldt also was worked with great precision.

The British held the position against great odds. At 10 o'clock strong reinforcements were sent up the hill and advanced in skeleton formation, the enemy being driven to the extreme point.

C. P. R. GRAIN ROUTE PLAN.

Mr. J. R. Booth Says It is Feasible and Will Not Interfere With C. A. R.

Ottawa, Jan. 29.—The proposed C.P.R. short line grain route which means the deepening of the French river, from the Georgian Bay to Lake Nipissing, and the erection of large elevators at North Bay, from which point the grain will be transferred to the Atlantic by the C.P.R. is attracting widespread attention and in Ottawa especially it is being widely discussed. In many minds there was a belief that this scheme would interfere with the plans of the C.A.R. company, which is now making such a successful bid for a liberal share of the western grain trade, as the C.P.R. proposes to make North Bay just such a centre for the reception of the western grain as the C.A.R. company has made Depot Harbor. Mr. J. R. Booth, when interviewed on the matter, and asked what his opinion of the new route and plans was, stated he considered them quite feasible and such as could be successfully carried out. Questioned as to whether the new route would affect the C. A. R. grain carrying business, Mr. Booth replied that it would certainly have no effect whatever, and would in no way cause he or any of his co-workers to change their plans. Mr. Booth stated that so far the C.A.R. company had not made any definite arrangements for elevator accommodation at Montreal, though this end of the scheme would be well looked after. Mr Booth expressed himself as satisfied with the prospects of his plans, and that his business interests will not be interfered with by the C.P.R. company's scheme.

$200 FOR TWENTY YEARS

IS WHAT THE TOWN WILL BE ASKED TO CONTRIBUTE

Towards Construction of Mud Lake Bridge—By-law Passed at Last Night's Council Meeting.

Council met in special session last night to consider the question of giving financial aid in the construction of the new Mud Lake bridge.

There were present Mayor James Kendry, and Aldermen Sawers, Oke, Weir, Rogers, Dawson, Clinkscale, Denne and Corkery.

The minutes of the preceding meeting were read and confirmed.

ENGINEER'S REPORT.

The Town Engineer, in compliance with alderman Roger's resolution at first meeting of this year's council reported at length upon all work done on roads and bridges, including granolithic sidewalks, under his superintendence during 1899, and also as to the condition of all public work still under contract, together with the amount of money spent for machinery and material necessary in his department.

The report embodied the following detailed statement of monies expended on plant and machinery.

Labor	$ 854 68
Lumber	81 84
Rent and purchase of engine 1-5 cost for 1899	124 50
Fuel	33 75
Moving crusher	26 50
Advertising	2 19
Tools and supplies	64 00
Repairs to crusher	240 50
Repairs to engine	45 71
Purchase of crusher 1-5 cost for 1899	218 00
Granite	635 50
	$2327 40

Although the report was favorably received on the whole, council took exception to the item of $240.50 spent in repairs for the stone crusher, which they thought rather exhorbitant for a new machine.

A communication from the Canadian Patriotic Fund Association, asking for co-operation in the praiseworthy work in hand, was favorably received.

Accounts.

The following accounts were referred to the Finance Committee.—

Mud Lake Bridge.

Ald. Oke presented the following report of the Joint Committee:—

Gentlemen:—Your Joint Committee beg leave to report as follows:—

1. A joint meeting of this Committee and a Committee of the County Council was held on January 26th inst, and on the question of the opening of the tenders for the Chemong Lake bridge being considered, the tenderers object to them being opened if the County intended to await the action of the Town before awarding the contract, and the tenders were consequently not opened and the time for receiving tenders was extended for six weeks. It was also moved by Mr. Hawthorne, seconded by Mr. Oke, and carried, that the Joint Committee recommend the County Council to proceed with the construction of the bridge at a minimum cost of $22,000, provided the Provincial Government grant a satisfactory sum towards the undertaking and the Town of Peterborough grant $200.00 a year for 20 years for the same purpose and the Committee recommend the Town of Peterborough forthwith to submit to the ratepayers of the Town of Peterborough a by-law for their assent embodying the above grant.

2. At the same meeting it was moved by Mr. Denne, seconded by Mr. Pearce, and carried, that Messrs. Oke, Roger, Forster and Peck be a Committee to make enquiries and consider fully the question of the erection of a House of Refuge by the municipalities jointly and to report to the Joint Committe prior to the June session of the County Council.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

The report was adopted.

Ald. Dawson took strong exception to a grant being allowed for the construction of Mud Lake Bridge from an economical standpoint. He thought that in face of the town's present heavy debenture debt for granolithic sidewalks and the decrease in the value of real estate, it high time to retrench. He did not think trade would be diverted to another centre should the proposed bridge not be constructed. He favored the County shouldering their own debt in this matter as they alone are interested.

Council then went into committee of the whole on the reading of a by-law providing for a grant of $200 a year for 20 years towards the construction of bridge in question.

The reading of the by-law revealed the fact that both the plans and estimated cost of the bridge had been received from those originally agreed upon, which gave rise to considerable discussion.

Ald. Sawers, while strongly in favor of financially supporting the bridge, said he must oppose the by-law on the grounds that the present plans and estimates called for a bridge 16 feet inside at a minimum expenditure of $22,000, while last year's committee had agreed to a structure 18 feet wide, costing $32,000. He wanted to know why this change had been made, and would insist upon the plans and specifications being in the Council's hands before voting upon the by-law; as he did not believe in granting this money for a poor structure.

Ald. Weir concurred with Ald. Sawers and opined that the proposed bridge was absolutely necessary to keep a large portion of the county trade in Peterborough.

Ald. Roger strongly favored immediate passing of the by-law, which he explained protects the town in every particular; it provides that the plans and specifications are to be approved of by the Council, which in his opinion covered the whole ground. He was fully convinced that the town was largely interested in the matter, and would add that it had been pointed out to him that the removal of the bridge would leave the larger portion of Ennismore nearer to Bobcaygeon than our own town.

The Mayor remarked that the Government engineer had concluded that the proposed structure at $22,000 was worth $320,000 more than the plans originally drawn up at a cost of $32,000, which is accounted for by the change of location. He urged that the matter be decided at once, as the town was thoroughly protected in the by-law.

Ald. Oke, chairman of the Joint Committee, here explained that at last Wednesday's meeting the committee had been authorized to proceed in the matter and draw up a by-law; this had accordingly been done with a view to meeting the county's requirements, and at the same time thoroughly protecting the town's interests. He would like to see the by-law submitted for our citizens' approval and the pledges of last year's Council carried out. He explained that while the minimum cost of the bridge had been fixed at $22,000, it was understood on advice of the County Engineer that the increased price of lumber of late would increase the cost of the structure to about $27,000. He personally felt assured that the proposed bridge would be one thoroughly satisfactory in every way.

The by-law received the unanimous support of the Council, with the exception of Ald. Sawers, who registered his vote against it on the ground that the plans and specifications should be attached to the by-law, before being carried; and despite every argument used by his colleagues, he could not agree that the town is sufficiently protected by a clause providing that the plans and specifications upon which bridge is to be built must be submitted to Council for approval.

Ald. Oke moved, seconded by Ald. Weir,—That the County Warden be asked to furnish the town with a copy of plans and specifications of the new bridge.—Carried.

Seeking a Settlement

Contractor Evans here asked the Council for a settlement of his account for extras on the Sherbrooke and Dalhousie street bridges.

Ald. Dawson urged that the engineer be instructed to report on the matter at once. It is not right to keep Mr. Evans out of his money, providing there exists no just objection to his claims.

Ald. Dawson moved, seconded by Ald. Clinkscale,—That the matter be left in the hands of the Board of Works with power to act.

The meeting then adjourned till the call of the Mayor.

A PRO-BOER MEETING HELD IN WASHINGTON

American Lumbermen Would Take Advantage of Great Britain's Embarrassments.

TROUBLE BREWING OVER PAUPER IMMICRATION.

Washington is Greatly Pleased to Hear That Lord Pauncefote Will be Retained at Washington as British Ambassador for Another Year.

Special to the Times.

Washington, Jan. 29.—Washington is greatly pleased to hear that Lord Pauncefote, the British Ambassador, will probably be retained here for at least a year longer, although he is already nearly two years past the retiring age. His term has twice been extended, and it is understood that the action will be repeated a third time in view of the delicate questions arising from the Transvaal war and the necessity of having in Washington a diplomate equally popular and especially fitted by years of experience, for the management of Anglo-Saxon affairs. Sir Thomas Sanderson has been for some time gazetted to succeed Lord Pauncefote on his retirement.

THE LOG TROUBLES.

A committee of millionaire lumbermen from Michigan has recently been in Washington, urging the State Department to take advantage of British embarrasments abroad and gratitude for United States sympathy, to urge the removal of the export duty imposed by Canada on logs. The committee, however, has received scant encouragement, having been told that Congressional action will be essential before any concession can be secured. In other words they were given to understand that so long as they insisted on a duty of $2 per thousand on Canadian lumber, it was quite certain that Canada would not reduce her export duties. The explanation of the movement is found in the fact that American lumbermen own millions of acres of timber in Canada, which they wish to cut and bring over to be sawed in mills on this side of the border. This, however, would simply strip the Canadian forests without any compensating advantages, so Canada imposed the export duty in order to compel the sawing of the lumber on her own side of the border. There is no profit on lumber imported after paying $2 duty, and therefore the vast possession of the lumberman are lying idle. It is understood that Canada will repeal her export tax if the United States will repeal its tariff duties, but to this last the lumbermen will not consent.

PRO-BOER MEETING.

An immense pro-Boer meeting was held in this city last Sunday night, at which a number of Congressmen and other well known men made violent anti-British speeches. It was evident, however, that nearly all those present were either Germans, Irish, or Democrats, scarcely a Republican being present. The Germans and Irish came through hostility to Great Britain, and the Democrats came because they saw in the meeting an opportunity of attacking the administration for its Philippine policy. Scarcely a speech was made which failed to draw a parallel between the two wars. This fact serves to explain the rancor manifested. Further, it is quite evident that quite as enthusiastic a pro-British meeting could easily be organized.

PAUPER IMMIGRATION.

Trouble is undoubtedly brewing over the fact that immigrants who are paupers or diseased, and who for these reasons have been denied admission to the United States, are coming to this country via Canada. It is even reported that English steamship agents make a practice of selling doubtful emigrants, tickets to the United States cities via Canadian ports. The custom has become so widespread that the Bureau of Immigration is considering means of obstructing it. Mr. Powderly, head of the Bureau, said recently—"The Immigration Bureau has for some time had the question of policing the Canadian frontier under consideration. In order to make such a plan effective, it will be necessary to delay trains from Canada in crossing the boundary line between that country and the United States. Traffic would be delayed and travellers put to inconvenience by reason of the stoppage of trains for a sufficient length of time to enable the immigration officers to properly inspect arriving immigrants. If arrangement can be made to obviate this difficulty, there is no doubt that inspection will be made at the border instead of at Canadian ports of entry, as at present."

ELECTRIC POWER.

Consul Hamilton, of Morrisburg, Canada, reports that after many futile efforts, the mayor and the town council of Morrisburg have obtained a lease from the government for twenty-five years of 350-horse water power, to be used for the development of electric power for manufacturing industries, and for lighting. The Council is using every means to get manufacturers to establish there, offering free water, light taxes, and a bonus.

STOCK FATTENING.

The Agricultural Department is much interested in a report from the Canadian Experimental Farms on the subject of feeding mollases to stock for fattening purposes. From three to five pounds per day, were fed, diluted somewhat, and poured over the cut coarse fodder. It is said the steers developed a great liking for it, and to all appearances it gave good results. The most important points in favor of this new feeding stuff are that it contains a large percentage of sugar, the most assimilable form of carbohydrates found in cattle feeds; it stimulates the appetite, and probably increases the digestibility of the other constituents of the ration.

THE GOLD FIELDS.

Consul Smith, of Victoria, sends an interesting report on the prospective rush to Cape Nome. He says—"The transportation companies here and on the sound are all actively engaged in preparing steamers for the long trip. They have already booked all the passengers that can be carried on the first trips, on every vessel that can be secured. At a recent meeting of representatives of the companies, it was computed that 65,000 persons desired to go to Cape Nome as soon as possible. The reports that had been circulating last season in regard to the gold discoveries at Cape Nome were quite generally disputed here, the opinion being that the Atlin and Klondike countries were more promising and also easier of access. But the last two steamers from the north effectually dispelled all uncertainitles, the passengers bringing with them indisputable evidence that all along the beach in the vicinity of Cape Nome, gold in paying quantities can be had for the digging."

PETERBOROUGH, JANUARY 30, 1900

NATIONALIZE THE TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES.

The Mayor of Toronto does not intend that his occupancy of the Mayor's chair shall be barren of, at least, suggested reforms. The first effort in this direction is a notice to the City Council of a resolution in favor of national ownership of telegraphs and telephones. The Toronto World favors the movement, and says —"We hope the municipal councils all over the country will take up this question and pass similar resolutions. We are inclined to think that the Government will take a kindly view of the proposal, and we should not be surprised if some authority, looking in this direction, were asked for at the forthcoming session. The telegraph and telephone service of this country can be taken over for a comparatively small amount of money, and we can borrow money in England at 3 per cent., and any amount of money, for the extension of lines, could be borrowed at the same rate or less. And the Government could not only extend the lines without actually costing the country anything, but could charge enough for telephone rates and telegraph tolls not only to make the service self-sustaining but to realize considerable revenue. And they could do all this, and at the same time cut the telegraph tolls in two and rental of telephones one-half. Furthermore, the postal service of the country would be made five times as efficient if the telegraph service was in conjunction with it. The thing has been threshed out so often, and the advantages of national ownership made so clear, that it is hardly worth while now to re-state them. What we would like to see is somebody put forward any kind of a reasonable objection to the proposal."

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Those who are impatient for the relief of Ladysmith, should remember that "more haste less speed" has been the rule in the present campaign. It has cost the British a good deal to learn the lesson of making haste slowly; but having once learned it, they are not likely to throw it away.

* * *

By the time the Boer war is over there will be several hundreds of thousands of English-speaking people whose military education has been so far advanced by studying the war despatches and discussing the situation that they will feel themselves fully competent to direct a campaign. Many of them do even now.

* * *

In travelling about so much by rail Bryan is also keeping track of his chances.

The British troops under General Buller gained a decisive advantage on Saturday. General Warren's division occupied the Boer position north of the Tugela, and is probably within fifteen miles of Ladysmith.

* * *

Buller and Roberts have been elected directors of the Woodbridge fair but their crowning glory is still to come. They have not yet been elected honorary members of the South Ward Liberal Club.

AN EFFORT BEING MADE TO CHANGE THE COURSE OF THE WATERWAY.

Port Hope and the Trent Canal.

Port Hope, under the leadership of our esteemed contemporary, the Guide, is making a strong effort to obtain the terminus of the Trent Canal. The Guide publishes an interesting report that was made in '33 by Robert A. Maingy, on the proposal of canaling from Rice Lake to Port Hope. Mr. Maigny's idea was to construct a canal four feet deep, with locks seventy feet by fourteen and lifts in general of ten feet. He proposed to use wood for the locks, being cheaper, and if it was found desirable later on to enlarge the canal the woodwork could be easily removed. Orton's creek was the point selected for leaving Rice Lake, and the distance to wharf at Port Hope was placed at a fraction less than fourteen miles. The difference of level between the two lakes is 361 feet and 32 hundredth parts of a foot, and Mr. Maigny estimated that the style of canal indicated could be constructed for £101, 426 6 6. Taking this route he reports positively that communication could be opened from Port Hope to Lake Simcoe, for a sum not greater than would be necessary to open navigation from the mouth of the Trent to Rice Lake.

This is the report of Mr. Maigny, and it is said that his levels, measurements and selections of route, made as they were in the depths of the forest, have been found to be most accurate.

Commenting on the desirability of Port Hope as the terminus the Guide gives the following facts:—

From mouth of Otonabee River to Trenton it is 58 1-2 miles.

From Otonabee River to Port Hope via proposed route, 20 miles.

From mouth of Otonabee to Toronto via Trenton, about 170 miles; and via Port Hope, 80 miles.

From Oak Orchard, New York, where there is a splendid harbor and railway connection which brings coal direct from the mines ,to Port Hope 39 miles, making the distance only 59 miles from the mouth of the Otonabee.

From Oak Orchard via Trenton to the Otonabee fully 130 miles.

Estimated cost of canal via Trenton, $6,000,000

Estimated cost of canal via Port Hope, $1,500,000.

On these grounds the Port Hope Council is sending a deputation to Ottawa to urge upon the Government the advantage of having the canal end at Port Hope instead of Trenton.

SOME COVETED SCRAWLS

Rare Autographs For Which Immense Prices Have Been Paid.

The most prized autographs in the world are those of Shakespeare. Only seven are claimed to exist, three signatures to his will (each with a different spelling), two to conveyances of property, one in the folio edition of his plays (doubtful) and one in a Tudor translation of Montaigne. This last is in the British museum and cost over 3,000 guineas.

One thousand guineas was the price given by the late Mr. Alfred Morrison of Carlton House terrace for an autograph letter written by Marie Stuart to the archbishop of Guise. This and two other letters (one to the pope and the other to the king of France) were written by the unfortunate queen of Scots on the morning of her execution. The letter to the French king was destroyed during the days of the terror, while that to the pope is still preserved at the Vatican.

The well known bookseller Bernard Quaritch gave £1,000 for an autograph of Columbus, which was exhibited at the World's fair at Chicago. A Chicago autograph dealer is said to have offered to give $100,000, or over £20,000, for a genuine autograph of Shakespeare if brought to him within a year of making his offer. It was a safe bluff, for since the tragic fate of Chatterton no forger has cared to tackle the quaint scrawl of the Bard of Avon.—Collier's Weekly.

LOVE ON THE FARM.

A potato went on a mash
  And sought an onion bed.
"That's pie for me," observed the squash,
  And all the beets turned red.
"Go away," the onion, weeping, cried;
  "Your love I cannot be.
The pumpkin be your lawful bride,
  You cantaloupe with me."

But onward still the tuber came
  And laid down at her feet;
"You cauliflower by any name,
  And it will smell as wheat;
And I, too, am an early rose,
  And you I've come to see,
So don't turn up your lovely nose,
  But spinachat with me!"

"I do not carrot all to wed,
  So go, sir, if you please,"
The modest onion meekly said,
  "And lettuce, pray, have peas!
Go think that you have never seen
  Myself or smelled my sigh,
Too long a maiden I have been
  For favors in your eye!"

"Ah, spare a cum!" the tuber prayed,
  "My cherryshed bride you'll be;
You are the only weeping maid
  That's currant now with me!"
And as the wily tuber spoke
  He caught her by surprise
And, giving her an artichoke,
  Devoured her with his eyes.

HE WASHED DISHES.

The Hard Job One Boy Had All the Way to Europe.

The girls who have complained in various keys because they had dishes to wash may be glad to hear of a young man who can look at the matter through their eyes, perhaps more so. He had shipped as "boy" on a cattle steamer for Europe because he wanted to save as much as possible on his transportation, and—but the rest of the story sounds better in his own words:

"About 4:30 in the morning I was awakened and told to go to work. I hastily dressed, for the first and last time on board, for during the rest of the voyage I took care not to undress. It seemed scarcely worth while. I arrived on deck and found the steward waiting for me. He showed me into the pantry, introduced me to 'Pants,' as the pantryman was called, and told me that my chief duty during the voyage would be to wash dishes.

"There was already a large pile of dirty dishes waiting to be washed, and I rolled up my sleeves, fixed the hot water and began to work. I had these almost done when another and larger lot was brought in from the dining room. This proved to be the daily programme. I no sooner had one pile washed than others were brought in, and I was never done. I don't think I ever saw so many dishes before in my life, and I hope I never shall again. There were 60 passengers aboard besides the cattlemen, and six meals were served each day. From the dishes that came out to be washed, I think that each passenger must have used at least six plates at a meal."—Detroit Free Press.

Destroying the Point.

Every one knows the man who is notorious for so telling a story as to destroy its point. An English nobleman, Lord P., was noted for his success in thus ruining the prosperity of a story. The author of "Collections and Recollections" exhibits a specimen of his lordship's peculiar art.

Thirty years ago two large houses were built at Albert Gate, London, the size and cost of which seemed likely to prohibit tenants from hiring them. A wag christened them "Malta and Gibraltar because they can never be taken."

Lord P. thought this an excellent joke and ran round the town, saying to every friend he met:

"I say, do you know what they call those houses at Albert Gate? They call them Malta and Gibraltar because they can never let them. Isn't it awfully good?"

Some one told Lord P. the old riddle. "Why was the elephant the last animal to get into the ark?" to which the answer is, "Because he had to pack his trunk."

Lord P. asked the riddle of the next friend he met and gave as the answer, "Because he had to pack his portmanteau."

IN THE JAWS OF A TIGRESS

A BRITISH OFFICERS'S THRILLING EXPERIENCE.

Carried Off by the Wounded Animal and Rescued in the Nick of Time by His Native Companions.

Officers of the British army in India succumb to but few things, but among them is the fascination of a tiger story, says a writer in the New York Herald. A tiger story is their unfailing resource on the long ocean voyage they must regularly make between London and Calcutta. It is a rare treat to be a listener when some grizzled veteran, during the enforced leisure of this homeward journey, holds a smoking-room audience spellbound with a tale of adventure.

Such a treat was mine not so very long ago. We had had a day of monotony aboard. The great steamer squatted on the deep in a laziness as contagious in its effects as that of the ocean's waves. She suffered herself to be pushed along by the impatient machinery in the hold, but was otherwise as motionless as a dozing passenger. Coming on deck after dinner, I noticed an absorbed group, of which Maj. Nevil was the centre, in the smoking-room.

The fame of Maj. Nevil as a tiger hunter extends from one end of India to the other. I entered the smoking-room instantly.

"We were encamped six days' journey from Calcutta," the major was saying. "The forests were as thick and stubborn as the hair on a boy's head. For hours I had struggled through the high grass and over the monstrous roots of trees. At one of the turns in the dry bed of a torrent I halted.

A Thrilling Sight.

"Not many yards ahead were a tiger, his mate and their two cubs. The father, sprawled at full length on the ground asleep. What a magnificent monster! The cubs frisked about like giant kittens. The mother watched them idly. When the cubs collided with her in their sport, she dealt one or the other a playful blow that would have wrecked a bungalow. I shrank into the foliage and contemplated this domestic scene with the fascinated intensity of all who behold a tiger in its pride of freedom. The mother especially absorbed my gaze. Her skin was as clean as a lady's muff. The stripes caught the eye in vivid wales, like the brass on that de kout there. She yawned as I watched her. The depths thus opened threw me into a vertigo. I did not trust myself to steal off for some minutes.

"Within a few days I had organized a hunt. I insisted that the tigress be left to me. My companions were to take care of the rest of the family. We found them, and with little difficulty, in the depths of the jungle. The tigress, when I caught sight of her, had arched herself into the beautiful attitude which precedes a spring. My eye made the straightest of lines from the gun barrel to her head. For one second she and I exchanged a look that made me cold. I fired and she leaped simultaneously.

"A long burn through her fur was The only effect of my bullet. A hanging branch had deflected it. I fired again. I did not lose a minute, a second. She was hit. A wide red stream ran down her breast. Her roars seemed to exhaust the supply of air about us and make it hard to breathe. She rushed ahead, and disappeared in the jungle. We dared not follow through the high grass, but one of my men climbed a tree.

"'I see her master,' he cried. 'She is streched on the ground.'

"'Alive or dead?'

"'Dead.'

"I ran ahead. There lay the tigress, a motionless mass of loud color. As I stood gazing, the great eyelids lifted. She leaped to her feet and beat the ground with one paw. Quick as herself, I aimed my gun at her heart. The bullet barely missed. Once more I let fly. This time I broke a projecting fang from the jaw of the tigress. The bullet emerged just beneath her eye. The beast reared mightily upon her hind legs. There was no time to reload my gun. She gasped right in my face. In desperation I rammed the steel barrel of my weapon between those foaming jaws of hers. She knocked it aside as if it were a match.

"I stood disarmed within reach of her. I lifted my arm in puny defense of my head before her onward rush. She lifted me.

As a Cat Might Lift a Mouse.

"Up the torrent's dry bed she swept, and dashed me, face downward, to the ground. Planting one paw upon my prostrate form she shook me till my skeleton rattled. Her object was to break my spine. The claws of this raging tigress dug into my exposed flesh. Another paw tore my hip. I was bathed in the blood that flowed from her jaws. I lay as helpless as a babe.

"I feigned death. The effort was easy in my abject helplessness, and it saved my life.

"My men had not been inactive. One seized a huge stone and let it fly. The missile struck the tigress full in the face. The others yelled and danced about us. The great beast forgot me for an instant in the fury of this new provocation. Desperation gave me a moment's strength. I picked up my gun and loaded it. One of my men snatched the weapon. I heard two shots, and then I swooned. Upon my return to consciousness the tigress lay lifeless beside me.

"What a release from my agony the prospect of death held out! I lay there impatient to breathe my last. But the men were merciless. They insisted upon contriving a stretcher from the boughs and carrying me 50 miles. The flow of blood seemed to be draining every vein in my body. I adopted heroic measures. A spear was heated red hot and applied to the wounds. There followed two days of agony before that journey ended. Then the doctor said I must lose an arm. The claw of the tigress had swollen it into a great bag of festeration. I preferred death. The meming flesh. But I refused the operber was saved, but it cost me six months of torture."

There was silence in the smoking-room. Every cigar and every pipe had gone out.

"That ended my tiger hunts," concluded the major. "I had had enough."

Successive Waves.

The following waif is going the rounds of the state press: We are told of a young lady in a neighboring town who waved her hand at a stranger, and in three days they were married. Two days later the young lady waved a flatiron at her husband, and the next evening he came home waving a divorce.—Nashville Banner.

The Center of Population.

"Census experts estimate," says the Chicago Post, "that the center of population will be found next year to be in Indiana, close to the Illinois line, at a point not far removed from the town of Vincennes. The last census showed the population center to be between Columbus, Ind., and Cincinnati. The increase in the population of Georgia, Texas, the Indian Territory, Oklahoma, New Mexico and Arizona during the last ten years has been sufficient, it is thought, to offset any increase in the northwest and to possibly pull the center somewhat to the south of the 1890 parallel. The wealth center is thought to be in the neighborhood of Sandusky, O."

Animal Criminals.

A writer in Forest and Stream says that the criminal tendency is manifested to a greater or less extent by all the lower animals, and he has compiled a list of 18 crimes which are commonly committed by birds, beasts or reptiles. The indictment includes murder, parricide, fratricide, suicide, theft, kidnaping, highway robbery, polygamy and drunkenness.

An Indian from Rosemeath toed the mark at the police court Saturday, charged with imbibing too much fire water. He said he got his whisky in Lindsay, where he lost $50, having earned that amount in the shanties. He was let go with a warning.

GLIMPSES OF SOUTH AFRICA.

In Peace and in War—A Splendid Lot of Views

Southern Africa, that enormous expanse of tropically verdant territory extending from the Lambesi River to the Cape of Good Hope, has for a century or more lain dormant to the eyes of the civilized world. Only within the past two decades has public attention been drawn to the wonderful natural resources and mineral wealth of this wild and rugged land, and yet, within this period, marvelous creation of brilliant modern cities have supplanted the desert lands and haunts of savage tribes. The steady march of civilization, the all-pervading ambition to accumulate the wealth of diamonds and gold that lay beneath the crust of this benighted land, each has borne its part in the metamorphosis and heralded to the world the wonderful possibilities of that "Dark Continent" for the energy and enterprise that the 20th century will bring to light.

In no other country of the world has progress been marked with such adversity and strife as Africa. From the time the early Dutch settlers landed in the Cape Colony up to the present, there has existed almost a constant state of warfare; the natives disputing the advance of the Dutch and they in turn resenting the inroads of civilization. In spite of this, so strenuous were the efforts of the colonists in their determination to turn to account the beauties and resources of the land of their adoption, that today they enjoy the fruits of their successes in a paradise of tropical vegetation, a salubrious climate and surrounded by the highest auvantages of intellectuality and luxuries of civilization.

Cape Town is the metropolis and seat of government of the Cape Colony. Its historical past and present is firmly linked in the traditions of the early Dutch and the Huguenots. True, the old forts and buildings of distinctly Dutch architecture still remain but magnificent edifices of the most modern type, beautiful botanical gardens and the public improvements are evidences of the wonderful advance of civilization.

Port Elizabeth is the Liverpool of South Africa. It is a great commercial center, coupled with some of the largest shipping interests in the world; a city of the most modern type, essentially English in character, and possessing some of the largest as well as the most architecturally magnificent buildings and public institutions in South Africa.

Natal is the beautiful, tropical Garden Colony. Its luxurious vegetation and glorious climate, its wide avenue of trees and fine buildings, the native Zulu servants and the picturesque costumes of the Orientals, lend an ear of peace and tranquility, while the marks of civilization and progress are in evidence at every turn.

Johannesburg, the Golden, with its fine architectural creations, public institutions and parks, possesses many attractions that easily place it as the foremost city of South Africa. Its great industry, mining, the apparently inexhaustible veins of gold-bearing quartz, in which upwards of seven hundred millions of dollars are invested, have been the attraction for the thousands and thousands of "Uitlanders," whose "grievances" are substantially the cause for the cruel war between Briton and Boer, the battles of which have been ranked as the "bloodiest of the century."

So great has been the interest manifested in South Africa and the progress of the war, and so eager the thirst for information, coupled with the demand for a Pictorial History incident to the scenes of warfare, that the publication of "Glimpses of South Africa" has been undertaken upon a scale of grandeur, fidelity and completeness never before though of, involving as it has an expense of extraordinary magnitude. In order that the work might be absolutely reliable and thorough in its character, the publishers have contracted for its authorship with Mr. Wymble Flemming, an Afrikander, whose authority upon South African matters is world-widely acknowledged. This gentleman,—born in the Cape Colony, having travelled over nearly every inch of the country south of the Lambesi River and lived in South Africa for nearly thirty years, with an extensive newspaper experience in Africa, England and America, the author of many interesting sketches of South African life and scenery, formerly connected with the consular service at Port Elizabeth, whose comments on the war have been so favorably received by the American press, and whose magnificent collection of photographs will appear in this work,—will present South Africa as it is today, with views of everything of public interest, including most of the important scenes of battle and a graphically illustrated description of each stage in the progress of the war.

This great work is published in serial form, and when complete will comprise the most magnificent collectoin of photographic reproductions of the British-Boer war and South Africa obtainable in this country. Portfolios distributed by the Morning Times. For particulars see announcement on another page of this issue.

KAFFIRS AND BOERS.

Why the Former Hate the Latter, and How They Fight.

"If it is really true that the British have instigated a Kaffir attack upon the Boers, women and children as well as men, as it is reported in some of the papers they will be more successful," says J. Scott Perkins, now of New York, but formerly of the Transvaal, to a New York World reporter.

"The Kaffirs hate the Boers. The Boers have gone further and further into the interior and taken land from the Kaffirs for a few gewgaws, much in the same fashion as have the white men in the United States from the Indians. The Kaffirs realize that. Besides, the Kaffirs have been treated cruelly by the Boers in other ways. They have worked for next to nothing for them, and have been almost tortured by their masters. Kaffir is not the name of a tribe, but is aword used the same as you use the word negro in this country, and means blacks of all tribes. They are exceeding savage and merciless fighters. They will murder the women and children with their assegais. They will not torture them, as they are too bloodthirsty for that. They want to kill and kill quickly. The Matables, up north of the Zulus, are more cruel still. Their section of the country is a resort for escaped criminals of all tribes.

"The Kaffirs cannot handle a gun with good effect, and it is nonsense to talk of the British furnishing them with ammunition. They can create greater consternation with their assegais or native spears. They are terrible fighters and can throw these assegais from great distances accurately. The men do not work, but spend their time taking care of their bodies, exercising for pleasure and health and hunting. Their war dance is a grand spectacle.

"The women do all the work, even to making the pig iron from the ore and forging the assegais. There are large deposits of iron and copper, as well as gold in Africa, and the women take the iron ore and improvise a smelter. They cut a whole in the ground, build a fire of charcoal, put in the ore, cover it up with flat stones, bark and earth. Then they have a bellows which they make from a bull hide and fill with air. This is very large. They insert the mouth into a small opening at one side of this primitive furnace, and the iron is melted from the ore as well as in any blast furnace of this country. It is then taken out and beaten by one stone upon another until it is the right shape and size and sharpened on a piece of sandstone. The women do all this work, making all the assegais, knives and even razors. The men do absolutely nothing but amuse themselves.

"A picture of a Zulu native razor shows the beaten and sharpened blade, with a mahogany handle fastened on by weaving a fiod wire of copper about it to hold the two pieces of wood together. The sheath for the blade is also of two pieces, carved to fit, and with a wooden loop on one side carved out of the solid piece to run a hide string through so as to hang it it from the neck when going on a trip. The plaited copper wire strands bound around the sheaths are ornamental as well as useful. This wire is obtained from the traders, and probably cost an elephant tuck or two. Their medium of exchange consists of tusks of hippopotamus, rhinocerous and elephant, and also hides and ostrich feathers. Thew sew the skirts with bone needles, carved out of bones of animals or out of ivory, using strands of hide for thread.

"The Zulus are a strong tribe, and have swallowed up eight or ten other tribes, and keep at it eveer harvest time, rushing in on their neighbors and taking the crops, cattle, goats and all the young women. They are treacherous, although some of the richer men of high rank have gone to school at Cape Town and are quite well educated. Many of them are bright and intelligent naturally.

"But there is another phase of the question. The Boer women are not altogether defenseless. While still children the Boers teach their girls as well as boys to handle a gun, and the Boer women are never too old to shoot straight. So that unless they are surprised by the Kaffirs they will be able to show a pretty good fight. They are as courageous as combative as the men, and if need be could fight with the best of the Boer soldiers. There is no more determined and stubborn race of people on earth than the Boers. They will never give up as long as they have a shot unfired or the strength left to fire it. Of their fighting qualities there can be no question."

THE OCEAN GRAVEYARD.

Just What Sable Island Is—Where It Lies—Its Fight against The Sea.

"Sable Island belongs to Nova Scotia, is 145 miles from Halifax and 85 miles east of Cape Canso," writes Gustav Kobbe in Ainslee's for February. "It is a treeless, shrubless waste, seamed by wind and wave and of ever-changing aspect. A cone-shaped hill near the east end, once a mere undulation of sand, is now over a hundred feet high, and is still growing. Other hillocks are gradually being mowed away by storms. The hillocks are liable to be undermined so swiftly and swept out of existence that they are carefully watched from the various stations on the island, and, there being no certainty how far an inroad of the sea will extend after each successful attack. Even the coarse grass of the island grows in a different manner from that of the mainland. It does not bear seed, but shoots up from roots which run along under the sand. During the winter the sand is blown over theg rass, and buries it sometimes three or four feet deep. But the hardy blades grow up the next season, as if the island sands had protected them from the cold of winter in order to make them all the stronger.

"The island itself is fighting for self-preservation. It seems as if it drew ships into its fatal embrace as rallying points for its loose and shifting sand, thus to protect itself by a loose bulwark of wrecks against annihilation by the sea. Tradition says that when Sable Island was discovered by Cabot in 1447, it was eighty miles long and ten miles wide. In 1802, when a rescue station was established there, it was only forty miles long. Since then it has shrunk to little more than twenty miles in length, and in width it is only a mile at its widest. Within twenty-eight years the western end lost seven miles. Shoals over which the ocean now surges are pointed out as former sites of light-houses. One of these was so swiftly undermined by the sea that it had to be abandoned with the greatest precipitation. The spot where one stood the superintendent's house is now under two fathoms of water.

"The island, rapidly diminishing as its western end, is slightly gaining at its eastern. Slowly, like a ship dragging its anchor, it is moving eastward. Will it ever reach the edge of the shoals, stand tottering on the brink of the abyss till it receives its coup-de-grace and plunge over the submarine bank forever into the depths? Unfortunately, its end will probably be less dramatic. There is good ground for believing that this gray sand bar will slowly wear away until it becomes another submerged shoal added to an ambuscade already some sixty miles in length—for aline of breakers extends sixteen miles from one end of the island and twenty-eight miles from the other."

ADVERTISE IN THE MORNING TIMES.

LIVELY LAKEFIELD.

Latest Budget of News From Peterborough's Northern Suburb.

The Curling Club sent two rinks to Peterborough on Monday to meet Bobcaygeon in the preliminary round of the District Cup Competition. Mr. S. Strickland's rink held their own well, but the tough ice was too much for R. C. Strickland and his men and they were snowed under.

The annual fancy dress carnival was held in the rink on Tuesday evening. There was a good attendance of skaters in costume, but the crowd of spectators was small. The Lakefield band was in attendance and rendered selections of music at intervals. The rink was prettily decorated for the occasion, amongst other adornments beig a number of Chinese lanterns, kindly lent by Grafton & Co. Following is a list of prize winners—

Best dressed gentleman—R. Turner.

Best comic dress, gentleman—C. Chowen.

Best fancy dress, boy—G. Dunn.

Best comic dress, boy—B. Crombie.

Best fancy dress, lady—Miss N .V. Fox.

Best comic dress, lady—Miss Payne.

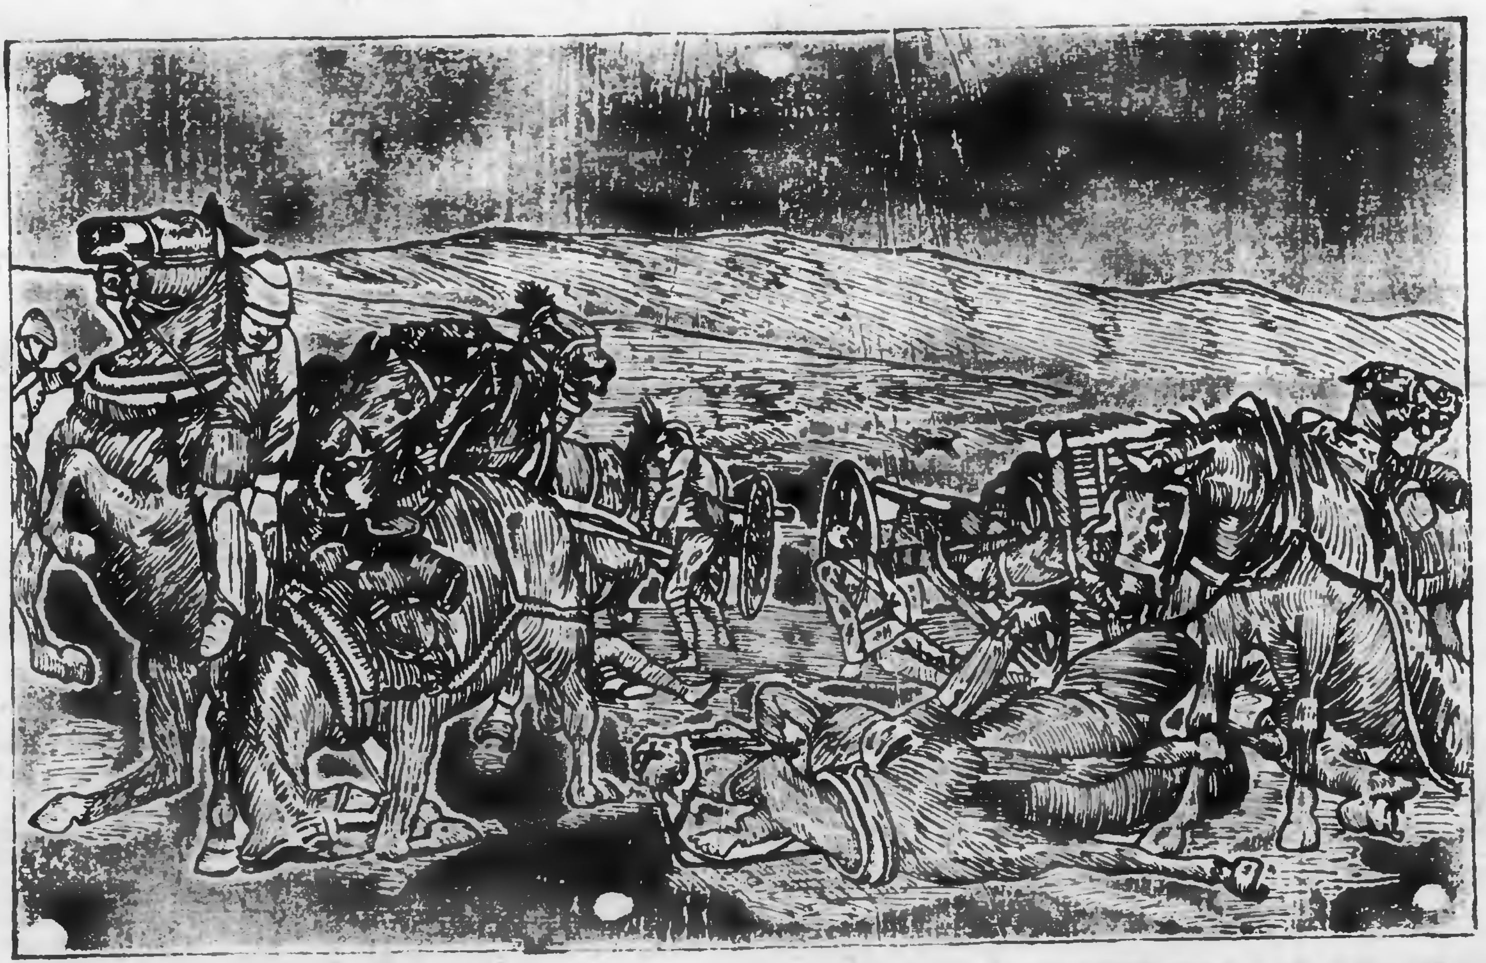
Best fancy dress, girl—Miss G. Murduff.

Best comic dress,g irl—Miss E. Watson.

The lack of snow undoubtedly prevented a large number from attending.

For some three weeks past a strong committee has been making arrangements for an entertainment in aid of the Red Cross Fund, and the result of their efforts was saw on Tuesday evening in the Town Hall. The decorations were most elaborate, the entire hall being a mass of flags, bunting and evergreens, the proscenium of the stage, surmounted by a portrait of the Queen, being especially noticeable, while the white drop curtain with a large red cross in the centre was very effective. The full programme is appended of the various items. It is difficult to select any for special mention, it being evident that all who appeared on the platform were heart and soul in accord with the object of the entertainment, and determined to evince their patriotism and loyalty by doing their utmost in their several parts. The tableaux were really beautiful pictures, the Red Cross group being especially effective, while the representations of the "Three Old Maids of Lee" fairly brought the house down. The various singers were heartily applauded, and "Box and Cox" proved amusing to the appreciative audience. The Town Hall was filled to its utmost capacity and at the close Reeve Hull announced that the whole performance would be repeated on the following night for the benefit of those who were unable to gain admittance. The attendance was a record for the village, every seat and standing room being occupied long before the stated hour for commencement.

HOW THE BRITISH LOST THEIR GUNS ON THE TUGELA.



SABLE ISLAND PONIES.

Resemble Those Found on The Sculptures of Ninevah Island Once Infested with Rabbits—Rats That Desert Sinking Vessels.

"The story of animal life on Sable Island is strange. Roaming the sandy wastes are herds of wild ponies guarded by patriarchal stallions. These ponies resemble the horses on the sculptures of Nineveh, and approach the beholder seemingly out of the framework of antiquity. They are stocky and remarkable for their long manes, which in instances have been known to grow to the length of three yards. These ponies are the remnant of a stock thought to have been left by some Portuguese fishermen—"Portingalls" the old records quaintly call them—who touched at the island on their fishing expeditions at even an earlier date than the Marquis de la Roche. At one time there were from four hundred to five hundred wild ponies on the island, but their number has been decreased by exportation, the severity of the winters and, some people think, by the importation of improved, domesticated stallions, which have made the stock less hardy and consequently more susceptible to death from exposure. There are now between eighty and a hundred wild ponies and about thirty for domestic use. Mounted on ponies, the life savers gallop over the dunes and among the hillocks on patrols, and the life boats are drawn to the scenes of shipwreck by teams of five ponies, three at the shaft and two leaders. Some of the wild ponies are sent to Halifax every year or two, and are sold at auction at an average price of from $15 to $18.

The "Portingalls" also stocked the island with cattle, which increased so rapidly that people from the main land made expeditions to the island and returned with enough live stock to make their trips most profitable. At one time the island was quite overrun with rabbits. Then two rat-infested Norwegian vessels were wrecked there and the rats, swimming ashore, began to exterminate the rabbits and to attack the government stores. Cats were then imported from Halifax to kill the rats, and after a while the cats increased so in number that dogs were imported to kill the cats. Latterly the island was again overrun with rats from wrecked vessels, and another cargo of cats was imported from Halifax. Once there were pigs on the island, but they have been exterminated because they had become ghouls feasting on the remains of castaways. Death in its most horrid forms is always the burden of Sable Island's story.

The Old Man's Parting Advice.

"Now, John," said the old man to his son, "you do look fine in them soldier clothes, and you'll just play hub with them Boers, when you meet 'em, if you get half a chance; but, afore you go, I want to give you some advice. I ain't no general, but just a plain farmer, the same as them Boers is, and mebbe I've got onto a few ideas that'ud be worth puttin' in your valice, so's you could kind o' browse on' em while crossing the ocean.

"I've read a lot in the papers about this here war, and as soon as Iknowed you was goin' out there I kind o' took notes.

"In the fust place don't go out fightin' them Boers at night. I don't know nothin' about war, but if I was them I wouldn't sleep at nights, and they don't do it either. Somebody's told the British wrong about that.

"If you're out on the plain, and the Boers come at you when there's a nice, quiet hill not far away, don't you rush for that there kopje with the idea that it'll be a good place to fight from. That's what them there kopjes are fur just to fool you ,John. The quieter it is the more certain you be of that kopje. Howsemdever, if there's a Boer standing out big as a schoolhouse on that there kopje, that's to fool you, too, and he's the only one theer. But if there ain't the sign of one on it that means the hill's just alive with 'em, all laying for you. Leastways, that's how I'd use them hills, if I was a Boer. It sort o' stands to reason, John.

"A man can't throw stones when he's lying down, but don't you forget that you're out there to shoot a gun ,and you can do it better lying down than standing up.

"Turn the Boers' flank every chance you get. As near as I can make out, everybody in Canada thinks that 'ud be a good idea

"Another thing, John; don't you go and let the Boers pick out all the battlefields and send you word when they're ready. There's lots of room so's both of you can do some of the picking. If there ain't enough room in Natal, why, don't be skeery about spoiling the Boer crops in the Transvaal.

"If a Boer shoots you in the shoulder when you're twenty feet from him, and surrenders when you're nine feet away, just you go on and push the plowshare through him, same's if you hadn't heerd him, John. If he looks pained, and says he'll write to the papers, you tell him you can't understand Dutch, unless it's spoke slow, and you've time to spell it over inyour mind.

"And don't be in too big a hurry about lickin' the Boers. There's a whole lot of other days coming, as the hired man said to me when I jumped on him about not getting through with his work. Speaking of the hired man, what did I do when I had a lawsuit with one of 'em. I just made the case drag along until his cash give out. Same way with this here war. Don't crowd too fast, John, and the Boers will run out of ammunition, unless they keep getting hold of some of ours.

"Well, they're waitin' for you, John. Good-bye, I know I'm forgettin' lots of things I wanted to say ,but mebbe I'll write ye. I'd ruther ye'd stuck to the school teachin', but mebbe this job's got to be did, and I ain'tsaying nothing against yer goin'."

House of Refuge.

The matter of establishing a house of refuge for the town and county does not seem to be gaining much headway. A committee of the Town Council waited on the County Council, and after discussing the matter, a resolution was passed appointing a committee to gather information and statistics in regard to it, and report at the June session. It is safe to assume that the matter is in a fair way of being shelved for some years at least.

Steel Combs.

A man who saw in a sidewalk showcase some steel combs and who wondered what steel combs could be used for found upon inquiry that they were used by furriers in combing furs. There was one of these combs that looked much like a comb of the ordinary kind, coarse toothed for half its length and finer toothed the other half. And then there was one comb that had teeth for half its length, the solid end serving as a handle.

There are other steel combs that are used for a similar purpose, as steel combs made to comb dogs with. The dog comb looks somewhat like the fine toothed comb in its general shape, but it is larger, toothed on one side only and coarser toothed than the so called fine comb. The untoothed side combs of this sort are used on various kinds of dogs, including, for instance, long haired dogs like the French poodle.—New York Sun.

To Invade the Capital.

The famers owning drowned lands bordering on the Otonabee propose to visit Ottawa and wait on the Government with a view of getting remuneration for the land, which, it is claimed, is under water on account of the building of the Hastings dam. A meeting to make final arrangements will be held in the Council Chamber on Saturday afternoon.

ASHBURNHAM HAPPENINGS.

Mrs. J. H. Smith has returned home after a month's visit in Toronto.

The public school concert last week netted $25. This will be used in erecting a flag staff and Mrs. Rogers will donate a flag.

Complaints come to us that the students attending the Collegiate have to pay excessive fees $25 each per year, certainly there is reason for complaint. If the students would go to either Lindsay or Norwood, they would not be taxed half that amount and would be as well taught. Ashburnham's suicidal policy of remaining a municipality by itself will drive people from the town, who is responsible?

The Union revival services in Mark st church, conducted by Revs. J. E. Moore, S. J. Shorey and D. O. Crossley commenced last evening. Rev. Mr. Shorey preached with power.

Master Wallie Wood, son of J. Wood, J.P. has been ill for several days.

A large number of Ashburnhamites are taking the Times for the sake of getting war news for breakfast.

Should be Fixed.

There is a bad crossing in front of the Presbyterian church, which should be altered. When the new walk was being laid at this place The Times pointed out the fact that it was out of all proportion to the grade of the street, and suggested that it be lowered. This was not done, and the result is that this spot is particularly dangerous especially after dark. The council should either have the granolithic walk lowered or the street raised. Already one accident has occurred and more serious accidents is liable to happen at any time.

John Nugent, Druggist, Peterboro' Ont.

A Couple of Bad Falls.

Mrs. Gopette, who lives on the corner of King and Reid street, slipped and fell on the pavement in front of Ormond & Walsh's drug store, and received painful injuries. She was unconscious for some time. Another bad fall occurred at the Presbyterian church corner last night, when an elderly man named Black was the victim. At this place there is a steep descent from the high pavement to the crossing (which never should have been) and it was on this slope that the accident occurred. The unfortunate man was removed home in a delivery sleigh, in a dazed condition.

The Moving Pictures.

The entertainment given under the auspices of the George street Methodist church Sunday school in the Opera House last night drew a large crowd. The pictures consisted of views mostly of a military character and were accompanied by explanations by Mr. W. E. Ramsey.

During the evening music was provided by the Sabbath school orchestra which showed careful training and received much well deserved applause from the large audience present.

A CONTRACTOR WRECKED.

Constitution Undermined by Nervous Complications.—South American Nervine Worked a Complete Cure.

Nervous prostration and liver complications so afflicted J. W. Dinwoody, contractor, Campbellford, that physically he was almost a total wreck. His druggist recommended South American Nervine. A few doses gave him great relief, induced sound sleep, and a few bottles built him up and cured him so that today he is as strong and healthy as ever. Sold by Ormond & Walsh.

Canadian Patents.

E. G. Siggers, Patent Lawyer, Washington, D.C., U.S.A., reports the following patents granted by the United States Patent Office, Jan. 23, 1900, to inventors residing in the Dominion of Canada. He will mail copy of specification and drawings of any patent for 10 cents in stamps—D. P. Cory, Consecon, card holder for freight cars; H. L. Gulline, Granby, collarGranby, collar (2 patents) W. Smith, Alberni, night lamp; W. H. Walton, Brantford, loom shuttle.

She Criticises the Way of Serving Grape-Nuts

"I think you made a mistake in your first receipe on the Grape-Nuts package, viz. to put the food, dry, into a saucer and pour cream next to it.

"We like it much better by covering it with rich milk or cream and set on the back part of the range to heat, not boil. This swells the granules, and it is really most delicious."

This illustrated the variety in human taste. Some like Grape-Nuts crisp, dry and "chewable." Others, soft, hot, and almost mush-like. Either way, the food can be depended upon as thoroughly cooked at the factory and ready for instant service, hot or cold. Hot by pouring hot cream, milk or water over it. The health value of Grape-Nuts is beyond computation.

ULLER IS NOW HOPEFUL OF ENTERING LADYSMITH WITHIN A WEEK

OPEFUL WORDS FROM BULLER TO HIS TROOPS

His Opinion the British Have Gained Key of Road to Ladysmith, and Lost Nothing.

EN. FRENCH HAS ANOTHER SMALL ENGAGEMENT.

Shelled the Enemy, Who Replied With Artillery and Infantry Fire The British Were Well Protected and Suffered But Little, Ten Men Being Wounded.

ensburg, Cape Colony, Friday Jan. 26.

n. French reconnoitred yesterday beyond Bastards Nek with a force of Hussars, Inniskillings, four guns of the Royal Artillery, Mounted Infantry, Yorkshire, Wiltshire and a portion of the Essex regiment. Turning to the northeast he approached the Boer position at Ryiet fontein nine miles beyond Colesburg on the wagon bridge road, where the enemy have been fortifying with a view of falling back when they evac uate Colesburg. Cautiously approaching, General French shelled the enemy, who replied with artillery and infantry fire. The British who were well protected suffered but little. An officer and nine men were wounded, one of the latter of whom has since died and three men are missing. As the Boers were found in great force confirming the reported reinforcement, and in a strong position, General French discontinued the attack and returned to camp.

London, Jan. 31

despatch to the Times from Frere Camp dated Friday, Jan. 26 and describing the capture of Spion Kop says: It is impossible to exaggerate the strategic importance of the hill. It was held by the Boers in weakly fashion only because Gen. Warren's attack during the last three days had been over on the extreme left, two miles away. The despatch adds but little to what has already been cabled.

London, Jan. 31

he Cape Town correspondent of the Daily Mail telegraphing yesterday says: Gen. Buller yesterday, Monday read the following message from the Queen to Sir Charles Warren's force:

"I must express my admiration of the troops during the past trying week, especially of those regiments you specify and of the accomplishment of your arduous march."

General Buller told the men that they ought not to think because they had retired from their position that all their work was of no avail. On the contrary, in his opinion they had gained the key of the road to Ladysmith in which he hoped to be within a week."

TWO DAYS' CASUALTIES.

London, Jan. 30.—Gen. Buller reports that the casualties to the non-commissioned officers and men in the two actions of Jan. 20 and 21, were 17 killed, 233 wounded and 6 missing.

This raises Buller's losses within ten days to 1168.

The above list evidently refers to the fighting of Saturday and Sunday week, when General Warren was fighting his way towards Spion Kop. The losses around that position are apparently not made out.

LITTLETON'S BRIGADE.

London, Jan. 30.—Gen. Lyttleton's brigade is still in its original position at Potgieter's Drift, showing that part of General Buller's force are still north of the Tugela River.

SITUATION OF CAMPAIGN.

London, January, 30.—The campaign in South Africa has entered upon another stage. Generals Buller and Methuen stand checkmated, the one within sight of Ladysmith, the other equally near to Kimberley. The almost unprecedent spectacle is afforded of two British armies held stationary for weeks with their objective poitn less than twenty miles away over the hills. Two other armies of lesser strength are practically inactive in Northern Cape Colony, but it is probable that their inactivity is premediated. It is reasonable to suppose that their purpose is to relieve the strain upon Ladysmith and Kimberley by keeping the enemy around Colesburg and Stormberg in play and thus rendering it necessary for reinforcements to be sent them from the north, whereas their dispersion would simply enable large numbers of them to swell the opponents of Buller and White. The Boers know perfectly well that once Stormberg and Colesberg are taken and they have fallen back over the Orange River it would be some time before the British would be in a position to follow up their success and that during the interval they could leave their southern border lightly protected and add their weight to other operations. Apart from their moral effect, successes achieved by French and Gatacre at the present moment would be of little value, for they could not be followed up by an invasion of the Boer territory.

Indications are that Lord Roberts has recognized this fact and that he is concentrating a large proportion of the troops now arriving in Africa in the neighborhood of these two generals so that when the moment comes they may strike and their movement north ward may be followed up and strongly supported. But the invasion of the Orange Free State—the only opening visible on the warlike chessboard —will not take place for weeks, for many things must be prepared beforehand in the shape of transport and a large army of men. If all the troops now on the sea were to take part in such an advance there would scarcely be sufficient for the lines of communication, in the enemy's country, would swallow up half the army corps. There may therefore be a protracted period of inertness all along the line, unless Methuen or Buller, throwing prudence to the winds, attempt the impossible and under the aegis of Mars, who sometimes favors mad projects, achieves an unexpected victory.

The list of casualties sustained by General Buller during the week's fighting which followed his abortive flanking movement confirms the wisdom of his decision to fall back over the Tugela. If out of about 20,000 men actually at the front he lost over 900, it is apparent that a continuation of the advance upon Ladysmith, in defiance of losses, would have left General Buller without any army and established a state of affairs worse by far than the impasse now prevailing. Men, more men, is the key to the situation. The Napoleonic tactics of hurling overwhelming masses of infantry upon the enemy's position and inviting immense losses are the ones which must be adopted and which alone will succeed so far as the reconquest of Natal is concerned. It is also a question whether similar tactics would not be essential in the invasion of the Orange Free State. A line of rifle pits, even though dug in the level veldt, might prove as hard to capture as the Spion Kop position when defended by such riflemen as the Boers.

The fact that General Lyttleton's brigade still remains on the north side of the Tugela holding Potgieter's drift may easily be explained. Just as the brigade occupied Potgieter's in order to cover the crossing of the river by Warren at another point by holding the Boers in front, so it was necessary for it to hold the drift in order to cover the retreat. Moreover, if it is the intention of Buller to repeat his attempt to reach Ladysmith via Acton Holmes at some future time and to hold on in the meantime at Springfield it is not likely that he will abandon the drift, which offers an easy passage of the river, and may be of the utmost value. On the other hand, if Buller is falling back to Chieveley, which is improbable, the holding of the drift is necessary to protect his rear.

TWO KILLED, TEN WOUNDED.

London, Jan. 30.—A despatch from Pretoria, dated Saturday, January 27 gives the Boer version of the Rietfontein reconnaisance referred to in the despatches of January 28, when the British losses were two men killed and ten wounded.

TO ACT AGAINST FRENCH.

Lorenzo Marquez, Jan. 29.—Col. Mareuil de Villebois, the French officer serving with the Boers, in leaving Colenso for Colesberg, where he will take the field against Gen. French.

POPE LEO IS POWERLESS.

New York, Jan. 30.—Pope Leo is unable to offer his good office to bring about a truce between Great Britain and the Transvaal Reepublics, says a cable to the World from Rome, and he has so notified the Queen of Holland, who asked him to use his influence in this direction. The Pope declares that no war has caused him so much bitterness of mind as the struggle between England and the Boers. He adds: "This war is inspired neither by ideals of civilization nor by just national interests. I can do nothing but pray for the dead."

FOR STRATHCONA'S HORSE.

Ottawa, Jan. 30.—On Monday next officers of the North-West Mounted Police will commence recruiting for Strathcona's Horse at the following police posts in the Territories: Moosomen, Regina, Maple Creek, Medicine Hat, Calgary, MacLeod, Lethbridge, Pincher Creek, Edmonton, Prince Albert, Battleford, Winnipeg, Portage la Prairie, Virden and Brandon. In British Columbia: Golden, Revelstoke, Vernon, Kamloops, Fort Steele, Nelson and Vancouver. Hon. F. W. Borden said to-night that the first train will start from Calgary about February 10 or 12, and the second not later than the 15th.

All From the West.

The three squadrons of 160 men each will be recruited respectively from Manitoba and the eastern part of Assiniboia, the eastern slope of the Rockies and the central Territories and British Columbia. Half of the British Columbia squadron will come from the southern portion of the province and half from the country served by the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway. There will be room at Ottawa, the point of centralization of the mounted rifles, for about thirty good armorers, drivers and mechanics, who would be useful in the field. It is also intended to pick up in Ottawa a number of surveyors who have practised in the North-West and who are capable horsemen and good shots. Some few officers may be chosen from Manitoba. Inspector Strickland will be brought from the Yukon, and Inspector Jarvis, who is now in charge of the customs post on the Dalton Trail, will also be ordered east.

BRITISH ADVANCE ON BLOEMFONTEIN.

Gens. Kelly-Kenny. Gatacre and French Will March on to Free State Capital.

London, Jan. 30, 2.25 p.m.—There is almost a complete absence of news from British sources in South Africa up to this hour. The only reliable dispatch of any importance is a confirmation of the report that General Kelly-enny, commanding the sixth division, has occupied Thebus, about midway between General French at Rensburg and General Gatacre at Sterkstroom. From this it is deducted that a juncture of the three forces is being made, preparatory to the beginning of the plan of advance on Blomfontein.

A despatch from Pretoria, dated Saturday, Jan. 27th, gives the Boer version of the Pietfontein reconnaissance referred to in the dispatches of January 28th, when the British losses were two men killed and ten wounded.

The Associated Press learns that Gen. Lyttleton's brigade is still in its original position at Potgieter's drift, showing that part of General Buller's force are still north of the Tugela River.

IRISH DISSENSION IS ENDED AT LAST.

They Will Act Together and Take Advantage of England's Embarrassments.

London, Jan. 30.—All sections of the Irish Nationalists were absent from the opening session of Parliament, owing to their attendance at a meeting in committee room sixteen, room fifteen being avoided owing to its association with previous discords of the party. Mr. Timothy Harrington, member for the Harbor division of Dublin, presided. The attendance included Messrs. Dillon, Healey, John Redmond and many of their followers.

Messrs. Harrington and Redmond urged that the time had come to restore unity in the ranks of the parliamentary representatives of Irish Nationalism, Mr. Redmond described the prestige of Great Britain as practically shattered, and said there seemed to be no better time for promoting union upon a sound and enduring basis, coupled with a policy of unity in combat and entire independence of all the English political parties. He then moved a resolution declaring at an end the division of the Irish Nationalist representatives, and that henceforth they should act together as one united party.

The resolution was carried unanimously.

FRENCH AND GATACRE CONTINUE ACTIVE.

Boers Allege the British Losses to be Heavy and Their Own Extremely Light.

Pretoria, Saturday, Jan. 27.—A dispatch from Colesburg, Cape Colony, says Commandant Delarey reports that a large body of British advanced Thursday, Jan. 25th, and be attacked them, causing the British to retire, after suffering severe loss. The Boer casualties were two men slightly wounded.

General Grobbler reports heavy fighting since daybreak, the British in great force endeavoring to surround the Boer positions. General Schoeman hastened to the assistance of General Grobler. Gen. Schoeman returned this evening and reports that the British were repulsed and that the Boers maintained their positions. The Boer loss was four men slightly and one man severely wounded. The British loss is not known, but must have been severe.

The bombardment of Kimberley continues.

The Boer forces are reported quiet.

TO TAKE MEASURES OF OFFENCE AND DEFENCE

A Largely Increased Expenditure on Account of of War and for Adequate Defence.

A TRIBUTE TO COURAGE OF EMPIRE'S SOLDIERS.

Significant Language of the Queen's Speech at Opening of British Parliament—Rosebery Retires From Presidency of Scottish Liberal Association.

London, Jan. 30.—The most significant paragraph in the speech from the throne is that which deals with defensive measures. It has, of course, been a foregone conclusion that aPrliament would be asked to sanction a large grant to continue the war in South Africa. It appears, however, that the Governement, in deference to newspaper criticisms, which called for the immediate commissioning of all inactive vessels in the navy to guard against contingencies, is about to embark in some new naval programme, the nature of which is not definitely made known. It is likely, however, that new warships will be put on the stocks and that a considerable number of others will be put into commission, so that England will soon have her first line of defence in a position to guard from the outside the shores at present so weakly protected from within owing to the exigencies of war. The reference to the unanimous manner in which Indian Princes have offered troops to the Empire, reveals a bright spot in British history, second only to the action of the colonies. These have shown, at any rate, that the Empire is built upon the surest basis, that of good will and contentment produced by wise government. Such a consolidated Empire has no need to fear attacks from without.

ROSEBERY RETIRES.

London, Jan. 30.—Lord Rosebery has notified the Executive Committee of the Scottish Liberal Association that he will not be a candidate for re-election as President of that organization. It is said his action is in consequence of the recent meeting of the Association at Aberdeen voting confidence in the Liberal League in the House of Commons in Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman.

COMMENT IN BERLIN.

Berlin, Jan. 30.—The latest news from South Africa is unfavorably commented upon by the German papers.

The National Zeitung says—"The British position around Ladysmith is now untenable. Either Lord Roberts must await reinforcements or remove his strategy centre elsewhere, abandoning Ladysmith."

The Lokal Angeiger says—"The defeat at Spion Kop is likely to become of decisive importance for the whole war."

The Kreuz Zeitung says—"It requires a good piece of British conceit still to believe in an approximately favorable issue of the war; but whom the gods would destroy they first make mad."

The Vossische Zeitung says—"The best prepared and most carefully planned British operation during the war has now ended in complete fiasco. What is there now to prop up the sinking prestige of world power? To talk about another 100,000 men is rubbish, and the few battalions that can be raised will not change the issue of the campaign."

TROOPS NOW ON THE SEA.

London, Jan. 30.—Twenty thousand, two hundred and twenty-two men and 155 guns are at sea. Eleven thousand infantry and 9,000 cavalry, including 5,000 yeomanry, are practically ready to embark. Therefore, the Government, without doing more, can place at the disposal of Lord Roberts 40,000 additional men, and 156 guns. The further purposes of the War Office are supposed to embrace somewhere in the neighborhood of 50,000 more men. As the indications is that candidates will be rather scarce, the War Office will issue orders for the reservists who were found unfir at the previous mobilization examinations to report for further examination. Applications for cavalry service are still freely offering as yeomanry.

Gen. Buller's operations has cost 912 men, so far officially reported within 10 days.

The total casualties of the war, compiled from official reports, are 9,533.

MAY ATTACK LADYSMITH.

London, Jan. 30.—Mr. Spencer Wilkinson, in the Morning Post, says—Defeat is bitter, but it is right to face it and to take responsible means to turn it into victory. It is wrong to try to conceal it from ourselves.

"The initiative is now again with the Boer commander, and the question is, what will he do next? He will either act against Ladysmith or against General Buller. In the latter case pursuit will be useless, for when the British force is once across the river again it would be impracticable, for a small rear guard could prevent pursuit. Much more probable would be an attack on Chieveley before the return of the main body. Either that or a fresh assault on Ladysmith may be recorded in a day or two."

Mr. Wilkinson then proceeds to point out the groundlessness of fears that strategic suggestions made in England may be useful to the enemy. He says that the censorship stands in the way of any such benefit to the Boers, and that, moreover, if the Boer generals want suggestions they can easily get them from the German press.

As such matters are likely to come under the attention of Parliament, he discusses at length questions of artillery and the like, concluding as follows—

"The measures now urgently needed are the development of the military resources of the country by the initiative of the Government. With 100,000 men in the field and 50,000 to follow, the moment has come to push on the training of all troops left at home and to raise further troops to supply the further needs of the campaign."

PREPARING FOR THE ADVANCE.

London, Jan. 30.—The report that General Kelly-Kenny, commanding the sixth division, has occupied Thebus about midway between General French at Rensburg, and Gen. Gatacre at Sterkstroom, is confirmed. From this it is deducted that a juncture of the three forces is being made, preparatory to the beginning of the plan of advance on Bloemfontein.

SERIOUS BLOW TO BOERS.

New York, Jan. 30.—The Evening World has the following—

London, Jan. 30.—It is reported from Durban that the Boer arsenal at Johannesburg has been destroyed. The news was brought by a refugee from Johannesburg, who says the arsenal was blown up on Jan. 20th.

The loss is said by military experts to be irreparable to the Boers, as all their shells were made at that place. It was, in fact, the only shell factory in the Transvaal, and, owing to the practical closing of Delagoa Bay, was the last resort for material for the big guns at Ladysmith and elsewhere. If the news is true it explains the reluctance of the Boers to use their artillery in the last few days.

Many reports have filtered through of their shortness of big gun ammunition. It is not known whether the destruction of the arsenal was a deliberate act of a British spy or an accident. In any event the loss is a great blow to the Boers.

THE FORCES IN NATAL.

London, Jan. 30.—A Spearman's Camp despatch says that McDonald's cavalry force returned to the south side of the Tugela on Saturday. Lyttleton's brigade is still at Potgietier's drift in its original position.

WHITE TO CUT HIS WAY OUT.

New York, Jan. 30.—Officers who served under General White in India says a London cable to the World, declare that the commander of the Ladysmith garrison will make a strong effort, and at any cost, to cut his way out, if he suspects that an order to surrender is about to reach him.

Military experts are inclined to think that the British at Ladysmith, on the Tugela, in Kimberley, and at Modder River will be left to work out their own salvation, and hold as many Boers as possible, while the Cape Town reinforcements are moving toward Gen. French's position.

NOTICE FROM TRANSVAAL.

London, Jan. 30.—A Cape Town despatch states the Government of the Transvaal has notified the Cape Government that all cable communications will be suspended during the continuance of censorship.

AN APPEAL FOR DECENCY.

New York, Jan. 30.—General Russell A. Alger, who is in the city for a few days, is quoted as saying:

"It is un-American and unpatriotic for an American citizen to seek to stir up division among the American people as to pro-Boer and anti-Boer, and as to pro-English and anti-English. The English Government and the English people kept their hands off and their mouths closed in 1898, when we were fighting with Spain, and I believe this country ought to be as decent in 1900 as England was two years ago."

MAY LOSE DELAGOA BAY.

London, Jan. 30.—The Lisbon correspondent of the Standard says: "I hear that the indemnity to be awarded Great Britain in the Delagoa Bay arbitration will be so large that Portugal will be obliged to make over the railway and that port of Lorenzo Marques to the British Government."

DISCREDITED IN LONDON.

London, Jan. 30.—The reported Delagoa Bay Railroad decision is discredited in London, where nothing concerning the decision is known. It is pointed out that in any case it is not likely Portugal will be obliged to transfer the railroad and port to Great Britain, as there are plenty of people only too anxious to pay the amount of the indemnity in return for such a concession.

Morning Times

PETERBOROUGH, JANUARY 25, 1900

NEW YORK'S GREAT TUNNEL RAILROAD.

The contract has been let for the construction of the underground four-track railway the entire length of Manhattan island from the Battery to Harlem. The city provides the money to pay the cost of the work. The contractor builds and equips the road and operates it for fifty years. At the end of that time it becomes the property of the city and will be operated by municipal employes.

John B. McDonald of New York city was the successful bidder for the contract. He offered to construct and equip the road for $35,000,000, to operate it for the term required by law, to pay the city a specified share of the gross receipts and to hand the property in good condition over to the city at the end of the time named. The only other responsible bidder asked $39,000,000 to build and equip the road. There was another bidder with an offer of $32,000,000, but he did not inclose the proper security to bind his bid. At almost the last minute he rushed out to get the certified check for $150,000 which must accompany a bid. He was gone a quarter of an hour, and when he got back the contract had been let.

A few years ago, when the plan for the underground railway in New York was first considered, the plans offered by contractors involved an estimated expenditure of $100,000,000 for the work. This shows how rapidly the science of engineering and of construction has advanced. The vast and complicated machines now used in excavation perform the work for one-third what it would have cost ten years ago. Probably a tunnel of fifteen miles long could now be built under Lake Michigan to tap a new source of water supply for one-half the cost of the four-mile tunnel built several years ago. A canal at Nicargua connecting the oceans could be built for much less than the lowest estimates a few years ago.

The New York underground railroad will be twelve miles long. Express trains will run the entire distance in fifteen minutes. It will be the greatest work of public improvement on the continent except the Chicago sanitary channel.

THE BUBONIC PLAGUE.

There is no longer doubt that the bubonic plague has defiled American soil. Our frontiers are bringing us already reminder of the rewards of imperialism. The plague is in the Philippines and in the Hawaiian islands. It is reported off the western coast of the United States and ashore in British America. There it can without doubt be stopped.

The bubonic plague differs pathologically from other forms of pestilence. As its name suggests, it attacks the glands, causing swellings and abscesses interiorly as well as externally. Its seizure is sudden, its course agonizing, its end generally fatal. It is not a novel pestilence. It swept the old east centuries ago and prevailed the "sweating sickness" in the west of Europe. It presents no serious aspect to modern hygeine. It may be aggravated by the vast famine in India, for famine and filth are the parents of plague. The governor general of India virtually abandons millions in that dependency of the crown to the awful death of starvation. Furthering [illegible] flight of thousands from afflicted villages to panic-stricken towns will render this year tragic in the east.

American and Canadian quarantine and cleanliness bulwark Canada and the United States against infection. Keen vigilance is required at all ports and along our whole border.

Ladysmith may be relieved, but if so it is not half so much as England is.

A REMARKABLE WAR SPEECH.

In England last month Mr. Geoffrey Drage, M.P. for Derby, addressed a meeting of his constituents, on the subject of the South African war. In a speech of great force and clearness he reviewed compactly the events leading up to the struggle, holding that the war had been forced by causes beyond the control of the present British government, and was on the British part a war for justice and liberty. In closing he expressed in response to a request what he thought must and would be the nature of the settlement:

First and foremost there must be British supremacy, the supremacy of the British flag at Pretoria and Bloemfontein, the maintenance of British government in South Africa, and the prevention of the recurrence of any such massing of ammunition, and of such conspiracy, if we are to use that term, as we have seen up to now.

There must also be the greatest possible measure of colonial self-government, with absolute equality for all white men in matters both civil and religious, and the proper protection of the colored people ensured. The one thing on which the empire rests is the fact that Britain, first of all in the wide world, has seen level justice done between all classes of the subject populations.

Next you have to give proper compensation to the Natal people, including, of course, territorial expansion if they desire it for the colony, as well as pecuniary compensation for their looted farms, and to all loyal colonists for their sacrifices; and that has not been done in former wars.

And then you have to see that the Imperial taxpayer, whether in Great Britain or in the colonies that have so nobly come forward to help, are compensated out of the Transvaal revenues for all the money that has been spent upon this wanton war. It would be a great wrong if you had to go to the taxpayer to pay for the sins of the Boer government.

You will also have to have a proper census of all white men, and to give facilities for the emigration of working men from England, and see to the settling, if possible, of the reservists in the army out there on the land.

All these are matters which it seems to me to be somewhat premature to discuss. It is like discussing what you are doing to do with the bearskin before you have killed the bear. But, as it is usual for public speakers to touch on these matters, I have accepted Sir Henry's invitation to do so, and I should add that a considerable period of transition may be necessary between the end of the war and the final settlement.

But the remarkable utterance in the speech was that which Mr. Drage proceeded to make regarding the co-operation of the colonies, asserting no less than that colonial leaders must be called in to aid in dealing with South African problems at the close of the war. He said:

In this same connection there are one or two great ideals I would submit to you. You may, I think, live to see them realized.

When we have got over this war successfully—and, God willing, we shall do so—you will have to bear in mind what every great statesman out there has set forth as a solution of the troubles in South Africa, and that is the federation of all the States under the English crown, just as it has been done in Australia and in Canada.

There is one more great ideal which I submit to you and I believe it is one which we shall see realized. You have heard in times past a great deal about Imperial federation in our colonies, but I have never before seen how it was to be realised. If, however, you electors in this country will take an interest in it you have the means of assuring Imperial federation.

All your great self-governing colonies, for the first time in history, have together sent soldiers to your help. In the final settlement those colonies have got to be together consulted—can't you see the opening for Imperial federation? Cannot you take a few hard-headed men from Canada, from Australasia and from South Africa to sit down with statesmen here to solve the problems by which they will be confronted when the war is over? It is an idea—you may think it is a dream—but it is the first practical proposal which has ever been made in connection with Imperial federation.

Thus in the speech of a member of the Imperial parliament to the city he represents appears of his own free will the emphatic assertion that it is the duty of the mother country, having accepted the aid of Canada and Australasia in the struggle, to ask their advice in the settlement. This is a remarkable thing.

AT THE BRIDAL ALTAR.

FIFE—GLENN.

Picton Gazette—An event of unusual interest took place at the beautiful residence of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Glenn, 2nd concession Ameliasburg township, on Wednesday evening, December 20th, when Alexander Fife, of Peterborough, and Miss Minnie Glenn, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Glenn, were united in marriage. The interior of the home was beautifully trimmed with flowers, in which roses and hydrangeas took a leading part. The ceremony took place at 6 o'clock, Rev. A. J. Harvey Strike, of Demorestville, tying the nupital knot. Mrs. Strike, in her usual way, played the wedding march, and soon the very attractive bridal party entered the large drawing-room, the bride leaning on her father's arm. The bride wore a lovely dress of cream serge, trimmed with satin and pearls, and looked very charming, and carried white roses. The bridesmaid, Miss Lottie Adams, was also becomingly attired in cream bangaline, trimmed with silk ribbon, and carried pink roses. The groom was ably assisted by Mr. Wadsworth, one of Trenton's popular young men. The guests numbered about sixty, many of them very intimate friends, and some were handsome and costly gifts were presented to the charming bride. After the solemn marriage service was over, and congratulations were extended, the bridal party and guests were invited to partake of an excellent wedding breakfast. The dining-room was beautifully decorated, and the tables were ladened with the very choicest and best. After the usual toasts to bride, groom, host and hostess, the evening was spent pleasantly in conversation, singing, etc.

Miss Glen has been an excellent worker in the church and sabbath school, and her presence will be greatly missed there, and in the social circle. Mr. Fife is a graduate of the Peterborough Business College, and is at present one of the superintendents in the Electric works, Peterborough. Mr. and Mrs. Fife will reside in Peterborough, and will be at home to friends after January 1st 1900. Their many friends extend congratulations, wishing for them a very bright, happy and prosperous life.

Waiting for the Present.

At the Central school the other day a boy entered the school for the first time, and was told by Mr. Smith to "Sit there for the present," until Inspector Walker came around to place him. The boy obeyed readily, and when the teacher had finished his multitudinous inquiries into the knowledge of grammar and arithmetic possessed by the children, he found that the boy still sat in the same spot. "What are you waiting for, my boy?" "Please sir, I'm waiting for the present".

EFORE THE ESKIMO'S DAY.

SCOVERY OF EVIDENCE THAT SUPERIOR RACE ONCE INHABITED GREENLAND.

ne Implements and Records Found in a Cave of the "Inland Ice" Region.

There comes an echo of the distant st from Greenland, the land of eterl ice and snow ,a, story that takes back to the days when Greenland as probably free from the weight ice and snow that render it an unhabitable waste. The bark Salina, hich arrived in Philadelphia a few ys ago from Ivigtut, Greenland, the rt frrom which most of the cryoe is sent out to all parts of the rld, carried four superintendents of e mines there on their way home to rway. In summer the colony at gtut is large, numbering some two three hundred, but in winter the lony moves to warmer climes.

Carl Svensen ,one of the four who me on the Salina, lives in Norway, d upon his arrival in Philadelphia nt to New York, where he took ssage for his home. Mr. Svensen lls a tale that were it not for he tual proofs in his possession would et with doubt. It is thought by me scientists that the seat of e garden of Eden was at the north le, and the reason presented by em in support of this theory seems usible enough. They argue that e earth was once a molten mass and at on cooling assumed the form of oblate spherroid. As it gradually oled the ends became solid first and is portion became habitable before e rest. Naturally it would become lder and colder and hence the vast ount of ice and snow which they im is gradually moving south.

Dog Leads to the Discovery.

As mine superintendent Svenson's ties often carry him far into the gion known as the "inland ice." his is a beautiful region, though dangrous for travel on account of the merous crevasses that intersect it. r as the eye can reach there is thing but whiteness, broken only an occasional abutment of land that e ice has been unable to cover. Early in September Mr. Svensen started out from Ivigtut for a settlement me seventy miles away. The journy was to be performed on sledges awn by dogs, and his companions ere to be two native boys. He arted out early in the morning and s soon skimming ovdr the frozen rface.

Late in the afternoon clouds began gather and the party was soon in midst of a whirling, blinding owstorm. Knowing that it would foolhardy to attempt to continue y more until the storm ceased they de for a large mass of land, which ey discerned looming up blackly in e distance. Driving around to the ward side to escape the fury of the orm, they were soon cozily ensconc- in a little hollow that quite pro- in a little hollow that quite protected them from the blast. They st untied the dogs from the sledge, d drawing the latter close to them rmed a sort of hut. In a few mines they were surprised to see one the dogs disappear through a hole the ground that had hitherto esped their notice. Mr. Svensen ruck a match and to his surprise w a whole about four feet in diaeter, partly concealed by mosses and hens.

Clever Stone Work Found.

ey cleared the entrance away and e of the boys volunteered to go wn, but Mr. Svensen decided it best wait until the dog came out. He istled and in a few minutees the a few minutes the animal appeared, ne the worse for his descent into e earth. Svensen and the boys then tered the hole, which proved to be e entrance to a cave some fifty feet uare. The place had a musty odor ich indicated that it had not been d for a great number of years. examination showed that the place d once been the habitation of a race o were very clever stone workers. number of stone implements were und on the floor of the cave half bedded in the earth, while a numr of stone slabs werre piled up in e corner. Upon examination these oved to be a sort of record, for ey were covered with rude drawgs, almost obliterated by time, howre. The workmanship of the imements proved conclusively that the habitants of the cave were of a highr order than the Eskimo. A number human skeletons in the cave gave der to this fact, as they were a much rger boned race than the Eskimo.

IS MARS PEOPLED?

Such a Claim Advanced by a German Scientist.

"Is Mars Inhabited?" has been asked very often during recent years and has engaged the serious attention of many astronomers and especially of M Camille Flammarion, a noted French scientist and author.

Some new light is now thrown on this subject by Professor Ernst Haeckel, an eminent German philosopher, in a book entitled "World Problems. After pointing out that men have been studying the heavens for more than 4,500 years and have only been studying themselves for the last half century he says we may safely assume that the many fixed stars whose light requires thousands of years to reach us are suns and are surrounded by planets and worlds similar to those we know. We may also assume, he holds, that thousands of these planets have arrived at the same stage of development as our world, and it naturally follows that on them the same conditions of life prevail as on this earth, and there is no valid reason why human beings should not live there as they do here.

Professor Haeckel takes care to explain that there are doubtless many planets the temperature of which is such that life, as we understand the term, cannot be sustained on them. He thinks it very probable that there are types of animals and plants on some planets which are not to be found on the earth. According to him it is very likely that the biogenetic process exists on Mars, Venus and possibly some other planets of our system, as well as on planets of other solar systems, but plants on these planets have reached a higher stage of development than has been reached by animals and plants of this earth.

If we assume that Mars is inhabited—and Professor Haeckel seems pretty well satisfied that it is—we must assume, he holds, that the men and women whose home is on the planet are not such as we, but of a far higher type. They may resemble us exteriorly, but they are free from our physical defects and excel us in strength and gracefulness. It is in the intellectual sphere, however, that their superiority is most clearly shown. If there are human beings on these planets, says Prof. Haeckel, it is extremely probable that they far surpass ordinary men and women in intelligence.

India Rubber Industry.

The bulletin of the Royal gardens, Kew, states that the falling off in the production of India rubber at Lagos is due to the reckless way in which the trees are being exhausted. There is a want of control over the collectors, who tap young trees and destroy whole rubber forests by overworking, so that this industry, which is an important sourse of wealth to the colony, is in danger of extinction. A similar disaster occurred in Madagascar, and now active steps are being taken to preserve the industry by the establishment of plantations of rubber producing plants.

The Architect.

One must wonder why it really is that so little is said or thought about architecture, the grandest, the mother, of all arts, a great, a most useful, science, one in which a greater revolution has lately taken place and in which more progress has been made, with more stupendous results, than in any other, remarks a writer in The International Magazine.

Was it not Richelieu who, paraphrasing an ancient writer, said: "If it is versatility you seek, go find an architect. He must be an artist, or his buildings will offend the eye; an engineer, or they will crumble into trouble; a lawyer, or he will get his patrons into trouble; a doctor, or his buildings will be hygienically unfit to live in, and, last, but not least, he must be a gentleman, or we will have nothing to do with him."

Time to Give Up.

An Iowa judge recently related an amusing incident that had occurred in his court when a colored man was brought up for some petty offense. The charge was read, and as the statement "The state of Iowa against John Jones" was read in a loud voice the colored man's eyes bulged nearly out of their sockets and he seemed overcome with terror and astonishment. When he was asked if he had anything to say or pleaded guilty or not guilty, he gasped out:

"Well, yo' honah, ef de whole state o' Iowa is ag'in dis one pore niggah I'se gwine to give up right now!"

GLIMPSES OF SOUTH AFRICA.

In Peace and in War—A Splendid Lot of Views

Southern Africa, that enormous expanse of tropically verdant territory extending from the Lambesi River to the Cape of Good Hope, has for a century or more lain dormant to the eyes of the civilized world. Only within the past two decades has public attention been drawn to the wonderful natural resources and mineral wealth of this wild and rugged land, and yet, within this period, marvelous creation of brilliant modern cities have supplanted the desert lands and haunts of savage tribes. The steady march of civilization, the all-pervading ambition to accumulate the wealth of diamonds and gold that lay beneath the crust of this benighted land, each has borne its part in the metamorphosis and heralded to the world the wonderful possibilities of that "Dark Continent" for the energy and enterprise that the 20th century will bring to light.

In no other country of the world has progress been marked with such adversity and strife as Africa. From the time the early Dutch settlers landed in the Cape Colony up to the present, there has existed almost a constant state of warfare; the natives disputing the advance of the Dutch and they in turn resenting the inroads of civilization. In spite of this, so strenuous were the efforts of the colonists in their determination to turn to account the beauties and resources of the land of their adoption, that today they enjoy the fruits of their successes in a paradise of tropical vegetation, a salubrious climate and surrounded by the highest auvantages of intellectuality and luxuries of civilization.

Cape Town is the metropolis and seat of government of the Cape Colony. Its historical past and present is firmly linked in the traditions of the early Dutch and the Huguenots. True, the old forts and buildings of distinctly Dutch architecture still remain but magnificent edifices of the most modern type, beautiful botanical gardens and the public improvements are evidences of the wonderful advance of civilization.

Port Elizabeth is the Liverpool of South Africa. It is a great commercial center, coupled with some of the largest shipping interests in the world; a city of the most modern type, essentially English in character, and possessing some of the largest as well as the most architecturally magnificent buildings and public institutions in South Africa.

Natal is the beautiful, tropical Garden Colony. Its luxurious vegetation and glorious climate, its wide avenue of trees and fine buildings, the native Zulu servants and the picturesque costumes of the Orientals, lend an ear of peace and tranquility, while the marks of civilization and progress are in evidence at every turn.

Johannesburg, the Golden, with its fine architectural creations, public institutions and parks, possesses many attractions that easily place it as the foremost city of South Africa. Its great industry, mining, the apparently inexhaustible veins of gold-bearing quartz, in which upwards of seven hundred millions of dollars are invested, have been the attraction for the thousands and thousands of "Uitlanders," whose "grievances" are substantially the cause for the cruel war between Briton and Boer, the battles of which have been ranked as the "bloodiest of the century."

So great has been the interest manifested in South Africa and the progress of the war, and so eager the thirst for information, coupled with the demand for a Pictorial History incident to the scenes of warfare, that the publication of "Glimpses of South Africa" has been undertaken upon a scale of grandeur, fidelity and completeness never before though of, involving as it has an expense of extraordinary magnitude. In order that the work might be absolutely reliable and thorough in its characte ,the publishers have contracted for its authorship with Mr. Wymble Flemming, an Afrikander, whose authority upon South African matters is world-widely acknowledged. This gentleman,—born in the Cape Colony, having travelled over nearly every inch of the country south of the Lambesi River and lived in South Africa for nearly thirty years, with an extensive newspaper experience in Africa, England and America, the author of many interesting sketches of South African life and scenery ,formerly connected with the consular service at Port Elisabeth, whose comments on the war have been a ofavorably received by the American press, and whose magnificent collection of photographs will appear in this work,—will present South Africa as it is today, with views of everything of public interest, including most of the important scenes of battle and a graphically illustrated description of each stage in the progress of the war.

This great work is published in serial form, and when complete will comprise the most magnificent collectoin of photographic reproductions of the British-Boer war and South Africa obtainable in this country. Portfolios distributed by the Morning Times. For particulars see announcement on another page of this issue.

MUNICIPAL MATTERS.

Lansing, Mich., has a driveway 83 feet in width.

Philadelphia is to have a labor temple to cost not less than $100,000.

Indianapolis has 3,500 dogs licensed and 1,500 unlicensed and still has no public place where one of them can get a drink of water.

New York has a school in connection with the fire department where firemen are taught to scale buildings, catch dummies and handle furniture.

Family Peacemakers.

More family troubles are adjusted by the magistrates in this city than the average person would willingly believe. There is hardly a day passes that every member of the minor judiciary is not called upon by a determined husband or wife, usually the latter, to issue a warrant. Nine cases out of ten the applicant is considerably excited and is eager to invoke the aid of the law in settling some trifling controversy. By calm argument and assurances the visitor can usually be persuaded to give the offender of her or his peace and happiness another chance, and a home is perhaps saved from being broken up.—Philadelphia Call.

Last summer a friend presented us with a tortoise. I do not know whether our dog had heard of turtle soup or whether he regarded the creature as a new kind of bone that walked about; at any rate, he determined to eat it.

Whenever the tortoise started out on a constitutional down the garden path Gyp arrested it and carried it into his kennel, where he gnawed at the impenetrable armor till his jaws ached.

The calm and philosophical manner in which the tortoise resumed its interrupted promenade irritated the dog exceedingly, but no failure discouraged him. Whenever we reminded him of the tortoise, he would go in search of it all round the garden, peering into every crevice, till eventually the creature was found, and then fresh but futile attempts were made to extract the meaty portions from the shell.—

BOLD BURNHAM.

AN AMERICAN TO BE ON LORD ROBERT'S STAFF.

His Remarkable Adventures in Africa Almost Prevented Wilson's Massacre by Matabeles—Shot a Medicine Man.

No native of this country has ever been so highly honored by the British government as Frederick M. Burnham, recently appointed on the personal staff of Lord Roberts, and who recently sailed from New York for the scene of conflict and carnage outside the Transvaal. Burnham knows the Dar kContinent thoroughly and it was there he performed signal deeds of valor that won for him the thanks of Queen Victoria and the admiration of all England.

Burnham has had an unparalleled career. The son of a congregational minister, he was left fatherless when a mere child and before he was 12 years old worked as a telegraph messenger boy in Los Angeles. At 18 he went into Arizona as prospector, but instead became a scout, and soon enjoyed a reputation as a dare devil fighter. He became a terror to the blood-thirsty Apaches, who hated and feared him as an evil spirit with a charmed life, for they could not harm him and many of them fell before his rifle. He also did some prospecting and established claims which gave him a snug fortune. But he craved for more adventure and turrned to South Africa as A Land of Promise.

About this time romance and love enteread into his life. In school at Clinton, Ia., he met Miss Blanche Blick. They chanced to meet again, this time at Pasadena, Cal., and were soon married. But this did not deter him from undertaking the long voyage to an almost unknown land, and Mrs. Burnham, brave and resourceful, went with her husband.

In South Africa there was fighting to be done, and Burnham offered his services, which weire most acceptable. Then began the brilliant career, which led to the honor just conferred by Lord "Bobs." Burnham was with Jameson on the historic raid in Matabeleland in 1894, and had many thrilling experiences, and accomplished a score of dashing achievements. He and his brother-in-law a dn mining partner, Pete Ingraham,now a resident of Alamedak, Cal., werre the sole survivors of the Major Alleu Wilson massacre. Major Wilson, finding himself and command surrrounded by savages, called for volunteers to make a break through the black' warriors' line and summon aid. Burnham volunteered, and took Ingraham with him. They succeeded in eluding the wary Matabeles and bringing up relief, but by the time the troops arrived every man in Major Wilson's force had been butchered, and the bloody affair was history.

A Daring Exploit.

Some time afterward Melme, a savage chief or medicine man of great influence, was inciting the tribes to hostility, and the British authorities offered an enormous money prize to any man who would select his own force and find and destroy him. Burnham said he would do it, but scorned the mercenary offer, and set out with Ingraham and a miner named Anderson, on the difficu't mission. Melme's stronghold and hiding place were far in the interior, and an unexplored wilderness infested with hordes of murderous savages ,but the trio got through and found it, through strategy.

Melme's den was a huge cave and he was in it. Burnham left his companions at the entrance and went in alone. After creeping through a long dark passageway, with the knowledge that the slightest sound meant discoverry and death, he reached the main chamber. It was a mammoth room in the rock, lighted by a blazing fire, and Melme was on the opposite side in a frenzy of savage excitement and fury, performing his weird incantations. Burnham drew a bead on Melme's heart with his Winchester, then purposly made a sleight noise. The medicine man started and glared, reached to the wall by his side for a weapon, and a bullet crashed through his heart. Melme was dead. After many trying ordeals and terrible dangers Burnham and his companions escaped the fierce pursuit that followed. That particular war was ended.

His Domestic Sorrow.

During this time Mrs. Burnham was at Buluwayo, enduring frightful suspense, for her husband was in direst peril and her little daughter was ill. And before he returned the little one, two years old, was dead and buried. A broken-hearted mother, deprived of a treasure as precious to her as life itself, welcomed home a sorrowing father with tears of joy that he had been spared to her. And this little girl was Nada Burnham, the first white child born at Buluwayo, to whom H. Rider Haggard's book, "Nana the Lily," is dedicated.

Mr. and Mrs. Burnham returned to America, and then he was selected by the British Government to pland the flag across the Zambesi and head an expedition to Central Africa for the London Geographical Society. All and more than had been expected was accomplished, and he and A. Kingsley Macumber, of Pasadena, who accompanied him, were made members of the Geogrraphical Society. This exploration was made in 1895-7 and was one of the five trips Burnham has made to that land, always accompanied by his plucky wife. She is now in the Klonkike with her two sons, Mr. Burnham having large mining interests there and millions invested for an English syndicate.

But a few incidents in Mr. Burnham's career have been touched upon here. He is a man for emergencies and never fails under the most trying circumstances. Small of stature and fair of face he has a constitution and will of iron, nerves of steel and piercing gray eyes that seem to read one through and through. Bravery is a part of him, and his determination is indomitable. Quiet and unassuming, he would be picked among a thousand as a leader of men.

Sing While Marching.

A German army doctor has discovered that singing possesses health giving properties. He claims that it intensifies the respiratory movements, thus rendering the lungs capable of dealing with more air. This increases and strengthens the action of all the organs of the body. Appetite and thirst increase, and the more frequent movements of the diaphragm materially aid digestion. German foot soldiers are therefore encouraged to sing on the march.

Electric Bell Substitute.

A substitute for an electric bell has been devised by a deaf couple. Not being able to hear the bell themselves, and having no servant, they have fixed up an arrangement by means of which when the button at the front door is pressed, the electric lights all over the place light up, and remain so until the button is released. By a reversal of the arrangement, all the lights are switched off when the button is operated after dark.

A WORLD-WAR COMING.

Little Short of a Miracle Can Prevent That Misfortune.

War between Russia and Japan is looked for as inevitable by the naval officers of those countries who have been nearest the probable scene of future operations, says Lieut. W. Romanoff, of the Imperial Russian navy, who is now in the United States.

Just how soon such a war may begin it is difficult to say, but events little short of miraculous must occur to avert it. The Japanese are building warships as rapidly as possible, in anticipation of the outbreak of hostilities, and Russia is strengthening her navy as fast as she can. That Russia must have a naval base between Port Arthur and Vladivostock is conceded, and that she will try to get one in Corea is certain. In the event of such a war it is considered probably in Russian naval circles that Russia will have the aid of Germany and that England will take the other side. European war will follow the outbreak of hostilities between Russia and Japan.

The movement of Russian troops toward the Afghanistan and British India borders, the mobilization of transcaspian troops at Baku and Herat, and other military maneuverings on the part of Russia, are taken by official Russia to mean the beginning of a movement to eliminate English influence in territory hitherto held by her, beginning at Kabul. It is certain that England will have to fight to retain her territory in the east.

A Race With the Sun.

The London Daily Mail says if an aerial machine were capable of traveling at any rate up to 1,000 miles an hour a traveler in it, starting westward from London at a speed of 660 miles an hour, would arrest the progress of time. If he started at 10 a. m., it would always be to him 10 a. m. Should he find his unending day monotonous, he could reverse his direction and get a quick succession of short days and nights of some six hours' duration, but he could regulate the length by the speed of his machine. Suppose he traveled from London one night at 10 o'clock westward at a speed of 1,000 miles per hour. He would soon experience the sensation of seeing the sun rising in the west where it had set a short time before.

Showing Him How.

"You young scoundrel!" said the father, seizing his disobedient son by the hair. "I'll show you how to treat your mother."

And he at once proceeded to show young hopeful the way by banging him across the ears two or three times and then shaking him until his hair began to fall out.

Dew.

Teacher—How do you account for the phenomenon of dew?

Boy—Well, you see, the earth revolves on its axis every 24 hours, and in consequence of this tremendous pace it perspires freely.—London Tit-Bits.

HUTCH

Ten Hutch 10 Cents.

A Doctor ...for... 10 Cents.

A TORONTO CLERGYMAN.

I once thought that to write a testimonial was about the last thing of which I should be guilty. Nearly all testimonials have appeared to me so much as if they were simply the stereotyped adulation of the remedy they purported to tell about that I must confess that I regarded the whole affair in the light of fraud.

However, to remain silent in the face of the great good I have derived from using Hutch were rank ingratitude. I once thought, sir, that I never should obtain relief from a chronic dyspepsia, which, at seasons, would well nigh bowl me out. I was troubled with a dull ache at the pit of my stomach which never left me. Then my heart was affected to such an extent that I feared syncope, and if I did not dread the parade of my ills, I could give you in detail the horrible misery through which I passed. I saw Hutch advertised, and I received your circular letters. The tone of both was so genuine that I decided to try Hutch. I am most thankful for the result. I have received such blessed relief that I am recommending Hutch to all my friends.

I trust that if you publish this testimonial, you will kindly withhold my name.

Yours, etc., ——

COUNTY MAGISTRATE'S PROTEST.

County Magistrate Edminson brought up a couple of grievances he had. One of these was a resolution passed by the Council which interfered with the arrangement between himself and the county regarding official expenses. He thought the Council had hardly kept good faith with him. He reviewed his career as police magistrate and stated that he thought his salary should not have been interfered with.

On motion of Mr. Fitzgerald the matter was referred to the Finance Committee. Warden Foster stated that he believed the Council had no intention of reducing his salary or attempting to do so. They had simply wished to reduce the expense of the office.

The Council then adjourned and the Finance Committee assembled for business.

WILD HORSES.

Almost as Defenceless as Sheep. Their Safety Lies in Flight.

The horse in its wild shape is almost as defenceless as the sheep, and when a herd of wild horses is attacked by wolves there is no escape but flight. In its wild state the horse's natural habitat is on the open plain, and when attacked by wolves its only safety lies in its superior speed. If the young foal were not as swift as its parents it would fall an easy prey to its pursuer, and so, within a few generations, the wild horse might be utterly destroyed by its enemies. The curious thing is that the foal is quite as swift as its parents. When one looks at it, even in its domesticated condition, it seems to be all legs, and one is surprised to see how easily the slight body is borne along on those long legs beside the mother, even when she is running at her swiftest rate. In that fact lies the safety of the wild horse from destruction, and the thousands of generations in which that useful animal has been domesticated have brought no change in the peculiar conformation of the foal's limbs, though it is no longer needed for its original purpose.

Another curious thing is, that one of the faults of the horse of which we are apt to complain, we mean the habit of shying, is a survival of an old habit which was useful and necessary when its ancestors were still roaming wild upon the plains. Then every horse was constantly on the outlook for an enemy, and it did not look only with one eye. It habitually kept turning its ear in all directions, so as to catch the slightest sound which should indicate the presence of danger. Not only when a wolf was seen did the herd take flight; any sound, as of the wolf breaking through the long grass, caused an instantaneous stampede; and something of that habit still survives. The horse seldom fears the objects which it sees unless they appear suddenly; but the sudden appearance of some light thing driven by the wind, or some slight sound that perhaps may not be heard by his master, may cause an instant and involuntary shy, shuch as the poor brute would instinctively make if he were still upon the plains.

Survey Completed.

The Bowmanville Statesman says: "The first survey of the proposed change of the G.T.R. road from Cobourg to Scarboro has been completed and the engineers report a most favorable route, with the exception of a gully near Stevens' Mill, in Darlington township. The head engineer is at present at work trying to overcome this difficulty. Won't it be funny to drive out north on the Scugog Road to toll-gate hill to take the train? About time farmers out there were staking out town lots and a newspaper started to boom the site.

Steel Combs.

A man who saw in a sidewalk showcase some steel combs and who wondered what steel combs could be used for found upon inquiry that they were used by furriers in combing furs. There was one of these combs that looked much like a comb of the ordinary kind, coarse toothed for half its length and finer toothed the other half. And then there was one comb that had teeth for half its length, the solid end serving as a handle.

There are other steel combs that are used for a similar purpose, as steel combs made to comb dogs with. The dog comb looks somewhat like the fine toothed comb in its general shape, but it is larger, toothed on one side only and coarser toothed than the so called fine comb. The untoothed side combs of this sort are used on various kinds of dogs, including, for instance, long haired dogs like the French poodle.—New York Sun.

Church Dedication.

The new Roman Catholic church at Kirkfield is completed and was solemnly blessed and dedicated to divine worship on Sunday, 28th inst. The ceremony of dedication was performed by His Lordship Right Rev. R. A. O'Connor, D.D., Bishop of Peterborough, at 10.30 a.m., when High Mass was celebrated by the pastor, Rev. J. Sweeney. His Lordship preached the dedicatory sermon. The style of the church is gothic and is indeed a gem of Catholic architecture and must be seen to be appreciated.

Double Trading Stamps.

For the next few days double trading stamps will be given at the Times Bookstore. Our stock of fancy goods will be cleared out at cost to make room for fresh importations.

Snow Plowing.

The snow ploughing contract for the northern district was let to Mr. Blodgett, who has refused to sign the contract on the ground that he would be asked to shovel the snow by hand. If he makes no better job of the snow ploughing than he did of watering the streets last season, it will make little difference to the long-suffering ratepayer whether the work is done by hand or otherwise. The street inspector is evidently an easy mark for such men as Blodgett.

An Address.

The County Council on Saturday last drove to the residence of Mrs. Edgecumbe Pearse and presented that lady and family with an address of condolence on the death of Mr. Pearse, who for 22 years had filled the responsible position of Clerk and Treasurer of the county. Mrs. Pearse, as well as the family, appreciate very much the sympathy and kindness of the Councilll

An Auburn Route.

The Times was visited Saturday by a couple of gentlemen living on the east side of the river near Auburn, who wanted us to arrange an early delivery for the paper in that district. Mr. Croly, one of the gentlemen, said that the people there wanted the Times, and would nearly all subscribe for it is an early delivery was arranged. This will certainly be done. When this g.f.j. thoroughly wakes up it will get there, even if the snow is two feet deep on the veldt.

A Recount.

A re-count of the ballots in the recent municipal elections for the reeveship in Galway and Cavendish was held before His Honor Judge Weller yesterday morning. As a result of the election Mr. Mansfield had a majority of one vote over Mr. Cobin, and by the recount to-day the former was two votes ahead, although either candidate may yet be elected as Judge Weller reserved his decision regarding the validity of three ballots. Mr. Hugh O'LeGry, Q. C., of Lindsay, appeared for Mr. Mansfield, and R. J. McLaughlin, also of Lindsay, for Mr. Cobin.

Too Personal

The Times received a length letter for publication, in reply to the letter which appeared in yesterday's Examiner over the signature of Mr. J. W. Fitzgerald. We regret that the writer has been altogether too personal in his remarks. Besides, we think it unwise to open up a newspaper discussion on a subject of this

LINDSAY'S POWER SCHEME.

The Water Wheels Delivered—Power Will be Transmitted in a few Days.

The Lindsay Post says—"A large steel tube, 11 feet 6 inches in diameter and 30 feet long, to which are attached two large water wheels capable of producing in the neighborhood of 750 horse power, passed through town this morning to Fenlon Falls. This large tube was built by the Hamilton Manufacturing Co., of Peterborough, for the Light, Heat & Power Co., of this town, and was to have been delivered last October, but owing to the scarcity of steel and the magnitude of the work the job is only now ready for delivery.

The work of putting in the tube and machinery will be commenced to-morrow, and will be pushed with all vigor until the plant is in running order, which should be in about two months. The dynamos have been completed some time, and the pole line is ready for the current. The completion of this power scheme is now only a question of a short time, when Lindsay will be able to offer advantages to manufacturers and power users that very few towns in Canada possess."

It is fun to see such lacrosse clubs as the Nationals, of Montreal, and the Capitals, of Ottawa, pointing the finger of scorn at the Torontos for their alleged professionalism.

There will be a great game of hockey on Thursday night between the St. Nicholas team of New York, and the Crescents of Brooklyn. They are tied for first place, neither having lost a game, and there is rivalry between them, particularly among the Canadian contingents.

Curling

The Granites and Churchill curlers met yesterday morning in the first round for the Tankard Cup, the home team being defeated as follows—

Churchill.	Granites.
Rink No. 1.
G. Reeves	A. G. Parker
W. Allen	W. A. Morrow
J. Lennox	D. W. Dumble
J. Allen, skip, 29.	G. B. Whiten, sp.10
Rink No. 2.
J. L. Sloan	J. A. Aylmer
R. W. Sloan	H. A. Morrow
E. H. Sloan	R. S. Davidson
R. Reeves, skip, 16.	T. E. Bradburn, sp.24
45	34

Majority for Churchill, 11 shots.

In the afternoon the winners met the Thistles, and after a very close and exciting game the rinks from the northern village were beaten by a close margin of 8 shots. The following members of the Thistles competed—

R. Neill, D. Belleghem, T. Rutherford, W. G. Ferguson, skip, 3 up.

F. H. Dixon, J. Stanger, C. N. Brown, D. Davidson, skip, 5 up.

Both teams took the train for Orillia immediately after the game; as the winners of the Orillia-Lindsay draw. As Peterborough won, it seems strange that they did not wait to hear who was winner at Orrillia, for if Lindsay won they need only have gone to Lindsay.

THE VETERANS' ASSOCIATION.

The Presentation of Medals to Take Place in the Opera House.

A meeting of the Veterans Association of the Town and County of Peterborough was held last night in the Council chamber, the object being to arrange for the presentation of the medays to the veterans.

Mr. A. P. Poussette, President of the Association, called the meeting to order, when after some discussion, the following resolution was carried—

Moved by Mr. J. B. McWilliams, seconded by Mr. H. Rush—That in the opinion of this meeting there should be a patriotic demonstration in connection with the presentation of the medals, the proceeds to be devoted to the patriotic fund, and that the following members be a committee to make arrangements for an entertainment in the opera house—Messrs. A. P. Poussette, Q.C.; Col Bell, Col. J. Z. Rogers, Col. H. C. Rogers, J. D. Collins, J. B. McWilliams, H. Rush and Major Miller.

A long discussion took place in regard to missing medals, forty-seven medals having been received by Colonel Bell. The following resolution was carried—

That this Association protests against the presentation of medals to the Bobcaygeon Infantry Company, that company not being in existence until the fall of 1866.

The secretary was instructed to lay this protest before the military authorities at Ottawa.

The meeting then adjourned.

Emphatically, No!

Editor Morning Times:

Sir.—I have noticed that the Times is generally "agin the government" metaphorically speaking, when any matter is before the people. In other words, when it finds out wheree the evening papers are it takes the other side. This is particularly apparent in regard to matters that come before the Council.

I hope you will pardon me, my dear Mr. Editor, if I make bold to suggest that the interests of the town would be better served if the papers were united in their actions where the public weal is concerned. I think, perhaps, the Times is a trifle jealous of its contemporaries, and rather enjoys ruffling their feathers. Now that the town proposes to make a grant towards the construction of a permanent bridge over the Chemong Lake, I hope the newspapers will unitedly support the By-law, which will be submitted to the ratepayers in this connection.

Thanking you for your valuable space, and hoping that my remarks will be regarded in a friendly way, I am etc.,

PROPERS.

[Our correspondent is evidently suffering from billious disorder or cold feet. Jealous of our contemporaries! Great horn spoons! This great family journal, whose circulation stands unrivalled, unchallenged and unquestioned, head and shoulders above these little chaps, jealous! The thing is magnificently absurd! Our correspondent, who is so free with his advice, will, we are sure, consent to take a little himself. We would suggest that he read the papers more carefully and he will find that the Times is always out on the side of the people. We defy him to name one solitary instance in which this journal failed in this regard. We do not care a button which way our contemporaries rush, the business of this g.f.j. is to do its duty to the people, without "fear, favor or affection and we have yet to learn wherein we have failed in this regard. —Ed. Times.]

. Windham's declaration in the House f Commons that Great Britain would ave in a fortnight 180,000 regulars in uth Africa, 7,000 Canadians and Australians, and 24,000 South African volunteers is received with wonderment. f this total of 213,000 troops with 452 uns, all are now there with the exception of about 18,000 that are afloat. eyond comparison, this is the largest rce Great Britain has ever put in e field. At the end of the Crimean ar she had scraped together 30,000 men nd Wellington at Waterloo had 25,000.

THE SITUATION.

London, Feb. 1.—Though the three eat campaigns—in Natal, on the Mod r and on the Tugela—are at a standl, there are numerous indications at the military genius and activity Lord Roberts and the organizing ility of Lord Kitchener are employ- in the maturing of plans which will ult in the disentangling of the gor- n knot at present seen in South rica. The fact that the bulk of the ops arriving at the Cape are either d in reserve there or are being sent o a certain area, contrary to the rse hitherto pursued of dispersing m, shows that Roberts has some l-defined plan which he is rapidly paring to execute. This plan is un- btedly the overwhelming of the rs at Stormberg and Colesberg and invasion of the Orange Free State quickly as possible thereafter. The upation of Prieska by a strong Brit force and the seizing of Richmond the Canadians are part of his scheme execution of which is being prepar for by the occupation of strategic itions which will be made use of to minate the disaffected districts in pe Colony and prevent raids upon line of communication from Orange ver into the Boer country. Within month Lord Roberts will have fully 000 men at his disposal, or including 7,000 odd now serving with French d Gatacre, 37,000. Even now, reck- ing this force and troops recently ded, he has 20,000 men available the preliminary work of clearing southern bank of the Orange River d securing the bridges and drifts. the time this work is done a force fficient for the advance will have n assembled. Allowing fifteen usand men for garrisoning the captured towns and guarding the long e of communication an army of 22,- men would be afforded, and this ht to be sufficient to remove the ain from Kimberley and Ladysmith d draw the Boers back into their n country. It does not seem likely t General Buller will make any ious move until this advance is well der way unless the straits of Lady- ith become so serious as to render imperative. This remark also ap- s to Methuen and Kimberley.

BRITISH OCCUPY PRIESKA.

Cape Town, Jan. 31.—A British force th artillery is reported to have oc- pied Prieska, and is now encamped re.

Prieska is on the Orange River, about hundred miles due west of the Or- e River Station and Belmont. It 150 miles south-west of Kimberley d in the midst of the disaffected rtion of northern Cape Colony.

PORTED FIGHTING IN NATAL.

London, Feb. 1.—The St. James Gazette says that it is reported on good authority that General Buller has crossed the Tugela River at three places and that fighting has been proceeding all day long.

GOVERNMENT IS POWERLESS.

London, Feb. 1.—In the absence of exciting war news the nation and the newspapers have had time to discover the utter lack of relation existing between the feeling of the people and the temper of the Government as demonstrated in Parliament. Instead of relieving the grave anxiety of the country by the declaration of measures in behalf of the national safety, the Ministers continue to demonstrate their inability to grasp the situation by beating the air with recriminations, self-accusatory defence and bickerings as to the degree of responsibility attachable to the respective departments of the Government.

The ultra Ministerial organ, The Globe, says:

"The heart of the Empire seems paralyzed while its extremists are in full vigor. Thus far only one statesman in the front rank has struck the right note, and that is Lord Rosebery."

JOUBERT LEAVES LADYSMITH.

Hoof Laager, Ladysmith, Jan. 30.—All is quiet here. The long toms occasionally fire upon Ladysmith. The deaths in Ladysmith from fever and other causes must be enormous, as we can clearly see them burying corpses daily. Gen. Joubert went to the Upper Tugela yesterday.

A SUPREME EFFORT.

London, Feb. 1.—The idea grows that General Buller is preparing for a third attempt to reach Ladysmith. The correspondent of the Morning Post, telegraphing from Spearman's camp, under date of Jan. 28, says:

"Nobody is downcast, but as it is generally understood that a supreme effort to pierce the Boer lines is impending, the soldiers are resolved to get their own back. Their spirit is most determined. The army is exasperated but not defeated. General Buller will persevere, and all will come right in the end."

GERMANS WERE TOO RASH.

Berlin, Feb. 1.—Dr. Leyds, in the course of conversation, says:

"The heavy losses the Germans have sustained in the Transvaal service are due to their rashly exposing themselves but they have now adopted the tactics required by the topography of the land.

"Recently German, Dutch and Scandinavian volunteers have been merged in Boer regiments, so that such losses in the future will be impossible."

RUNNERS CAN'T GET OUT.

Kimberley, Jan. 25.—The shelling ceased yesterday, though Beaconsfield was bombarded in the afternoon. The Boers are building fresh entrenchments. Many people are making bomb-proof shelters. The Boer long gun has burst. Runner now experience the utmost difficulty in getting into the town. Not one has been successful during the last sixteen days, but constant communication is kept by heliograph and search-light with Modder River.

SYMONS BRAVE BUT UNWISE.

London, Feb. 1.—A blue book has been published containing a quantity of correspondence relating to the defence of Natal. It contains urgent letters and telegrams from the Natal Government from dates as early as May last, up to the outbreak of hostilities, asking reinforcements. On August 3, Mr. Chamberlain wired, "Arrangements to send 2,000 troops are in progress." The Natal Ministry grew more alarmed and on September 6 implored the Imperial Government to avoid a rupture until further reinforceents had arrived. Five thousand seven hundred men were ordered from India. The correspondence shows that Sir William Penn Symons thought 4,000 men would be enough to secure the integrity of Natal, and this view was apparently concurred in by the Natal authorities. Symons also thought that he could continue to hold Glencoe despite the opinions of Generals White and Hunter to the contrary.

SCENES ON SPION KOP.

London, Feb. 1.—The London Daily Mail has the following:

Ladysmith, by heliograph to Swarts Kop, Monday.—There has been cessation of firing since Thursday. Relief is expected shortly.

The Telegraph's correspondent sends these despatches:

Spearman's Camp, Saturday.— The whole of Warren's force returned to the south side of the Tugela river this morning, by way of Trickard's Farm, in twelve hours, without any loss. Pontoon and trestle bridges were removed to the last point. This movement was carried out just in time for the Boers, having brought forward a 15-pounder, fired at one cavalry column as it was retiring, but the shot missed.

General Buller and his staff attended to the operations throughout the night. Indeed, the general has been with Warren's men since Thursday morning.

Our cavalry have partly rejoined the headquarters troops at Spearman's, but Warren's troops remain upon the veldt opposite Spion Kop. Our troops still hold the low detached hills north of the Tugela at Potgieter's drift.

To-day the Boers are firing upon Ladysmith. They have sent guns there and are shooting into the town from Mount Bulwana. The Boers are apparently mounting a big gun at Brakfontein.

Sunday.—General Woodgate, though ill, still survives. The bullet remains in his head. Church parades were held to-day.

Buller spoke to the men and thanked them for their gallant behavior on Spion Kop, and also for the manner in which their comrades had gone forward to help each other on that perilous occasion.

Monday's conversation with our men who were on the fighting lines on Spion Kop reveals the fierceness of the Boer attack and the terrific havoc wrought by the enemy's shells. When the Boers were first seen they were a thousand yards away. They then descended into the hollow. When next it was possible to see them they were only seventy yards off, and our foremost lines sought shelter behind rocks At this stage the first Boer shell burst, and the order was given for one regiment to retire to the edge of the kopje where there was more cover. The order was misconstrued by some of the foremost trenches, who fell back The Boers seized this opportunity and rushed the trenches, capturing a few men. This mistake was soon observed; a bayonet charge followed, and the Boers fled.

Two of their Maxim-Nordenfelts commenced to drop shells among us, doing terrible damage. The Boer rifle men, noticing the havoc wrought, attempted to creep closer upon two occasions, only to be driven back with loss. As they retreated they appealed to our men to surrender. Our response was a volley.

The formation of the hill top is like a table, a mile long and a quarter of a mile broad. The shorter side alone was available for rifle fire. The firing party responding to the Boer attack was necessarily small. The remainder of our ofrces was scattered about, seeking shelter.

CANADIANS IN ACTION.

London, Feb. 1.—The Colonial troops along General Methuen's line of communication, together with their British fellows, are being used by Lord Roberts to pave the way for his contemplated advance over the Orange River into the Free State by occupying the disaffected districts on the flank of his projected movement and thus holding the Cape Rebels at so great a distance that it will be impossible for them to interfere with his line of communication by raids across the border There is no doubt that one of the British columns will advance over the Orange River bridge thirty miles south of Belmont, and will unite with the columns of French, Gatacre and Kelly Kenny after they have captured Stormberg and Colesberg and crossed the river behind those places. The road leading from Douglass to Fauresmith, across the border, passes through Belmont, and the establishment of a strong Canadian outpost at Richmond, twelve miles from Belmont and on this road, is evidently to guard against this route being used by disloyal Dutch to interfere with the invading column which must pass near Belmont on its way to Bloemfontein. The engagement of the Canadian contingent with the Boers at Badenboarst on the Riet River was evidently in pursuance of the work of protecting Methuen's communications, as the scene of the fight is on the left rear flank of the British force at Modder River.

HEIGHTS LIKE SEDAN.

London, Feb. 1.—A letter appears today from an Hanoverian officer, formerly of the 22nd German Infantry, but now among the military advisers of the Boers, which says that nearly 10,000 trained European soldiers, including quite 300 officers, are among the Boers. Referring to the military situation at Ladysmith, the officer says:—"Owing to the strength of our position, on a circle of heights like Sedan, we cannot be brushed aside except by a relief column outnumbering us two to one."

Owing to the discovery that cotton khaki is insufficient protection for the troops sleeping on the South African plains, the Government is starting to re-clothe the forces in the field with woollen khaki, and has already ordered 95,000 suits in Glasgow alone.

Big Shipment of Coal.

The announcement that a firm of Cardiff coal shippers has contracted to supply foreign agents with 400,000 tons of steam coal for shipment abroad has occasioned genuine uneasiness. The destination of the fuel is not mentioned, but as coal is exceptionally scarce in Germany, France and Russia, it is probably going to one of these three countries.

The vital interest which the question has for Great Britain will be understood when it is realized that Natal is depending on Wales for coal for the numerous transports that have gone to Durban because the colonial coal fields have been closed by the war Some of the newspapers advocate the Government placing an embargo on such transactions in war time.

WARREN'S NARROW ESCAPE.

New York, Feb. 1.—Advices from Spearman's Camp say that Gen. Warren's retreating force crossed the river Tugela without the loss of a single man but got away none too soon, a Boer 15 pounder firing at the cavalry column as it was retiring. The Boers are mounting another big gun to fire on Ladysmith.

ON THE STAFF OF ROBERTS.

Belmont, Cape Colony, South Africa, Jan. 31.—Major Septimus J. A. Denison, has been appointed aide-de-camp on the personal staff of General Lord Roberts, and will be the representatives of the Canadian contingent.

Major S. J. A. Denison is an officer in the Royal Canadian Regiment of Infantry and had personal charge of the recruiting for the first Canadian contingent. He was appointed quarter-master of the battalion at Quebec and has acted as such until the present time. Major Denison is a Toronto man, a member of the well known Denison family, and nephew of Col. Geo. T. Denison. His selection for so distinguished a position is a subject for congratulation among his numerous friends in Toronto.

THE BRITISH LION SHAKES HIS MANE!

The Entire Fleet and the Entire Volunteer Force Are to Be Mobilized Without Delay.

This is the Answer of the British Lion to the Snarling of the Other Wild Beasts of the European Continent.

LONDON, Feb. 2.—Great Britain's entire fleet and her entire volunteer force are to be mobilized at once. This was practically settled at the Cabinet meeting on Tuesday. Many retired and half-pay officers have been ordered to hold themselves in readiness for active service. Officers of the Royal Navy Reserve, who are serving on merchantmen all over the world, have been notified by cable to expect commissions on warships.

This is the answer of the British to the snarling of the other wild beasts of Europe! It is her challenge to the world.

Six hundred and sixty-six ships of war are to go into commission, and two hundred thousand volunteers. The volunteers terms of enlistment do not permit of their called out for foreign service, so it is undoubtedly the intention to garrison the forts and mtlitary stations, and to relieve the regulars now thus employed, for service in South Africa. This order will liberate fifty thousand regulars for the war.

The manning of Britain's gigantic fleet will be something of a problem, but men in the Royal Naval Reserve will be employed, and no doubt is expressed as to the ability of the Admiralty to solve the problem.

This news has caused a tremendous sensation in England.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT IN SESSION AT OTTAWA

Canada Will Defray Entire Expense of the Contingents Sent to South Africa.

THE QUEEN'S APPRECIATION OF OUR LOYALTY.

The Patriotism Shown in Sending Troops, Combined With the Preferential Tariff, Intensifies the Cordial Relations With Britain.

Ottawa, Ont., Feb. 1.—Parliament was opened at three o'clock to-day by His Excellency the Governor-General, Lord Minto. The opening ceremonies were of the same character that mark the event year after year. A military escourt was furnished from the Princess Louise Dragoon Guards and accompanied Lord Minto from Government House to the Parliament Buildings and return. At the buildings His Excellency was received with a guard of honor from the Governor-General's Foot Guards, and salutes of nineteen guns were fired from Nepean Point by the Ottawa Field Battery. There was a large crowd in attendance in the Senate Chamber when Lord Minto delivered the following speech from the throne—

QUEEN'S SPEECH.

Honorable Gentlemen of the Senate—
Gentlemen of the House of Commons—

It is again my pleasing duty to congratulate you upon the continued prosperity of the Dominion and on the remarkable increase in the general volume of revenue and of the exports and imports of the country.

The War.

Hostilities having unfortunately broken out during the recess between Great Britain and the South African Republic, it appeared to my Ministers expedient to anticipate the action of Parliament by equipping and forwarding two contingents of volunteers to the seat of war as a practical evidence of profound devotion and loyalty of the entire people of Canada to the Sovereign and institutions of the British Empire.

The Second Contingent.

In this connection it is a matter of pride and gratification to the people of this Dominion that in addition to the contingents sent by the Government, another Canadian force is being organized and despatched at the personal expense of the High Commissioner of Canada. This generous and patriotic action upon the part of Lord Strathcona reflects high honor on him and on the Dominion he represents.

The Queen's Appreciation.

I have been instructed to convey to you
I have been instructed to convey to you Her Majesty's high appreciation of loyalty and patriotism thus displayed, which following the preference granted under the present tariff to articles of British manufacture, has had the happiest effect in cementing and intensifying the cordial relations subsisting between Canada and the Mother Country.

Will Pay the Cost.

A bill will be submitted for your approval, making provision for the cost of equipping and paying the Canadian contingents.

Inspection of Foodstuffs.

The measures which have been taken from time to time to facilitate the safe transportation of foodstuffs to European markets have resulted in a large increase in the exportation of several important articles of produce, and it may become necessary in the interest of this very important branch of industry to require a more careful inspection than has been customary for the purpose of maintaining that high standard of excellency heretofore secured, and which is absolutely indispensible if the people of Canada are to increase their large and profitable trade with other countries in these commodities.

Post Office Returns.

I am glad to observe that the returns from the Post Office Department afford good ground for believing that the temporary loss of revenue, caused by the great reduction recently made in letter postage, will speedily be made good by the increased correspondence consequent thereon.

West Indian Trade.

Negotiations are now in progress with several of our sister colonies in the West Indies, which, it is hoped, may result in increasing and developing our trade with those islands and possibly with certain portions of the adjacent continent of South America.

Care of Workingmen.

It gives me great pleasure to observe that, in pursuance of policy which was defined at the last session of Parliament, a carefully devised body of regulations has been adopted applicable to all railways and public works within the Federal jurisdiction, making adequate provision for the sanitary protection and medical care of workingmen.

Labor and Capital.

The attention of Government has been called to the conflicts which occasionally arise between workmen and their employers. While it may not be possible to wholly prevent such difficulties by legislation, my Government think that many of the disputes might be avoided if better provisions could be made for the friendly intervention of a Board of Conciliation, the conclusions of which, while not legally binding, would have much weight with both sides and be useful in bringing an intelligent public opinion to bear on these complicated subjects.

You will be invited to consider whether the Provincial legislation in this matter may not be usefully supplemented by an enactment providing for the establishment of a Dominion tribunal for assisting in the settlement of such questions.

Increase in Settlers.

I am happy to observe that the number of settlers who have taken up lands in Manitoba and in the Northwest Territories is larger than in any previous year, and affords conclusive evidence of the success which has attended the efforts of my government to promote immigration, and I have no doubt that the greatly increased production of the West will henceforth add materially to the growth of the trade of the whole Dominion.

Repatriation.

While the efforts made to secure increased population for the West have thus been successful, much attention has also been devoted to the repatriation of Canadians, who, in less prosperous times, have left Canada. You will be pleased to learn that this work has been attended with satisfactory results.

Railway Commission.

My Government, during the recess, has been giving its attention to the subject of a railway commission. Valuable information has been, and is still being, collected, which, when completed, will be submitted to you and will, no doubt, receive at your hands the earnest consideration which the importance of the subject deserves.

The Canal System.

I am pleased to say that our canal system, connecting the great lakes with the Atlantic seaboard, has been completed so as to allow vessels having a draught of fourteen feet to pass from the head of Lake Superior to the sea. The vigorous and successful prosecution of these works by my Government has already attracted the attention of those interested in Western transportation, and there are good grounds for the hope that, when the necessary facilities for the quick and inexpensive handling of ocean traffic are provided, and which are in progress, Canadian ports will control a much larger share of the traffic of the West.

Banking Laws.

Measures will be introduced to renew and amend the existing banking laws, to regulate the rate of interest payable upon judgments received in courts of law, to provide for the taking of the next decennial census, for the better arrangement of the electoral districts, to amend the criminal code and the laws relating to other important subjects.

To the Commons.

Gentlemen of the House of Commons—

The public accounts will be laid before you, and also the estimates for the coming year, which have been prepared with due regard to economy and the rapid growth of the Dominion.

Honorable Gentlemen of the Senate—
Gentlemen of the House of Commons—

I commend to your consideration the subjects I have mentioned, confiding in your patriotism and judgment.

NEW ERA FOR THE BOTH PARTIES.

Ottawa, Feb. 1.—The city is filling rapidly with people called from all parts of Canada by the opening of Parliament. The trains last night and this morning brought in a great many members.

With ten degrees below zero, excellent sleighing, and a brilliant sun riding in a sky blue as that of summer, it is an ideal winter's day.

The one thing that most surprises a Toronto man in the crowds that sift through others on the floor of the Russell House is not that men have lofty brows or carry themselves with a demeanor that suggests importance, but that so many of them wear coon coats.

Mr. Tarte took up the Ottawa Citizen's reference to the present Government as a "moccasin Government," and without respect to either party specially, or disrespect either, this looks as if it were to be a "coon" session of Parliament.

The leaders of both parties were not on public view this morning. They are making ready, and although it is not known what plan of attack will be made by the Opposition, it is common talk among the members that this session will be the most important ever held on Parliament hill. There is a stifled curiosity and a repressed expectancy, as if a king were ill.

The reason, as near as it can be ascertained, seems to be the feeling that so much that is new has been injected into both parties during the recess, that today opens a new political era for both parties.

The Ameer to Great Britain.

New York, Feb. 1.—The Journal has the following:

Calcutta, Feb. 1.—The Ameer of Afghanistan has sent a special envoy to the Viceroy, asking whether during the present crisis he can count on effective British support in the event of the Russians attacking Herat.

Morning Times

PETERBOROUGH, JANUARY 26, 1900

NEEDLESS ANXIETY.

Sensible Canadians should have learned by this time to take with some reserve the sensational reports sent out from European capitals every few days of designs on the part of one or other of the great Powers against Great Britain, now that her hands are practically tied in South Africa. Russia is credited with being on the eve of a rush on India: yet we are assured by an English General, who should know something of the situation, that such a move on the part of Russia would be practically an impossibility, owing to the immense communications she would have to keep open; and the time it would take her to bring an adequate force to the point of attack. Hostile comments by Russian papers, it must ~~also~~ be remembered, are a long way from meaning an intention on the part of the Russian rulers to engage in a war which might involve the greater part of the world before the conclusion, and which might result in a serious setback to the development of the Russian Empire. There is just as little danger of an attack by France, notwithstanding the intermittent explosions of Parisian spite against England. Paris does not altogether represent France, and it is well known that the French peasant is totally averse to war. French investments, too, count for a good deal; and there is not a little French money sunk in South Africa. It will be remembered that when the outcry was raised against the English occupation of Egypt, one of the strongest factors in restraining France from actual interference was the influence of her people who had invested in the Suez Canal. They knew that their money would be safe with England in possession; and they had no security that it would be so under other conditions.

We do not think that the fear of foreign complication need add to the anxiety which is already felt over the South African reverses. Even with regard to them, there is a tendency to unduly magnify the gravity of the situation. Great Britain is a long way yet from the point where she is fighting for her existence as a great Power: She may have to make greater exertions than she was prepared to make, but it is plain that the nation is ready for any call on its resources, and there is no doubt but that its resources are equal to any call which may be made on them.

[illegible]

The total British loss so far in the war in South Africa, including that at Spion Kop, is about 10,000, Half of these were wounded, most of whom are or will be back in the ranks. The real loss is about 2,500 killed, and about the same number taken prisoners.

Thus in four months' fighting some 5,000 British soldiers have been put out of court. This was a time during which the British had some lessons to learn, and when the Boers would be likely to do most damage; and at that rate it will take several years to weaken the British forces to an extend sufficient to enable the Boers to attack in turn with chance of success.

The Boers have done better than anybody except themselves supposed they would. And they may get Ladysmith. And yet—what finally can they do? They cannot advance anywhere. They must starve faster than the British empire. Their sole possibility in the long run is to tough it out until somebody may interfere successfully. The somebody "would have a time," as the sports say.

FRENCH PATRIOTISM.

In the county council of Prescott and Russell, there are eighteen members.

Ten are French Canadians.

At the meeting of the Council at Vankleek Hill last week, a French Canadian councillor moved, seconded by a French Canadian councillor, that a grant of $100 be made to the National Patriotic Fund for the families of the men who have gone to fight for the empire.

The resolution carried unanimously.

Shake, French Canadians of Prescott and Russell! We're proud of being your fellow-citizens!

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

General Hutton says it will be a mistake for Lt.-Col. Sam Hughes' friends to insist on the production of the correspondence between the general and Hughes, as it will place the colonel in a very unenviable light. It is no longer a question for merely the friends of Lt.-Col. Hughes; they have made complaint, and the public is entitled to know whether the the public is entitled to know whether the complaint is just, seeing that the fairness and common sense are accused of an important part of the administration of a public department which costs the public two or three million dollars a year.

OVER THREE HUNDRED DEATHS

Is the Proud Record With Which the Public Executioner of France Retires.

The dreaded executioner of France, M. Anatole Deibler, has recently retired from office with a record of having officially removed 327 heads with the guillotine. His son is his successor. He retired because he was getting too old for his work. He says his hand now trembles when he is executing a man and he feels that his weakness together with his long and extensive service renders him excusable in retiring. In all his executions he boasts that he never had a mishap, always cutting the head clear in the right place and at the right time. At an execution at Nancy recently he came near bungling the performance on account of the violent struggles of the victim. An occurence of this kind is very rare, for he is said to exercise a strange and almost superhuman power over the men he is about to decapitate.

Deadly Poisons.

The discoverer of prussic acid was instantly killed by inhaling one whiff of his own handiwork.

Pure prussic acid is never sold or handled. The smell of it is always fatal. It kills not in three minutes or half an hour, but the instant it enters the lungs as gas. The mixture ordinarily sold as prussic acid is 98 parts water to 2 parts of the drug. Even in this form it is very deadly. A 20 per cent. mixture of the acid would kill nearly as quickly as if pure.

Atrophine, though it has no harmful odor, is so deadly that as much of it as would adhere to the end of a moistened fore inger would instantly cause death. Cyanide of potassium has a pleasant smell, which is not injurious, but a small quantity swallowed kills at once.

Pureammonia, if inhaled, would cause death almost as quickly as prussic acid.

When a carboy of nitric acid is broken some one has to suffer. It will burn wood, eat through iron plates and destroy whatever it touches.

ENGLAND'S NEW BATTLESHIPS.

Immense Increase to the Navy of Great Britain.

There is already one class of battleship named after famous British Admirals. They were built and completed a decade ago, and are now out of date. They perpetuate the memory of Anson, Camperdown, Benbow, Rodney, Howe, and Collingwood six naval heroes of former days. Other Admirals of the past—Nelson, Hood, Blake, Drake, Raleigh, and St. Vincent—are commemorated in the names of other ships, though the Nelson is but a useless twenty-year-old battleship, and the Raleigh a ship-rigged cruiser of twenty-six years. Now that the Admiralty are about to provide the navy with another group of six battleships, the swiftest and probably most powerful for offence and defence in the world, they have wisely decided to bestow on these newest floating fortresses of the empire names which will keep the nation and the officers and men of the navy in mind of the deeds of six other heroes whose fame is, perhaps, hardly known to the man in the street, but who did valiantly for their country at times when the nation badly needed men of grit, daring, and firmly fixed purpose. The new ships —the earliest most ones of the twentieth century—will revive memories of six giants of the navy of yesterday and the yesterday before that—Montagu and Albemarle—two of Cromwell's Admirals—and Russell, Exmouth, Duncan and Cornwallis. This is a sextet that deserves the honor that is now to be done to their prowess at sea, and the Admiralty will be congratulated upon giving such names to such noble ships.

All these ships are not yet actually under construction, but where, as in at least two cases, the keels have not been laid, large quantities of material have been prepared, and when the ships are laid down in a few weeks, the rate of construction will be rapid. A battleship is not planned and built in a day, nor yet in a year, and though these six ships were authorized many months ago—four of them as a reply to Russia's extraordinary naval vote of July, 1898—there has been a great mass of work with which the officials concerned have had to grapple in the interval. At last, however, it is possible to state that the whole sextet are now under construction at the following yards, the figures in parentheses indicating the periods in which the respective Admirals who are commemorated lived—

Albemarle (1608-1670), Chatman Dockyard.
Montagu (1625-1672), Devenport Dockyard.
Russell (1653-1727), Jarrow-on-Tyne.
Duncan (1731-1803), Blackwall.
Cornwallis (1744-1819), Blackwall.
Exmouth (1758-1833), Birkenhead.

Each of these battleships will have a displacement of 14,000 tons, being 1,000 tons less than the Venerable, recently launched at Chatman, and her sisters at Portsmouth and Devonport, the London and Bulwark. They will not be as small as the six ships of the Canopus class by just over a thousand tons, but they will be more heavily armored, better gunned, and of greater speed, thanks to the continued advance of the everlasting duel between offense and defence, and the progress of marine engineering. The principal dimensions will be—Length between perpendiculars, 405 (being five feet in excess of any previous British battleship); beam, 75 feet 6 inches; mean water draught, 26 feet 6 inches (being 3 inches less than the Venerable, and 1 foot less than the Majestic.) At the bow of each will be a solid steel ram, weighing about thirty tons. The main protection will consist of a belt of armor 290 feet long, consisting of 7 inches of Harveyized steel at the centre where the vital part of the ship need protection, and gradually tapering off towards the bows to 3 inches in thickness. This is a great improvement on the Majestic, whose belt is only 220 feet long, and, though thicker has less power of resistance, owing to the subsequent improvement in the armor. The new battleships will have armored deck, bulkhead, barbettes, and casemates, as in all modern ships of this type.

The armament of the two vessels will excel anything yet attempted in the British navy—not because there is an increase in the main armament compared with other recent battleships but because the guns of the various calibres have been greatly improved. Each modern battleship carries four twelve-inch guns, breech-loading, mounted in armored barbettes, with twelve six-inch quick-firers in casemates. The guns in the six new Admirals will be of similiar calibre, but of an improved type. These new guns are marvellous weapons. London Telegraph.

EASY LIFE IN NICARAGUA.

When the Family Is Broke, the Wife Digs a Little Gold.

"When I was in the Olancho district, in Nicaragua," said a visitor who is largely interested in mining in Central America, "I had an opportunity of seeing how the lazy natives tap nature's till when they need some small change.

"Near our camp by the river was a hut occupied by a typical Honduranian family, consisting of husband and wife, grandfather and grandmother and a dozen or so of assorted children. The only one of the crowd who did anything except rest and smoke was the wife. At intervals of perhaps a week she would sally out with the family tinpan, erstwhile used for cooking, and proceed to an old placer digging on the river bank. There she would squat, throw a few gourdfuls of dirt into the pan, fill it with water and begin the usual circular motion of gold washing.

"She was very skillful and would keep a little sheet of dirty water spraying over the edge like a miniature cataract. When the water was exhausted, a few spoonfuls of sand would be left in the bottom of the pan, and, spreading it out thin with a bit of stick, she would go over it grain by grain, looking for 'color.' Whenever she saw a speck of gold she moistened the stick on her tongue and picked up the particle by adhesion. Each bit of the precious metal was stored away in a quill, plugged with clay at the ends, and I have known her to take out as much as a quarter of an ounce in the course of one day.

"Usually her limit was about $2, and when she got that she stopped. Then the head of the house would arise languidly and start for the nearest store, 12 miles away. Sometimes he would trade the whole amount for whisky; but, as a rule, he brought back tobacco, salt, meal or calico.

"There are hundreds of native families who live in exactly that manner in Olancho. Sometimes the woman will be lucky enough to strike a rich pocket that will yield a dollar or more a pan, but they never dream of washing it out at once and getting a stake. It simply means that they can secure their usual amount with less work."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

NO "PROPERTY" ESCAPES.

Some Queer Things to Be Seen In a Chinese Theater.

Over the audience rests a settled, immovable stillness, unbroken even by a sigh. No expression referable to sorrow, sympathy, joy or tears lightens the blank, dead wall of the faces. The Chinaman is impregnable. Only once do his eyes change, and that is while the property man is on the stage, and he's never off it.

The Chinese property man sees his duty to the management and puts it into practical effect. No "property" shall escape him. He gathers all things by the way. When the Chinese Romeo slays Tybalt, the property man steps on to the stage, gathers up Tybalt's sword, cap and cloak and things and walks off with them. He would enter Macbeth's banquet hall while that weak kneed monarch was exercising Banquo's ghost, gather up the goblets and plates in one arm and Macbeth's chair with the other and carry them away. He would pluck the roses from Elaine's breast; he would take the dagger from Juliet's dead hand; he would interrupt Hamlet's soliloquy in the churchyard with a request for Yorick's skull, and he would interpose in the murder of Desdemona to remove the pillows from her bed.—Saqui Smith in Leslie's Weekly.

London's Great Clock.

Whatever complaints may be made against the tone of Big Ben, the famous London clock—and musicians say it is a terribly bad "E," at any rate—every one will acknowledge that the clock in the house of commons tower is a wonderful timekeeper, not varying a second in time all the year through. The mechanism for setting in motion the massive hammer which brings out the tone of Big Ben's 16 ton bell is very interesting. The striking machinery is driven by weights of about a ton and a half, which hang on a shaft 174 feet deep, and it is so arranged that after the chimes are over the hammer falls on the big bell within one second of Greenwich mean time.

A very pleasant "At Home," in the interest of the choir of All Saint's church, was held at the residence of Mrs. Staunton, Stewart street, Tuesday evening. The affair was a thorough success and was much enjoyed by all present.

SHAVING ACCIDENTS.

THE BARBER DISCUSSES THEM WITH THE MAN IN HIS CHAIR.

Chances to Cut Throats That Are Not Often Taken Advantage Of—Narrow Escapes From Serious Mishaps—A Father's Dream.

"Did it ever strike you," asked the little barber, "how easy it would be for the man that shaves you to kill you?"

The man in the chair sat up quickly and looked carefully at the barber, who was feeling the edge of the razor with one finger. The barber smiled to reassure his customer and said:

"It seems a queer question, I know, but it is a wonder to me that there are not a number of people killed in that way every year. It would be the easiest thing in the world for the barber as he wielded his razor to make one sweep with it and sever the jugular vein, and you would be dead almost on the instant. Suppose, for instance, that the barber should go insane. There would be nothing to prevent his doing such a thing, and you would have no warning nor any opportunity to save yourself.

"There is always a chance of a serious accident happening to the man in the chair. I have seen a number of such accidents and have a horror of even nicking the man I am shaving. In fact, such an occurrence makes me feel out of sorts for the rest of the day. It was only a few days ago that I almost had an accident that gave me a great fright and completely unnerved me. I was shaving a young man, and in passing from one side of the chair to the other a button of my waistcoat caught in his hair. It pulled a trifle, and he moved his head suddenly just as I went to put the blade to his face. I came within an ace of slashing him, and only a quick jump back saved him. The perspiration stood out on me, and I had to call one of the other men to finish shaving my customer.

"But the worst accident I ever saw in a barber shop occurred while I was working in a small town in the west. One of the patrons of the place was a business man whose 8-year-old daughter was lying at the point of death. Her father put in most of his time at her bedside. One afternoon while she was asleep he came in here to get shaved. He was so exhausted through lack of sleep that he fell asleep immediately after he had taken his seat in the chair next to the one behind which I was at work.

"He dreamed that some one had come into the place to tell him that his child had died. With a cry of alarm he started up just as the barber laid the razor against his neck. Into the flesh it sank. He was not yet thoroughly awake, and as he imagined that some one was holding him back from his child he threw out his hand to free himself, and his fingers closed over the blade of the razor. So dazed was he that he could not realize what had happened, but sat there in the chair, with the blood streaming from his throat and fingers.

"The man who had done the cutting was the first to act, although half crazed. He hurried for a doctor while we stanched the flow of blood the best we knew how. Even as the doctor was at work sewing up the wounds a messenger came to say that the little girl had died suddenly in the greatest agony, calling for her father just before she died. He was under the influence of ether at the time and did not know, but afterward, when he heard of the circumstances attending her death, he insisted that he had heard her call as he lay there asleep in the chair and that it was her cry that had caused him to make his sudden movement.

"For years after the accident he continued to shave in the same shop where it had occurred, and it was never mentioned. He carried a reminder of it for the remainder of his life. In addition to the scar on his throat, the fingers of his right hand were all drawn up and useless.

"Sudden movements while in the barber's chair are always apt to be attended with serious results, and I could recall dozens of instances where it has been only the merest chance that has prevented serious if not fatal mishaps. Nine times out of ten where the person getting shaved receives a nick and lays the blame on the barber he should thank the wielder of the razor that it was no worse. The probabilities are that it was quick action by the barber that prevented a bad cut. A slight nick often would have been a case for the doctor or coroner were it not for the watchfulness of the barber. Here yesterday I happened to draw blood from a young fellow's face near his ear, and he made a great fuss about it, until I showed him that it was only the sudden withdrawal of the razor which resulted in the slight nick that prevented him losing a good part of his ear. Then he was grateful and thanked me, besides promising to be more careful in the future.

"But there are other ways the barber has of getting even," continued the little barber after relathering one side of his customer's face. "There is no need of his slashing a man. He can inflict injuries that will make his victim decidedly uncomfortable, and at the same time the latter will not be aware of what is being done." What the barber meant by this last remark his victim did not ask.—New York Sun.

Didn't Laugh With the Rest.

Brown—It was on me.—Columbus (O.) State Journal.

A UNIQUE RAILROAD.

A Little Line in Massachusetts That Is a Curiosity.

"A rather curious and very economically managed railroad is the Nantucket Central, which runs between Nantucket and Siasconset, a distance of about eight miles," remarked an old resident of Martha's Vineyard to the writer recently. "A round-trip ticket on this road costs 80 cents for the passenger and another 80 cents for his trunk. A second trunk is carried for 30 cents, and a third for 20 cents, but as the schedule allows for only three trunks the conductor has, on several occasions, ruled that at the fourth trunk he must begin over again at 80 cents.

"Only one pass is issued on the Nantucket Central, and that is used by the proprietor of the road. The conductor is the general manager of the road, train dispatcher and division superintendent. The engineer is master mechanic, chief of transportation and overseer of the roadbed and track. The fireman drives the express wagon and keeps the books between trips. Last year some 3[illegible]0 round trips were made, and a novelty introduced during the past summer was the entire abolition of the steam whistle, partly because of its waste of steam and partly because it frightened the blue and other fish off shore.

"The rolling stock of the road consists of two locomotives and six or seven antiquated passenger cars. The earnings of the Central last year amounted to about $16,000, and the operating expenses were a little over $6,000."

THE MOUNTED BOER.

His Horse Better Trained Than Any Other Mount in the World

The Boer has the natural genius for war that our Comanche and Apache possess. He can pick out a strong place for defence as well and as quickly as any member of the United States corps of engineers. His courage is beyond doubt and his skill in his peculiar tactics—the tactics that made General N. B. Forrest the foremost cavalry officer of his time in the Confederacy—is of the highest quality.

The Boer has the advantage as a mounted infantryman that Stuart's and Forrest's troopers had in our civil war. He is a good shot, knows perfectly the capacity of his rifle, its range and how far he can risk it, and has been familiar with the horse he rides since its colthood. All the Boer's horses are trained to stand perfectly still when the rider dismounts and throws the reins on the pommell of the saddle. He will not even flinch at the sight of a charging lion, and has stood still until his rider could mount with half a hundred naked savage warriors within 60 yards of him, coming at the run, with a hideous and charging yell. He knows his master's whistle, and the writer has seen a horse called from 65 others to his rider 100 yards away by a low whistle. To a stranger his horse is vicious and intractable, biting and striking furiously on occasion at an unknown man, who was vainly trying to mount. A few words in Dutch from his owner, and the beast was as quiet and tractable as any pony.

Outlived the Romance.

Mrs. Marmaduke (enthusiastically)—See those young lovers sitting so close together on that bench, Tom? How beautifully the future opens before them! How happy they are! To them every thing is possible!

Mr. Marmaduke—And nothing probable.—Harper's Bazar.

Forgotten Her Calling.

"Yes, the doctor ordered him sent to the hospital. He wasn't getting the right kind of care at home."

"Let's see. Whom did he marry?"

"His wife was a trained nurse."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

ENGINEERS' IRON NERVES

CRUCIAL SECONDS IN THE LIVES OF VETERANS OF THE LEVER.

Few of Them Have Been Found Wanting When the Emergency Came.

To the engineer belongs the most hazardous and at the same time the most responsible task of any of the men who man the train, and the passengers on one of the great flyers, as they loll back in their seats reading the most recent work of ficton, or gazing placidly forth at the scenery, scarcely ever give a thought to the fact that ahead of them there is a dust and oil-begrimed man who, for the time being, literally carry their lives in the hollow of his sweaty hand. It is extraordinary how few cases there are where engineers have been found derelict in the moment of wrecks since railroads were first introduced into the country, but the record of the number of engineers who have failed when the crucial test came is infinitesimal.

When once danger appears in front an engineer's duty is, first, to close the throttle, second, to apply the air-brakes, third, to reverse the engine—that is, to throw over the reversing lever, which enables the engine to run in the opposite direction from which it had been going, fourth, to reopen the throttle. To do these four acts calls but for a small fraction of time, but where wrecks result the danger is usually so imminent as frequently not to leave even sufficient interval to accomplish them, and often when the ruins have been cleared away the body of the faithful guardian has been discovered with his hand stiff in death on the throttle, reverse lever or brake and bearing silent witness as to how far he had got toward the accomplishment of that duty which he had yielded his life to perform

Some are Reckless.

Many engineers are reckless and will take awful chances. At one time a certain driver was taking through a special train consisting of four empty freight cars and a caboose. The station master told him that the down train was a trifle late, and due at the next station beyond, seven miles away at 2.37 o'clock. Glancing at his watch, the engineer said he had nine minutes, and decided to take the chance. He had to cross a bridge just beyond the town he was leaving, and midway across he began to increase his speed. As the engine struck ground again on the other side and they headed straight up the river's valley he threw her wide open and gave his engine ever ounce of steam there was in the boiler. Three miles farther on when running to the limit of his capacity, he struck the down train head on. Both engineers and firemen were killed outright, and the engines reduced to a condition that rendered them only fit for the scrap heap.

Strange to say, no passengers or other member of either crew were killed outright or afterward died as the result of injuries received. Only the shoulders and head of the fireman of the special were ever found. He had been driven into the door of the firebox feet first, but had stuck at the shoulders. The white-hot fire within had completely incinerated the rest of his body. To look at the door of a fire-box such a casuality as that seems all but impossible, the opening looks so small. In reality, however, it is large enough, as any railroad man can tell you.

Watch Was To Blame.

The watch of the engineer of the special when found was still running, and was four minutes behind. It was to this error of his timepiece that the tragic death of himself and his three companions was due.

In daylight it is the habit of the engineer to follow with the eye the glistening track of rails over which he must travel. Should a rail be misplaced, it would break this line of light and betray itself to the watchful man in time to stop and save his train. This particular wreck, however, resulted from that curse and dread of all railway runners—the washout. The culvert which caused it was a short one, its width being hardly greater than the combined length of engine and tender. The masonry had been carried away, but the fishplates and spikes holding firm the rails still crossed the gully. This held the rail line of light true, and in consequence the engineer was well up to the danger before he realized it. He was able to stop the train, but to do so had to go into the ditch himself, although, fortunately, he did not lose his life.

He was washed out of his cab window by the flood. His jumper catching over a stone, the trani newsboy fortunately found him in time to save him from death by drowning. So close a thing was it that when the train came to a full stop the front wheels of the forward truck of the baggage car was hanging over the opening made by the washout. No one was injured save the engineer, who escaped with a couple of broken ribs and a dislocated shoulder. He completely recovered, however, and is one of the most trusted egineers on that particular line to this city.

An Amusing Incident.

A rather amusing thing occurred in connection with this wreck. There was little coal in the tender, what was left being in the rear end, and the fireman had gone back to shovel it forward. The impetus of the engine caused it to jump clear across the gully and stick its nose in the opposite bank. The rear part, being the heavier, dropped first, carrying the forward part of the tender with it, causing tender and engine to shut up like a jack knife. The fireman was tossed clean over the engine and alighted uninjured on the track beyond the washout.

He was a lanky, six-foot Irishman, with carroty hair and the brogue still strong upon him. In telling of his experience afterward he said—

"Sure, it was a quare expayrience there was. I one minit stooping wid me shovel over the coal hape and the next minit there was I and me shovel and the coal oll flying troo de air, and each trying to see who would get there first. Glory be that I was not hurt at all, at all. It's a brave man is Moike (the engineer); fine, big, brave man, sor. The last thing he said was—what do you think it was, sor, and him expecting to die the next minit, at that, sor? Widout turning his head he yells out to me, 'Jump, you red-headed scoundrel!' he yells, and while I didn't have no toime me, I take it very koindly that he thought of me as he did." The tears stood in the honest fellow's eyes as he told the story.

A TOUCHING INCIDENT

Scheme of 10 Little Girls to Prolong the Life of the Pope sent for the young misses, thanked them for their beautiful sacrifice, and gave them his blessing. He also asked them for a copy of the document they had filed with the priest, and has placed it among the archives of the Vatican.

It is said that His Holiness was very much affected by this little incident, and has suggested that the Almighty may see fit to answer the innocent prayers of His little servants.

I heard a pretty story at the papal legation the other day about ten little girls who belong to the noble families of Rome, writes William E. Curtis. As the Pope was approaching his 90th birthday they heard their fathers and mothers discussing the probability of his living to be 100 years old. In reply to their questions they were told such things were ordered by God—that He fixed the span of human life and decided when the usefulness of good men should terminate. This set the little ones thinking and it was suggested and decided among them that they would ask God to take one year off each of their lives and give it to the Pope in order that he might live 10 years longer and complete the century. Their parents approved of the plan and the 10 little girls went to the parish church and there made vows and prayers that their lives might be shortened in order that the life of the Holy Father might be prolonged. To make the arrangement more formal, they drew up an agreement and signed it in legal form and left it with the parish priest. The Pope, having heard of this singular act of devotion,

We Lost the Hole.

Ed Tufts of Los Angeles was playing golf with a friend. When he drove from the third teeing ground, he sliced the ball badly and sent it away to one side. It stopped in front of a grazing cow, and Tufts came up just in time to see it disappear into the bovine mouth. When his opponent had made his stroke, Tufts untethered the cow and, with many sounding thwacks of his club, drove the beast to the third hole. There he made her disgorge the ball and, neatly holing it, announced that he had made the hole in two strokes. His opponent calmly finished the hole in seven and claimed the hole.

"But I made it in two," protested Tufts gleefully.

"No, you didn't," declared the other. "You made it in 39. You hit that cow 37 times, for I counted every stroke," and Tufts conceded the hole.—San Francisco Argonaut.

GLIMPSES OF SOUTH AFRICA.

In Peace and in War—A Splendid Lot of Views

Southern Africa, that enormous expanse of tropically verdant territory extending from the Lambesi River to the Cape of Good Hope, has for a century or more lain dormant to the eyes of the civilized world. Only within the past two decades has public attention been drawn to the wonderful natural resources and mineral wealth of this wild and rugged land, and yet, within this period, marvelous creation of brilliant modern cities have supplanted the desert lands and haunts of savage tribes. The steady march of civilization, the all-pervading ambition to accumulate the wealth of diamonds and gold that lay beneath the crust of this benighted land, each has borne its part in the metamorphosis and heralded to the world the wonderful possibilities of that "Dark Continent" for the energy and enterprise that the 20th century will bring to light.

In no other country of the world has progress been marked with such adversity and strife as Africa. From the time the early Dutch settlers landed in the Cape Colony up to the present, there has existed almost a constant state of warfare; the natives disputing the advance of the Dutch and they in turn resenting the inroads of civilization. In spite of this, so strenuous were the efforts of the colonists in their determination to turn to account the beauties and resources of the land of their adoption, that today they enjoy the fruits of their successes in a paradise of tropical vegetation, a salubrious climate and surrounded by the highest advantages of intellectuality and luxuries of civilization.

Cape Town is the metropolis and seat of government of the Cape Colony. Its historical past and present is firmly linked in the traditions of the early Dutch and the Huguenots. True, the old forts and buildings of distinctly Dutch architecture still remain but magnificent edifices of the most modern type, beautiful botanical gardens and the public improvements are evidences of the wonderful advance of civilization.

Port Elizabeth is the Liverpool of South Africa. It is a great commercial center, coupled with some of the largest shipping interests in the world; a city of the most modern type, essentially English in character, and possessing some of the largest as well as the most architecturally magnificent buildings and public institutions in South Africa.

Natal is the beautiful, tropical Garden Colony. Its luxurious vegetation and glorious climate, its wide avenue of trees and fine buildings, the native Zulu servants and the picturesque costumes of the Orientals, lend an ear of peace and tranquility, while the marks of civilization and progress are in evidence at every turn.

Johannesburg, the Golden, with its fine architectural creations, public institutions and parks, possesses many attractions that easily place it as the foremost city of South Africa. Its great industry, mining, the apparently inexhaustible veins of gold-bearing quartz, in which upwards of seven hundred millions of dollars are invested, have been the attraction for the thousands and thousands of "Uitlanders," whose "grievances" are substantially the cause for the cruel war between Briton and Boer, the battles of which have been ranked as the "bloodiest of the century."

So great has been the interest manifested in South Africa and the progress of the war, and so eager the thirst for information, coupled with the demand for a Pictorial History incident to the scenes of warfare, that the publication of "Glimpses of South Africa" has been undertaken upon a scale of grandeur, fidelity and completeness never before though of, involving as it has an expense of extraordinary magnitude. In order that the work might be absolutely reliable and thorough in its character, the publishers have contracted for its authorship with Mr. Wymble Flemming, an Afrikander, whose authority upon South African matters is world-widely acknowledged. This gentleman,—born in the Cape Colony, having travelled over nearly every inch of the country south of the Lambesi River and lived in South Africa for nearly thirty years, with an extensive newspaper experience in Africa, England and America, the author of many interesting sketches of South African life and scenery, formerly connected with the consular service at Port Elizabeth, whose comments on the war have been a ofavorably received by the American press, and whose magnificent collection of photographs will appear in this work,—will present South Africa as it is today, with views of everything of public interest, including most of the important scenes of battle and a graphically illustrated description of each stage in the progress of the war.

This great work is published in serial form, and when complete will comprise the most magnificent collectoin of photographic reproductions of the British-Boer war and South Africa obtainable in this country. Portfolios distributed by the Morning Times. For particulars see announcement on another page of this issue.

Boers in Ottawa.

Ottawa, Jan. 31.—When official confimation was made on Sunday of Buller's reverse, some New Edinburgh Dutch people, with pro-Boer sympathies, ran up a large Boer flag in the German section on McKay street. The flag, with stripes of re, white, blue and green, was allowed to fly most of the day, but early in the evening a city postman, residing in New Edinburgh, headed a party of youths of that part of the city, who tore the flag down and carried it away.

Rumours Via Paris.

Paris, Jan. 31.—There is a rumor in official circles, but not traceable to authoritive sources, that a rebellion has occurred among the Soudanese troops in Khartoum. There are only 150 white British soldiers there under command of a major. The Soudanese troops consists of two battalions, with a total of 1,500 men.

Constantinople, Jan. 31.—Abdurrahman Pasha, the Minister of Justice, has refused the request of Italian Ambassador Pansa that the Italian girl, Sylvia Gem-Pell, whom a Turkish officer placed in his harem, be surrendered. It is alleged that the girl is of age and has embraced Islamism.

It is expected that the matter will cause a rupture of diplomatic relations between Italy and Turkey.

New York, Jan. 31.—A special from Rome says that Pope Leo has sent to the Empress of China a collossal and artistic vase, having previously received a rich gift from Her Majesty. This exchange of presents marks the conclusion of the concordant between China and the Vatican.

Bearing the Gallant Dead.

San Francisco, Jan. 31.—With her flags at half-mast the United States transport Thomas entered this harbour last night, bearing the remains of General Henry W. Lawton, Major John A. Logan, jr., Lieut. Bennet and Dr. John J. Armstrong.

In the cabin of the Thomas were about 30 passengers, including Mrs. Lawton and her children.

Arrangements have ben mad to convey the bodies of General Lawton and Dr. Armstrong in a special train. Gen. Shafter has been especially detailed to accompany the remains east.

AT HALLS'S BRIDGE AND ENNISMORE.

MEETINGS OF THE WEST PETERBOROUGH FARMERS' INSTITUTE.

Addresses of Interest by Messrs Orr and Somerville — Largely Attended and Successful Meetings at Ennismore on Saturday.

The first of the supplementary meetings of the West Peterborough Farmers' Institute was held at Hall's Bridge on Friday afternoon last. It was very cold and stormy and the attendance was not large. The meeting was opened by the president, Mr. E. M. Elliott, with a short address. He introduced the first speaker of the afternoon, Mr. J. E. Orr, of Fruitland, who gave an address on "The Care of Fruit Trees."

The speaker described the different soils to which the different varieties of fruit are adapted. He pointed out that three-fourths of the orchards were starved for the want of manure. Farmyard manure should be spread all over the land, not merely around the trunks of the trees. One of the very best manures for an orchard is ashes. He would not advise the planting of same bearings in large blocks, rather in alternate rows. Orchards should be cultivated, not left in sod. The cultivation sets free a great amount of valuable material and makes it available for use. It is a bad practice to prune a tree too severely one year and then let it go for years; far better to prune some every season. By annual pruning it is possible to grow a tree of any desired shape. The winter is a good time but the taking off of large limbs should be done in June.

On Dairying.

Mr. N. G. Somerville gave an address on "What the Farmer of today has to do to secure more profit in dairying." He gave the address from the standpoint of a cheese and butter maker and first quoted statistics to show the wonderful growth and development in the dairying industry. He advised every farmer to select a breed of cattle that he liked best and to keep only the best of that class. Cows should milk at least ten months of the year if properly attended to. Milk should be paid for according to quality. Some cheese has been sent to England that was not up to the mark and in order to hold that market we must send only the very best quality. He emphasized the fact that the farmer must supply the cheesemaker with the first quality of milk if they expect the cheese to be A 1. They must work in union to get the best results. If cheesemakers and inspectors find the milk from any party faulty they should point out the fault to the farmer. The milk should be properly aerated and stirred, not allowing the cream to form on the top of the can. He condemned in strong terms the feeding of turnips to dairy cows, also the sending of such milk with that of cows that had not been fed turnips. Sugar beets or mangolds can be fed without any danger of spoiling what would otherwise by a strictly first class article. He favored the use of the Babcock tester and the lactometer. Allow cows access to pure water at all times. Stables should be kept scrupulously clean. All milk stands should be covered and should not be within 100 yards of a pig pen or barnyard.

Evening Meeting.

The evening meeting at Hall's Bridge was much more largely attended, there being an audience of about eighty-five persons. The evening was opened by the president, after which there was instrumental music by Miss and Messrs. Blewett.

Influence of Farm Life.

Mr. Somerville gave an address on the "Influence of Farm Life." He pointed out the importance of keeping the best and brightest boys on the farm. Give them something to have as their own, a few hives of bees, some poultry or anything they choose, to make a little money for their own use. The moral influence of farm life is one of the grandest that a young man can have. The population of the towns and cities of Ontario has increased within the past ten years about 150,000 while that of the townships has decreased 60,000. This should not be the case, nor would it be if proper care were taken in making the farm work attractive. There should be a liberal supply of books, papers, magazines, music and games of all kinds. Every farmer should be a member of the Farmers' Institute and have the advantage of all the reports and bulletins published by the Department of Agriculture. These are supplied to members free.

Miss Cora Eastland sang a couple of songs very prettily.

Spraying Orchards.

Mr. Orr gave an address on "Spraying Apple Orchards." His address was a very interesting one. Every one should at least grow enough fruit for his own family consumption. He described the insects that prey upon the trees. The best way to combat them is by the use of the spray pump. The first spraying should be just before the opening of the buds, the second before the blossom opens, number three just after the blossom falls, the fourth a few days later or at intervals of ten or twelve days.

Miss Cora Eastland contributed an instrumental solo. This was followed by an address by Mr. H. C. Garbutt and an instrumental selection by Miss and Messrs. Blewett. An interesting address was also given by Mr. Dench.

On motion a hearty vote of thanks was tendered to all those who had contributed to the evening's entertainment, also to the trustees of the school in which the meeting was held.

AT ENNISMORE.

Afternoon and evening meetings of the Institute were held at Ennismore on the afternoon and evening of Saturday. They were the first that the Institute has held at this point and were a success of the most gratifying kind. The people turned out in great numbers and displayed great interest. The visitors were given a hearty welcome. The attendance at the afternoon meeting was about one hundred.

Fruit Trees.

Mr. Orr gave an address on the "Care of Fruit Trees." The three essentials of fruit intended for the English market are quality, size and contour. Rye or rape make a very good crop to be sown in the orchards and should be put in about the middle of August. They hold the snow and grow up again in the spring to be plowed under.

Mr. N. G. Somerville spoke on "The Milk Producer's Responsibility." The dairy industry is one of the most important of the farm. Milk cannot be too well cared for until delivery to ensure its arrival in first class condition. The proper time to aerate is immediately after milking. It also requires straining as soon as the milking is over. Cleanse the udder before milking. Have all utensils in good condition. Avoid wooden pails and old rusty cans.

Father McColl.

Rev. Father McColl made a few remarks. He complemented the gentlemen who had given such excellent addresses. He impressed upon the audience the necessity of doing well everything they undertook. He also gave an illustration of the amount of profit that can be derived from scientific dairying.

Evening Meeting.

In the evening there was an audience of nearly three hundred people. The president in his opening remarks expressed pleasure at the large attendance. The audience was then entertained with an excellently rendered orchestral selection.

Mr. J. E. Orr gave an address on "The Bacon Hog." He illustrated his lecture by a number of charts and explained the most desirable type of hog.

The Misses Soollard rendered a very pleasing duet.

Paying For Milk.

Mr. N. G. Somerville gave an address on the subject of paying for milk according to quality. He commenced by complementing the audience on the interest they seemed to take in this important branch. To pay for milk according to quality is no doubt a step in the right direction as pooling the milk by the old way is not just. The best way to find the value of the milk is by using the babcock tester. The farmer should realize that good milk is a matter of dollars and cents to himself as he can readily tell which cows are paying from those which are not. Some samples will test 2 1-2 per cent., while others will go as high as 4 per cent., and it is not fair to the owner of the latter milk to pool his with that of the former. If a farmer does not try to produce milk at the least possible cost he cannot hope to control the market. It is from the cheapness of production that the cost must come. Farmers should make use of the cheese factory in the summer and the creamery in the winter. All factories should adopt the test system in paying their patrons. It is important to have a competent, reliable man to operate the tester, otherwise it would be dangerous. A man who adulterates his milk should be severely punished.

Some questions were asked by Rev. Father McColl and answered very satisfactorily.

Mr. J. K. Galvin contributed a song in capital style.

Mr. J. E. Orr gave an address on the common insects that attack our fruit trees.

Rev. Father McColl gave a short but stirring speech in which he stated that he was highly delighted with the lucid manner in which the speakers had handled the subjects that had been assigned them. He urged the better caare of stock. Farmers should be either dairymen or breeders of beef cattle. The animals should be well housed, no more being kept than could be cared for comfortably. Very little trouble would transform some of the present log barns into comfortable quarters for the stock.

Mrs. D. Crough gave a reading which was much appreciated.

The president, Mr. Elliott, tendered the thanks of the Institute officers to Rev. Father McColl and those who had furnished the splendid entertainment that enlivened the meetings.

The meeting broke up with the singing of "God Save the Queen."

TERRIBLE SCENES OF WAR.

Sir Wm. McCormac Describes the Horrors of the Military Hospital.

London, Jan. 31.—Sir William MacCormac in the current number of the Lancet gives a most interesting description of the medical work following upon the reverse at the Tugela River—

A VERY DISTRESSING SIGHT.

The cannonading had ceased about one o'clock (he writes.) We found Chieveley Station occupied by a hospital train. There were 119 wounded in the train. They had been taken on board direct from the field, the train having run into the actual scene of action; in fact, it was ordered back by the principal medical officer, two shells having fallen close to it. This train carried the first results of the battle and it was a very distressing sight. The wounded filled the carriages just as they had come from the field; every wound had been dressed extremely well under fire. A noticeable feature was the fact that very few of these dressings needed re-adjustment. Rifle-splints, tourniquets, and other dressings had been adjusted carefully and deliberately, under circumstances of great difficulty and danger. We saw the train start away for Estcourt (it was back again at Chieveley last night.)

To return to ourselves, we walked to the field hospitals of the 4th, 5th, and 6th Brigades, situated about three miles from Chieveley. The state of these hospitals at the time of our visit (half-past four p.m.) is almost beyond description. Each of the three operating tents contained two operating tables and as fast as a patient was taken off the table another took his place. Awaiting their turn the wounded were lying outside in rows which were being continually augmented by the civilian bearers coming in from the field. As each wounded man reached the hospital he was served with a hot cup of bovril, large cans of which were boiling outside the tents. The way in which the wounded men had been dressed upon the field and each man ticketed with the nature of his wound, his name, and regiment was excellent and was very useful for identification. The seriously wounded could at once by discriminated from the more trivial cases. The praise of the regimental officers and men in respect to the way in which the Army Medical Corps had done their duty on heavy fire was unanimous and unstinted. An officer of the Devons described the behavior of the medical officers as magnificent.

800 PATIENTS IN THE DAY.

The spectacles at the field hospitals was most painful. Ambulance wagon after wagon and stretcher squads after stretcher squad came in while I was there, pouring in the wounded, some of whom had died on the way and could unfortunately only be carried to the mortuary tents. The work performed in the operating tents was in my opinion of great efficiency, the operations being deliberately carried out with skill and despatch under very trying circumstances of heat, hurry, and excitement all round. The Royal Army Medical Corps officers of these hospitals had started their surgical work about three a.m., and when I visited them in the evening, they were still hard at work, having had no food meanwhile and no time for rest, and the work went on for many hours afterwards. I gave advice in many cases where I was asked, and advised against operations in the case of a poor fellow with a fearful shell wound of the hip. Altogether some 800 patients passed through the field hospitals during the day. The men showed the utmost pluck and endurance; there was not the slightest despondency the predominant feeling being anxiety to return and fight again. This was very splendid of them after such a day as they had experienced, and makes one very proud of their very fine mettle.

ABOARD THE HOSPITAL TRAINS.

The hospital trains rapidly took them away. Each train carries on an average 100 cases, and is equipped with every possible requirement, besides iced soda, champagne, soup, and other comforts in abundance, so I am certain that all that human foresight could have done was accomplished during the journey for the mitigation of the sufferings of the wounded. Eight hundred wounded were cleared from the field by six p.m., the action having finished at two p.m. By midnight on the second day after the battle the last wounded man will have left the hospitals at the front and will have been conveyed to Estcourt, Pietermaritzburg, Durban and the other hospital ships. We have returned weary and sad for such grievous loss and suffering. It was indeed a piteous spectacle of suffering and death; but one could console oneself somewhat by the reflection that so much had been accomplished to mitigate the distress.

HORRORS OF A BATTLEFIELD.

In a letter home, Sapper W. Massage, of Eastbourne, with the Modder River force, writes of the attack of the Highland Brigade—

The worst sight any one can see is the battlefield two or three days after the battle. The dead lie all around with the sun shining on their faces and bodies; it makes the place unbearable. It turns them as black as charcoal, and the stench—I can't describe the horrors; no one knows what it is unless they have been on one when the fighting is going on, or soon after it is over. What with the dead lying all around you, and the wounded moaning and crying for water, it is enough to turn the heart of the strongest man. It was a horrible sight to see some of the poor fellows. Some had their heads blown off, others their arms missing.

LILY LAKE LITERARY SOCIETY

A Very Successful Taffey Pull and Entertainment.

The Society is again in full swing, as shown by the large attendance on Thursday, Jan. 24th. The North Monaghan Society very ably helped with the programme. At the close all testified to the good quality of Mr. Job's taffy sticks, and with the exception of a few lock-jaws, everything passed off well. The following programme was rendered—

The tea meeting closed with "God Save the uQeen."

Lady Audrey Buller.

No one watches the progress of Sir Redvers Buller and his forces more eagerly then the wife of the general, Lady Audrey Buller. Lady Buller is a woman of unassuming and engaging personality, thoroughly domestic and interested, as all good women are apt to be, in numerous philanthropical movements.

At present she takes an active part in the distribution of the funds of the Soldiers and Sailor's Families Association. She takes charge of the cases which call for attention in her husband's command, and she has done a great deal to alleviate the suffering arising from the war.

Recently Lady Buller and the ladies of the Aldershot branch of the association entertained the whole of the wives and children of soldiers who have left the district for South Africa. At each of the five parties given the guests averaged 500. The proceedings began with tea, after which a cinematograph entertainment was given. Finally Lady Audrey distributed gifts to each guest before departure. For the women there were packets of tea and warm garments, and for each child a box of sweets with a portrait enclosed of Sir Redvers Buller. The children's gifts were personal presents from Lady Buller.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

Surrendered.

A battle royal occurred on the veldt in the rear of the City Hotel on Wednesday evening between a Cavan blazer and a local Boer sympathizer. The battle was in progress when the forces of Chief Roszel arrived on the scene, when the warriors surrendered unconditionally and were taken to the lodge of the Chief, where they were paroled until to-morrow. Police Magistrate Dumble will act as referee.

The deceased was a nativ eof England, and was about fifty-eight years of age. He had been unwell for about a year. The funeral was conducted by the Sons of England, of which Society the deceased was a member.

Impaled on a Stake.

A shocking accident occurred early yesterday morning at Kennedy & Nicholl's camp, about four miles southwest of Omemee, the victim being Albert Duftie, well-known in this town. It appears that the unfortunate man was driving a team, and having taken on a load of cedar logs, was just about to start off when the binder pole broke. When he felt the logs spreading Duftie leaped off the load into the deep snow, alighting on a sharp root, which penetrated his body a considerable distance.

He was conveyed to his home in Omemee as speedily as possible, where he was attended by Dr. McAlpine, and the resident physicians. It was at first feared that he would not survive the injury, but later reports are favorably. He rested well last night, and as yet there are no signs of serious inflamation. Mr. Duffty is a son-in-law of Mr. Mort. Andrus, formerly of this town, but now residing in Omemee.—Lindsay Post.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

Basketball.

The basket ball game to-night will be between Wards One and Four.

Hockey.

The Colts leave for Kingston this morning on the G. T. R. via Belleville, to play the second half of the round with R. M. C. Cadets. The following is the team—Goal, Miller; point, Cavanagh; cover point, H. Armstrong; forwards, Morgan, Lynch, Whitcroft and Lynch.

The hardware hockey team are getting down to hard pan, and soon will be "fit as nails."

If Waterloo will look after that Toronto Simcoe team, Peterborough Colts will see that U. C. C. drops out, and then for the final with Waterloo.

The Belleville team is in the final for the intermediate championship of Canada, as they have the bye in the semi-finals.

Keene and Campbellford hockeyists have arranged for a match in Campbellford for to-night. They are the only teams to play in the final games, and this will be the first.

Mr. J. H. Brandon, President of the Fenelon Falls Hockey Club, was in town yesterday and told the Times that they had a fast team in that village. He said that the boys would like to get a match on with our Colts team here and thought they would make it lively for our boys.

Appeal Dismissed.

The case of the Crown against Mrs. St. Clair, came up before the Court of Appeal on Tuesday in Toronto. The case was judgment on appeal by defendant from order of Falconbridge, J., refusing motion upon return of a habeas corpus to discharge defendant from custody. The defendant was convicted and sentenced to six months imprisonment in the Mercier Reformatory for being an inmate of a bawdy house on Stewart street in the Town of Peterborough. It was contended that there was no evidence before the Magistrate upon which to convict, and that the evidence in the case of Reg. v. McDonald, the defendant in which case was the keeper of the house, could not be read against the defendant without her consent, and that there was no evidence before the Magistrate upon which he could find that the house, 231 Stewart street in Peterborough, was on 21st Nov. 1899, a house of ill-fame, the only evidence being that in Reg. v. McDonald, upon which a conviction for being a keeper of a house on the 5th November was made. This defendant was arrested on 20th November, and was in custody on the day and night of 21st November. Held, that the evidence in Reg. v. McDonald was properly admitted on consent, and that in the evidence the proper conclusion was that the house was a house of ill-fame and the prisoner an inmate. The court pointed out that the writ of habeas corpus, which purported to be issued under the statute of Charles had not been assigned by the Judge granting it which is essential, and that the return of the writ was defective, the jailer having merely attached to the writ a copy of conviction. Appeal dismissed. E. B. Stone, Peterborough, for defendant. John R. Cartwright, Q.C., for Crown.

Local Talent Appreciated.

In referring to a recently held Red Cross Fund concert in Omemee the Mirror refers as follows to the Peterborough talent present: Major Miller, in his patriotic recitation, "The Widow of Windsor,' Glencoe, etc., received hearty encores, and more than sustained the elocutionary end of the programme. Among the most enjoyable numbers were those in character by Mr. Walter Stocker. Mr. Stocker has a voice well suited for ballad songs and he used it to good effect. Mr. Morphet pleased his hearers in several well rendered selections. The quartette, composed of Messrs. Crane, Skitch, Morphet and Rev. W. L. Armitage was well received and each time had to respond to encores. Much credit is due Major Miller for the splendid tableaux given illustrating the sterner side of Tommy Atkins' life. Messrs. Crane, Caldwell, and Norris were the efficient accompanists.

County Maps.

Will Amend the Law.

A circular is being prepared by the Ontario License Department to be sent to the inspectors throughout the province regarding the question of searching for liquor. It is pointed out that in a recent decision the Court held that it was not competent under the License act for a stranger to assist the license inspector in a search. This is brought to the attention of the inspectors, who are instructed to secure a constable or policeman when they need help in making a search for liquor. This is a useless piece of legislation as inspectors seldom search for liquor.

Quite a crop of ice is being taken from the Little Lake, the blocks being about fifteen inches in thickness.

A meeting of the Property Committee of the Town Council was held last night, and routine business was transacted.

The annual Harwood ball took place at the Lakeview House, Harwood, on Wednesday last, and was a great success.

The Times received a poem, entitled, "Why do I Live?" We might answer the writer that it is probably because he sent his doggeral verses by mail.

The old adge of the bear and his shadow will be revived to-day, as it will be Candlemas day. Sunshine or shadow to rule the weather for the following six weeks.

Complaints have frequently been made regarding profanity, which is so prevalent amongst the young boys of the town. The police should make an example of one or two.

Winter traffic over the Grand Junction seems to be the largest since the road was built. Night trains have been running continuously for the past six months or more.

There is not so large a crop of grip as might be expected, considering the sudden changes in the weather which have so frequently occurred during the past three weeks.

A team belonging to Mr. Martin Leahy, of Douro, ran away yesterday, and crossed the bridge, where they came in contact with a telephone pole and were captured. Little damage was done.

Business men have been devoting some timme to "stock taking," or making an inventory of the goods in their possession, to ascertain whether their wealth has increased or diminished during the year.

The Ladies' Aid of the George street Methodist church will hold a "Mock Parliament" about the first week in March. This was given a year or so ago and was a great success and a pleasant evening is assured.

The other day when Mr. Smith, in the Central School, was explaining "cacoons" to his class, he inquired what butterfly is the cacoon of? One little boy near the foot of the class said, slowly and respectfully, "My papa says that all cacoons look aloke to him."

"Shoul Ladies Propose," was the subject of an interesting debate before a Belleville society on Monday night. Well, seeing as the girls are said to be so homely down there we suppose its only fair to allow them that privilege. But it must not be taken as a precedent elsewhere.

The sympathy for the Hon. A. G. Blair, Minister of Railways and Canals, in the serious illness of Mrs. Blair, is not confined to those who know her personally, but extends to all parts of the country. After the death of her son, whose loss was most keenly felt, Mrs. Blair became ill with nervous prostration, and later she was attacked by pneumonia. A specialist from Montreal, Dr. Stewart, is in attendance, and latest reports indicate that she is not yet out of danger.

Bible Society Meeting.

At the annual meeting of the Peterborough branch of the Upper Canada Bible Society, held on Wednesday evening, Sheriff Hall was re-elected President; Rev. J. G. Potter Vice-President and Mr. John Crane treasurer. The financial statement showed total receipts of $197.12, and payments of $195. A very interesting address was delivered by Rev. Mr. Bowles, of Toronto. The names of the collectors are—Miss Butcher, Miss Walton, Miss Miller, Miss E. Creba, Mr. Wm. Fowler, Mrs. Stewart, Miss Wand, Miss Adams, Miss Wright, Mrs. Hamilton and Mrs. Chamberlain.

Steel Combs.

A man who saw in a sidewalk showcase some steel combs and who wondered what steel combs could be used for found upon inquiry that they were used by furriers in combing furs. There was one of these combs that looked much like a comb of the ordinary kind, coarse toothed for half its length and finer toothed the other half. And then there was one comb that had teeth for half its length, the solid end serving as a handle.

There are other steel combs that are used for a similar purpose, as steel combs made to comb dogs with. The dog comb looks somewhat like the fine toothed comb in its general shape, but it is larger, toothed on one side only and coarser toothed than the so called fine comb. The untoothed side combs of this sort are used on various kinds of dogs, including, for instance, long haired dogs like the French poodle.—New York Sun.

ege rations of bread and meat have only now been enforced. Oats intended for horses are now saved to supply the troopers if needed. Tinned milk and matches are commandeering. Liquor is scarce. Lady Sarah Wilson is pluckily attending the hospital work and constantly passing to and fro under shell fire."

London, Feb. 3, 4.30 a.m.

Heliographs received from Ladysmith three days ago say that the Boer investment lines then were thinning and that the besiegers were moving in force towards the Tugela indicating that a collision was expected there This intelligence bears out other signs that General Buller purposed a fresh attack. The War Office continues to reveal nothing of what has happened in Natal.

Lord Kitchener has been travelling from army to army in northern Cape Colony and General French by instructions is now in Cape Town consulting with Lord Roberts. Large engineering constructions are proceeding at Modder River suggesting that Lord Methuen's fortified camp has been selected as the base from which to invade the Free State. Numerous sidings, platforms, and ware houses are being built and the railway bridge is well advanced.

ermany strategists assert that the topography of the country would make invasion easier from Kimberley and the district northward than from the more rugged region of Sterkstroom or Colesburg. Therefore they infer that the combined British forces will overwhelm the Boers at Magersfontein and first relieve Kimberley as an incident of the invasion.

It is learned that the War Office intends to increase the regular army by fifteen battalions of infantry adding these to the existing regiments.

The cost of the war to the fiscal year March 31, is estimated at 30,000,000 pounds.

The House of Commons has already granted 10,000,000 pounds and the Times says the other 20,000,000 pounds will be asked for.

THE SITUATION REVIEWED

London, Feb. 2.—The spirit of im- atience with the necessarily slow novements of British forces in the ield which has exhibited itself since he beginning of the war is again in vidence. All kinds of rumors as to General Buller's intentions and do- ngs are being sown broadcast, ex- ctly in the same way as they were own after the battle of Colenso. Among these improbable and unre- iable statements must be classed the statement of the St. James Gazete, hat the British force has again cross- d the Tugela at three points, an dthat battle is raging. The St. James Gazette during the present war has een responsible for a good many ab- urd reports, not the least ridiculus of which was one that the Clan-Na-Gael was about to fit out privateers to aid the Boers. For this reason the most recent effort of this journal, in the way of outstripping its contemporaries must be regarded as a piece of yellow journalism. It is most improbable that General Buller can again have engaged the Boers in the manner stated. After a loss of over 1500 men, followed by a retreat it is likely that a period of inactivity, during which the reorganization of his force must be undertaken, will follow. The troops must have time in which to impare their morale shaken by defeat. Changes in the personnel of regiments, rendered necessary by heavy losses, must be made, and the rank and file must become accustomed to working under revised conditions. General Buller has lost one thirteenth of his army or that part of his army actually engaged in conflict, and this will render a pause in the operations absolutely imperative. Besides, reconnaissances must be made in order to discover some more vulnerable point in the Boer line of defence than the trenches opposite Trichard's or Potgieter's drift, and, after these, councils of war must be held and plans matured for an attack. It is probable that the reconnaissance of Lord Dundonald towards Honger's Poort may indicate some intention to move in that direction. Honger's Poort is about fifteen miles west of Trichard's drift. At this point the main road from Estcourt into the Orange Free State crosses the Tugela, afterwards throwing out a branch which runs along the foot of the Drakensberg through Acton Homes to Ladysmith. It may be that Buller intends to march a force of men along this road and force the Boer line in that direction, while Warren and Lyttleton hold the drifts and threaten the Boer line. The abandonment by Lord Dundonald of the kopjes near Acton Homes will, however, have allowed the Boers to extend their line of entrenchments across the highway and connect these kopjes with the main position, effectually barring the road, so that such a course would be a formidable undertaking. Perhaps Buller counts upon the fact that the Boers would in this case be attacked at such widely seperated points, that their mobility would be discounted. It would seem that the plan of attacking the enemy at the points close together is not likely to meet with success and that the only feasible one is to move upon positions so far apart that it is impossible fo rthe same force to defend them. Whether fifteen miles is a long enough distance is questionable, but Buller has not enough men to cover a wider stretch of ground without rendering his line unduly weak, so that he may be about to make a final effort from Honger's Poort prior to abandoning the locality.

Colonel Baden-Powell in the defence of Mafeking, which does not appear to have yet been relieved, despite irresponsible reports to that effect, has established his reputation as one of the most resourceful soldiers of the age. It is novel and unprecedented in warlike annals to hear of a beseiged force pushing back the enemy and actually compelling them to evacuate their gun positions. Mafeking, at any rate, appears in no danger.

ANXIETY IN LONDON.

London, Feb. 2.—There is no offical news from General Buller's headquarters, and the only information which has reached London in any way supporting the reports that he had recrossed the Tugela is found in the Associated Press despatch announcing Lord Dundonald's reconnaissance, which is taken to indicate a prelude to renewed activity. As the despatch is three days old and Lord Dundonald found no difficulty in crossing the river, it is not unpossible General Buller may have moved in the interim, and public anxiety is again concentrated upon the Upper Tugela.

Despatches from elsewhere in South Africa merely tell of desultory shell firing and the moemnts of patsrols though Cape Town mentions a rumor that Gen. French has captured eight hundred Boers, where and when not being announced.

ROBERTS ASKS 60,000 MEN.

London, Feb. 2.—Sensation rumors are current that the Militia Ballot Act will be put into force Feb. 14, and that Gen. Lord Roberts, the commander-in-chief of the British forces in South Africa, has cabled for 60,000 additional men, which it is added, the Government has promised to give him, sending 50,000 militia and volunteers, and 40,000 militia reserves. It is also said that the volunteers will be mobilized forthwith. It is even asserted to-day that the Cabinet has specially dealt with these matters.

The Militia Ballot Act makes every unmarried man between eighteen and thirty years of age liable to serve for five years.

MAFEKING NOT RELIEVED.

Lorenzo Marquez, Thursday, Feb. 1.—A despatch from Gaberones, dated Jan. 23, describing a reconnaissance of some of Colonel Plumer's force around the Boer laager southward, seems to dispose of the story that Mafeking has been relieved. On that date the Rhodesians captured two Transvaal flags and drove off the Boer outposts before returning to Gaberones.

GEN. BULLER'S WORDS.

Chicago, Feb. 2.—Horace Townsend, in a cable to the Chicago Record, from London, says that in the absence of any news of striking importance from the front, comment here to-day has chiefly centered in the Daily aMil's report of General Buller's address to the troops, announcing it as his opinion that they had gained the key to the road to Ladysmith, where he hoped to be within a week. On the one hand, the Daily Mail's correspondent alone sends the story; on the other, that correspondent is the well known American journalist Prior,, who has a high reputation for judgment and veracity, and altogether is a man hardly likely to send an uncorroborated rumor as a fact. The censor, too, allowed the message to pass, which hardly would have been done if it had been clearly an invention. Yet so amazingly inapt an utterance from a general noted for his reticence is not understood here, and all sorts of explanations—most of them ill-natured—are put forward to account for it.

Change in Plan of Campaign.

This propfiecy, synchronizing as it does, with the news that the remainder of the force and presumably Lyttleton's brigade, has crossed the Tugela river, gives a hint of the change in the conduct of war which Lord Roberts proposes to inaugurate. No more troops will be sent to Natal, and two transports actually have been recalled from Durban to Cape Town. Clearly according to the experts Lord Roberts means first to stamp out the Dutch rising in Cape Colony and to dispose of the Orange Free State invaders along the northern borders of the colony. Then he means to delivers a decisive stroke. The advance on Bloemfontein evidently is beginning with the process of gatherin gthe scattered detachments into a formidable body. The sending of Gen. Kelly-Kenny to Rosemead is an excellent start, inasmuch as that general has a good line of supply behind him, his position being intermediate between those of Generals French and Gatacre. His advance establishes a connection between positions hitherto isolated and also severely threatens Stormberg. It is thgoubt his mere presence at Rosemead will give support to General French, with whom he is connected by railway.

WHY GENERAL BUTLER RESIGNED

London, Feb. 2.—In the House of Lords yesterday the Secretary of State for War, the Marquis of Lansdowne, said he desired to formally announce that Lieut.-General Sir William F. Butler resigned command of the British forces in South Africa because of a political divergence of opinion with Sir Alfred Milner, the British High Commissioner and Governor of Cape Colony which was so great that he concluded his command of the forces in South Africa would become a source of embarrassment to the High Commissioner.

MORE VOLUNTEER CAVALRY.

London, Feb. 2.—This morning at the Life Guards barracks, Regent Park, the Prince of Wales inspected another contingent of Yeomanry and Honorable Artillery Company volunteers prior to their departure from London to embark for South Africa. The spectators included the Lord Mayor of London, a number of city dignitaries, army officers and many ladies. The Prince of Wales made a speech to the men in the same vein as his address to the first contingent of Yeomanry at their departure from London, Friday last.

BOER SUPPLIES RUN OUT.

Sterkstroom, Cape Colony, Feb. 2.—A runner who has arrived here brought a letter from Aliwal North, in which it is announced that the Boers have reopened the line to Burghersdorp, as their supplies were short at Stormberg.

The plains being bare, the camp of the burghers, it is added has been moved back of Stormberg heighen, which are still held.

Lord Strathcona does not, like Richard of old, offer his kingdom for a horse. He does better—he offers his Horse for the Kingdom.

BRITAIN'S IMMENSE ARMY IN AFRICA.

The Force Numbers More Than Eight Times as Many as Duke of Wellington Commanded on Field of Watrrloo.

London, Feb. 2.—The first authentic statement of the total British troops and guns now on the way to South Africa yesterday in the House of Commons by Mr. George Wyndham, Parliamentary Secretary to the Foreign Office, in the debate on the address. Mr. Wyndham read the following list, mentioning that it was exclusive of the 8th division, now being mobilized, and the 4th cavalry brigade, under orders to proceed to the front—

Foot and artillery......	142,000
Cavalry......	3,700
Total troops......	145,700
Siege guns......	36
Naval guns......	33
Howitzers......	36
Horse artillery......	54
Field guns......	234
Total guns......	393

Mr. Wyndham stated that in 1898 the combined forces of the two Republics were estimated at 59,000 men.

It should be explained that the total British strength in South Africa as given by Mr. Wyndham did not appear to include deductions for losses. Moreover, the whole strength will not have arrived in South Africa until about Feb .15th. The figures embrace men enrolled in the colonies, probably about 25,000, and non-combatants. Roughly speaking, only 60,000 men are at the front. Ten thousand others have been lost, and 10,000 are shut ip in aLdysmith. Excluding these are 60,000 troops which have not yet been in action, including those at sea.

Why so many effective men have not yet been engaged is explained by the necessity of guarding long lines of communications, there being no less than 20,000 men on the line from De Aar to Modder River alone, with proportionate numbers in the other campaign areas.

REBELLION AMONG SOUDANESE TROOPS.

A Growing Discontent in the Egyptian Army Which Has Attained to a Mutiny in Two of the Soudanese Battalions.

Paris, Feb. 2.—A despatch to the Havas News Agency from Cairo confirms the report cabled to the Associated Press on Jan. 31, that arebellion had occurred among the Soudanese troops in Khartoum. It says—

"There is much anxiety there. There have been a number of grave incidents, notably the growing discontent in the Egyptian army, which has attained to a mutiny in two Soudanese battalions. The Government has sent Colonel Wingate to parley with them. The army complains of bad treatment and the secret despatches of the Egyptian troops to South Africa. It appears certain that ten Maxims and a large assignment of saddles have gone to Durban, and anumber of English officers and civil functionaries have obtained an unlimited furlough to go to South Africa, which is believed to be a breach of Egypt's neutrality. The Government is alarmed at the attitude of the black troops, and has asked the Khedive to itervene. Th latteer has sent a letter urging obedience, but the anxiety nevertheless continues. Egypt is almost denuded of Eurpoean soldiers."

BRITAIN'S AGREEMENT WITH GERMANY.

The British Government, Pending Further Arrangements, Will Not Search Mail Vessels Except on Grave Suspicion.

London, Feb. 2.—In the House of Commons to-day the Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, Mr. Wm. St. J. Broderick, replying to a question, confirmed the accuracy of the statement of Count Von Buelow, the German Minister of Foreign Affairs, in the Reichstag as to the British engagements regarding searching vessels. He explatned that the Government undertook that there should be no search at Aden or at points more distant from the seat of war, because there was nothing to prevent the shipment of contraband from intervening ports. The Government, he added, had not surrendered any right, but on the representations of the German Government and assurances of the aMil Steamer Company, Great Britain had agreed, pending further arrangement not to arrest mail ships, except on the gravest suspicion.

Mr. Brodrick also declared that the Government had no knowledge of any communication having passed between the Netherlands and other Governments with reference to the war, or of the mutual relations of the European powers with respect to the war.

CAPE COLONY SEETHING MASS OF DISCONTENT.

Everything That is Done in Cape Town is Known to Authorities at Pretoria.

KELLY-KFNNY WILL BE IN TOUCH WITH GATACRE.

Owners of the Mashona Must Show They Were Not Trading With the Boers—Dundonald Finds Another Easy Passage Over the Tugela River.

New York, Feb. 2.—It is to be seen in the mass of cable matter printed here this morning that there is a decidedly more cheerful feling in Londoen. The confirmation of the report that General Buller had announced that he would relieve Ladysmith together with the unconfirmed report that he had actually begun a new forward movement, had a good effect on the public mind. Figures just published have also had a reassuring effect after causing much astonishment. The Government announces that it was ascertained before the war began that the Boers would put 50,000 men into the field. The British in a few days will have 145,000 men in South Africa. Gen. Joubert, according to late advices, has 19,000 men surrounding Ladysmith, and confronting General Buller. In the recent turning movement Gen. Buller lost 1,530 men, but the places are filled. The Boers have no means of replacing their lost men with fresh soldiers. Looking at the matter in this light it is as inevitable that Joubert will be beaten as it was that Grant would take Richmond.

The Censorship.

Few despatches are now allowed to come through from the seat of operations about Colesburg and Stormburg, and Gen. Roberts is clearly anxious to direct to attention from the work in progress. Gen Kelly-Kenny's division is actively employed in co-operation with Generals Gatacre and French. The Dutch garrisons both at Stormburg and Colesberg have been reinforced, and the Boer strategists are striving to repeat their tactics at aMgersfontein, Colenso and Spion Kop by creating a new impasse by which the British invasion of the Free State may be blocked.

Easier With Buller.

The military experts are inclined to be easier with General Buller since he and his army are so undaunted, and the harsh criticism is shifting to the Ministry. The Daily Mail says—"When, as is notorious to all with any knowledge of politics, the Government is tremblingly awaiting the news of some little victory to ward off temporarily just criticism, the situation is too humiliating for words.

"Some weeks ago many of the best friends of the Government wer urging its reconstruction. It is almost too late now for that policy. People are now looking for some strong man to lead them. Roseberry's name has been on every tongue during the last few days, but to turn to him before Mr. Chamberlain has been tried appears to us to be unwise and unfair from many points of view."

THE SEIZURE OF THE MASHONA.

Cape Town, Feb. 2.—The supreme Court has decided to make uo order of confiscation in the case of the steamship Mashona at present in order to give her owners an opportunity to show within three weeks that she had no intention to trade with the enemy. The steamship Mashona sailed from New York, November 3, 1899, for Delagoa Bay with a cargo of general merchandise, including flour. She was seized December 8, by the British warship Partridge.

SEETHING DISCONTENT.

London, Feb. 2.—The Cape Town correspondent of the Pall Mall Gazette states that Cape Colony is a seething mass of discontent. If a Boer commondo were to touch any district in the colony that district would join the Boers. Cape Town is the centre where all the Boer spies collect. Everything that is done at Cape Town is known at Pretoria. There is a firm belief that Lord Kitchener will alter all this, because "he knows his own mind and does not seem to care for popularity."

FROM BESIEGE KIMBERLEY.

Kimberley, Jan. 30.—There has been more shelling. The Boers are entrenching along the line of retreat to the Transvaal. The Boers have allowed Basutos to pass out of Kimberley, saying they consider them friends. They were, however, turned back by colonial natives and Zulus. De Beers Village and Kenilworth have been turned into a rabbit warren with underground houses.

HAS REPAIRED THE BRIDGE.

Cape Town, Feb. 2.—General Kelly-Kenny, commanding the sixth division has repared the bridge at the Bus, west of Steynsburg, and is advancing.

ONLY A THOUSAND.

London, Feb. 2.—The Daily News' Cape Town correspondent, in a despatch dated Jan. 29, represents Gen. Kelly-Kenny's force at Thebus to be 1,000 men, besides a considerable force at Schoombie, 20 miles to the westward.

ANOTHER EASY PASSAGE.

London, Feb. 2.—Lord Dundonald made a cavalry recconnaissance to Hongers Poort, on Monday, and found easy facilities for crossing the river. Whether the troops have actually crossed since Monday is, however, not yet known.

A SORTIE FROM BELMONT.

Belmont, South Africa, Feb. 2.—After the Boers had been expelled from Sunnyside Laager a force two hundred strong appeared at Thornhill in the neighborhood. The mounted infantry moved out from Belmont and the enemy retired. The Canadians, who still remain in garrison here, were not employed.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

Hockey

After the Colts had left for Kingston yesterday morning a telegram was received from there to the effect that the Cadets had defaulted the game.

Secretary Fred Dixon has been notified that the Upper Canada team would play the Colts here on Wednesday evening next, the return game to be played in Toronto on the 12th. This will be the first league game for Upper Canada.

W. J. English went to Campbellford to referee the gam b etween Keene and Campbellford.

It is now time for some of the local aggregations to get together and get rid of some of the wind. Hockey games should not be played altogether with the mouth.

The Belleville papers are roasting the Kingston team for their rough work. It is nearly time that Frontenacs were asked to keey out of the game. Their conduct generally shows them to be well qualified for a rough and ready shinny team, but they are not fit to play a scientific game like hockey.

Basketball.

Last night the representatives of Wards One and Four played a league game.

Ward One—Lord, captain; Milne, defence; Crowle, centre; Galley and Ackerman, forwards.

Ward Four—Merrill, Goldey, defence; Hal. Goldey, centre; Hewett and Payne, forwards.

The match resulted in a tie, with a score of 6—6.

The Turf

The weights are out for the big spring handicaps on the other side—the Brooklyn, Suburban and Brighton. The long, low-stepping black mare, "Imp," has the top weights in all three races. She is a clever old mare, having won both the Suburban and the Brighton cups last year and so deserves the top impost. It is the first time in the life of these handicaps that a mare has won this distinction. Allowing for sex she is really compelled to shoulder 123 pounds, and it will be hard for her to give W. H. Clark's speedy Banaster weight and a beating. The dark horse will be the royally bred Jean Beraud, who was allowed a year's retirement after his grand work as a two year old in 1898.

The Canadian horses, Martimas, Zoraster and Advance will find themselves in pretty warm company.

Notes

The new Association of baseball clubs has not materialized very fast. Capitalists are fighting shy of it, and Philadelphia seems to have withdrawn altogether.

Thirty-three full rigged models of American yachts left New York yesterday for the Paris Exposition by the steamer Prairee. The old cup boats, Vigilant, Volunteer, Mayflower, Puritan, Madeline and Defender were among th elot. The model of the Columbia was not sent. We suppose they don't want to give her lines to the English designers.

That little wonder, Terry McGovern, proved conclusively that he is the real featherweight champion of the world by defeating E. Santry, of Chicago, on Thursday night. In the fifth round he knocked out his man. Santry did some clever work but a right and left on the jaw in quick succession did the work.

Colts Defeated in Kingston.

Word was received last night that the Colts, who went to Kingston to play the R. M. C. hockey team, were defeated by a score of 5 goals to 3. It is not known whether or not the game was a schedule match or mere exhibition play, as the Cadets sent notice that they had defaulted to the Colts. The game was a particularly rough one, especially on the part of the Kingston boys, and bad feeling was so high that the Colts were mobbed by a number of rowdies, and were obliged to seek protection from the police. The College team was with two exceptions the same that the Colts defeated here a week ago.

London, Feb. 2.—The spirit of impatience with the necessarily slow movements of British forces in the field which has exhibited itself since the beginning of the war is again in evidence. All kinds of rumors as to General Buller's intentions and doings are being sown broadcast, exactly in the same way as they were sown after the battle of Colenso. Among these improbable and unreliable statements must be classed the statement of the St. James Gazete, that the British force has again crossed the Tugela at three points, an dthat a battle is raging. The St. James Gazette during the present war has been responsible for a good many absurd reports, not the least ridiculous of which was one that the Clan-Na-Gael was about to fit out privateers to aid the Boers. For this reason the most recent effort of this journal, in the way of outstripping its contemporaries must be regarded as a piece of yellow journalism. It is most improbable that General Buller can again have engaged the Boers in the manner stated. After a loss of over 1500 men, fol lowed by a retreat it is likely that a period of inactivity, during which the reorganization of his force must be undertaken, will follow. The troops must have time in which to impare their morale shaken by defeat. Changes in the personnel of regiments, rendered necessary by heavy losses, must be made, and the rank and file must become accustomed to working under revised conditions. General Buller has lost one thirteenth of his army or that part of his army actually engaged in conflict, and this will render a pause in the operations absolutely imperative. Besides, reconnaissances must be made in order to discover some more vulnerable point in the Boer line of defence than the trenches opposite Trichard's or Potgieter's drift, and, after these, councils of war must be held and plans matured for an attack. It is probable that the reconnaissance of Lord Dundonald towards Honger's Poort may indicate some intention to move in that direction. Honger's Poort is about fifteen miles west of Trichard's drift. At this point the main road from Estcourt into the Orange Free State crosses the Tugela, afterwards throwing out a branch which runs along the foot of the Drakensberg through Acton Homes to Ladysmith. It may be that Buller intends to march a force of men along this road and force the Boer line in that direction, while Warren and Lyttleton hold the drifts and threaten the Boer line. The abandonment by Lord Dundonald of the kopjes near Acton Homes will, however, have allowed the Boers to extend their line of entrenchments across the highway and connect these kopjes with the main position, effectually barring the road, so that such a course would be a formidable undertaking. Perhaps Buller counts upon the fact that the Boers would in this case be attacked at such widely seperated points, that their mobility would be discounted. It would seem that the plan of attacking the enemy at the points close together is not likely to meet with success and that the only feasible one is to move upon positions so far apart that it is impossible for the same force to defend them. Whether fifteen miles is a long enough distance is questionable, but Buller has not enough men to cover a wider stretch of ground without rendering his line unduly weak, so that he may be about to make a final effort from Honger's Poort prior to abandoning the locality.

Colonel Biden-Powell in the defence of Mafeking, which does not appear to have yet been relieved, despite irresponsible reports to that effect, has established his reputation as one of the most resourceful soldiers of the age. It is novel and unprecedented in warlike annals to hear of a besieged force pushing back the enemy and actually compelling them to evacuate their gun positions. Mafeking, at any rate, appears in no danger.

ANXIETY IN LONDON.

London, Feb. 2.—There is no offical news from General Buller's headquarters, and the only information which has reached London in any way supporting the reports that he had recrossed the Tugela is found in the Associated Press despatch announcing Lord Dundonald's reconnaissance, which is taken to indicate a prelude to renewed activity. As the despatch is three days old and Lord Dundonald found no difficulty in crossing the river, it is not impossible General Buller may have moved in the interim, and public anxiety is again concentrated upon the Upper Tugela.

Despatches from elsewhere in South Africa merely tell of desultory shell firing and the moemnts of patrols though Cape Town mentions a rumor that Gen. French has captured eight hundred Boers, where and when not being announced.

ROBERTS ASKS 90,000 MEN.

London, Feb. 2.—Sensation rumors are current that the Militia Ballot Act will be put into force Feb. 14, and that Gen. Lord Roberts, the commander-in-chief of the British forces in South Africa, has cabled for 90,000 additional men, which it is added, the Government has promised to give him, sending 50,000 militia and volunteers, and 40,000 militia reserves. It is also said that the volunteers will be mobilized forthwith. It is even asserted to-day that the Cabinet has specially dealt with these matters.

The Militia Ballot Act makes every unmarried man between eighteen and thirty years of age liable to serve for five years.

MAFEKING NOT RELIEVED.

Lorenzo Marquez, Thursday, Feb. 1.—A despatch from Gaberones, dated Jan. 23, describing a reconnaissance of some of Colonel Plumer's force around the Boer laager southward, seems to dispose of the story that Mafeking has been relieved. On that date the Rhodesians captured two Transvaal flags and drove off the Boer outposts before returning to Gaberones.

GEN. BULLER'S WORDS.

Chicago, Feb. 2.—Horace Townsend, in a cable to the Chicago Record, from London, says that in the absence of any news of striking importance from the front, comment here to-day has chiefly centered in the Daily aMil's report of General Buller's address to the troops, announcing it as his opinion that they had gained the key to the road to Ladysmith, where he hoped to be within a week. On the one hand, the Daily Mail's correspondent alone sends the story; on the other, that correspondent is the well known American journalist Prior, who has a high reputation for judgment and veracity, and altogether is a man hardly likely to send an uncorroborated rumor as a fact. The censor, too, allowed the message to pass, which hardly would have been done if it had been clearly an invention. Yet so amazingly inapt an utterance from a general noted for his reticence is not understood here, and all sorts of explanations—most of them ill-natured—are put forward to account for it.

Change in Plan of Campaign.

This prophecy, synchronizing as it does, with the news that the remainder of the force and presumably Lyttleton's brigade, has crossed the Tugela river, gives a hint of the change in the conduct of war which Lord Roberts proposes to inaugurate. No more troops will be sent to Natal, and two transports actually have been recalled from Durban to Cape Town. Clearly according to the experts Lord Roberts means first to stamp out the Dutch rising in Cape Colony and to dispose of the Orange Free State invaders along the northern borders of the colony. Then he means to delives a decisive stroke. The advance on Bloemfontein evidently is beginning with the process of gatherin gthe scattered detachments into a formidable body. The sending of Gen. Kelly-Kenny to Rosemead is an excellent start, inasmuch as that general has a good line of supply behind him, his position being intermediate between those of Generals French and Gatacre. His advance establishes a connection between positions hitherto isolated and also severely threatens Stormberg. It is thgoubt his mere presence at Rosemead will give support to General French, with whom he is connected by railway.

WHY GENERAL BUTLER RESIGNED

London, Feb. 2.—In the House of Lords yesterday the Secretary of State for War, the Marquis of Lansdowne, said he desired to formally announce that Lieut.-General Sir William F. Butler resigned command of the British forces in South Africa because of a political divergence of opinion with Sir Alfred Milner, the British High Commissioner and Governor of Cape Colony which was so great that he concluded his command of the forces in South Africa would become a source of embarrassment to the High Commissioner.

MORE VOLUNTEER CAVALRY.

London, Feb. 2.—This morning at the Life Guards barracks, Regent Park, the Prince of Wales inspected another contingent of Yeomanry and Honorable Artillery Company volunteers prior to their departure from London to embark for South Africa. The spectators included the Lord Mayor of London, a number of city dignitaries, army officers and many ladies. The Prince of Wales made a speech to the men in the same vein as his address to the first contingent of Yeomanry at their departure from London, Friday last.

BOER SUPPLIES RUN OUT.

Sterkstroom, Cape Colony, Feb. 2.—A runner who has arrived here brought a letter from Aliwal North, in which it is announced that the Boers have reopened the line to Burghersdorp, as their supplies were short at Stormberg.

The plains being bare, the camp of the burghers, it is added has been mov ed back of Stormberg heights, which are still held.

Lord Strathcona does not, like Richard of old, offer his kingdom for a horse. He does better—he offers his Horse for the Kingdom.

BRITAIN'S IMMENSE ARMY IN AFRICA.

The Force Numbers More Than Eight Times as Many as Duke of Wellington Commanded on Field of Watrrloo.

London, Feb. 2.—The first authentic statement of the total British troops and guns now on the way to South Africa yesterday in the House of Commons by Mr. George Wyndham, Parliamentary Secretary to the Foreign Office, in the debate on the address. Mr. Wyndham read the following list, mentioning that it was exclusive of the 8th division, now being mobilized, and the 4th cavalry brigade, under orders to proceed to the front.—

Foot and artillery	142,000
Cavalry	4,700
Total troops	146,700
Siege guns	36
Naval guns	38
Howitzers	36
Horse artillery	54
Field guns	234
Total guns	398

Mr. Wyndham stated that in 1895 the combined forces of the two Republics were estimated at 59,000 men.

It should be explained that the total British strength in South Africa as given by Mr. Wyndham did not appear to include deductions for losses. Moreover, the whole strength will not have arrived in South Africa until about Feb 15th. The figures embrace men enrolled in the colonies, probably about 25,000, and non-combatants. Roughly speaking, only 60,000 men are at the front. Ten thousand others have been lost, and 10,000 are shut ip in aLdysmith. Excluding these are 60,000 troops which have not yet been in action, including those at sea.

Why so many effective men have not yet been engaged is explained by the necessity of guarding long lines of communications, there being no less than 20,000 men on the line from De Aar to Modder River alone, with proportionate numbers in the other campaign areas.

REBELLION AMONG SOUDANESE TROOPS.

A Growing Discontent in the Egyptian Army Which Has Attained to a Mutiny in Two of the Soudanese Battalions.

Paris, Feb. 2.—A despatch to the Havas News Agency from Cairo confirms the report cabled to the Associated Press on Jan. 31, that arebellion had occurred among the Soudanese troops in Khartoum. It says—

"There is much anxiety there. There have been a number of grave incidents, notably the growing discontent in the Egyptian army, which has attained to a mutiny in two Soudanese battalions. The Government has sent Colonel Wingate to parley with them. The army complains of bad treatment and the secret despatches of the Egyptian troops to South Africa. It appears certain that ten Maxims and a large assignment of saddles have gone to Durban, and anumber of English officers and civil functionaries have obtained an unlimited furlough to go to South Africa, which is believed to be a breach of Egypt's neutrality. The Government is alarmed at the attitude of the black troops, and has asked the Khedive to itervene. Th latter has sent a letter urging obedience, but the anxiety nevertheless continues. Egypt is almost denuded of Eurpoean soldiers.

BRITAIN'S AGREEMENT WITH GERMANY.

The British Government, Pending Further Arrangements, Will Not Search Mail Vessels Except on Grave Suspicion.

London, Feb. 2.—In the House of Commons to-day the Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, Mr. Wm. St. J. Broderick, replying to a question, confirmed the accuracy of the statement of Count Von Buelow, the German Minister of Foreign Affairs, in the Reichstag as to the British engagements regarding searching vessels. He explained that the Government undertook that there should be no search at Aden or at points more distant from the seat of war, because there was nothing to prevent the shipment of contraband from intervening ports. The Government, he added, had not surrendered any right, but on the representations of the German Government and assurances of the aMil Steamer Company, Great Britain had agreed, pending further arrangement not to arrest mail ships, except on the gravest suspicion.

Mr. Brodrick also declared that the Government had no knowledge of any communication having passed between the Netherlands and other Governments with reference to the war, or of the mutual relations of the European powers with respect to the war.

CAPE COLONY SEETHING MASS OF DISCONTENT.

Everything That is Done in Cape Town is Known to Authorities at Pretoria.

KELLY-KFNNY WILL BE IN TOUCH WITH GATACRE.

Owners of the Mashona Must Show They Were Not Trading With the Boers—Dundonald Finds Another Easy Passage Over the Tugela River.

New York, Feb. 2.—It is to be seen in the mass of cable matter printed here this morning that there is a decidedly more cheerful feling in Londoen. The confirmation of the report that General Buller had announced that he would relieve Ladysmith together with the unconfirmed report that he had actually begun a new forward movement, had a good effect on the public mind. Figures just published have also had a reassuring effect after causing much astonishment. The Government announces that it was ascertained before the war began that the Boers would put 50,000 men into the field. The British in a few days will have 145,000 men in South Africa. Gen. Joubert, according to late advices, has 19,000 men surrounding Ladysmith, and confronting General Buller. In the recent turning movement Gen. Buller lost 1,539 men, but the places are filled. The Boers have no means of replacing their lost men with fresh soldiers. Looking at the matter in this light it is as inevitable that Joubert will be beaten as it was that Grant would take Richmond.

The Censorship.

Few despatches are now allowed to come through from the seat of operations about Colesburg and Stormburg, and Gen. Roberts is clearly anxious to direct to attention from the work in progress. Gen Kelly-Kenny's division is actively employed in co-operation with Generals Gatacre and French. The Dutch garrisons both at Stormburg and Colesberg have been reinforced, and the Boer strategists are striving to repeat their tactics at aMgersfontein, Colenso and Spion Kop by creating a new impasse by which the British invasion of the Free State may be blocked.

Easier With Buller.

The military experts are inclined to be easier with General Buller since he and his army are so undaunted, and the harsh criticism is shifting to the Ministry. The Daily Mail says—"When, as is notorious to all with any knowledge of politics, the Government is tremblingly awaiting the news of some little victory to ward off temporarily just criticism, the situation is too humiliating for words.

"Some weeks ago many of the best friends of the Government wer urging its reconstruction. It is almost too late now for that policy. People are now looking for some strong man to lead them. Roseberry's name has been on every tongue during the last few days, but to turn to him before Mr. Chamberlain has been tried appears to us to be unwise and unfair from many points of view.'

THE SEIZURE OF THE MASHONA.

Cape Town, Feb. 2.—The supreme Court has decided to make no order of confiscation in the case of the steamship Mashona at present in order to give her owners an opportunity to show within three weeks that she had no intention to trade with the enemy. The steamship Mashona sailed from New York, November 3, 1899, for Delagoa Bay with a cargo of general merchandise, including flour. She was seized December 8, by the British warship Partridge.

SEETHING DISCONTENT.

London, Feb. 2.—The Cape Town correspondent of the Pall Mall Gazette states that Cape Colony is a seething mass of discontent. If a Boer commando were to touch any district in the colony that district would join the Boers. Cape Town is the centre where all the Boer spies collect. Everything that is done at Cape Town is known at Pretoria. There is a firm belief that Lord Kitchener will alter all this, because "he knows his own mind and does not seem to care for popularity."

FROM BESIEGE KIMBERLEY.

Kimberley, Jan. 30.—There has been more shelling. The Boers are entrenching along the line of retreat to the Transvaal. The Boers have allowed Basutos to pass out of Kimberley, saying they consider them friends. They were, however, turned back by colonial natives and Zulus. De Beers Village and Kenilworth have been turned into a rabbit warren with underground houses.

HAS REPAIRED THE BRIDGE.

Cape Town, Feb. 2.—General Kelly-Kenny, commanding the sixth division has repared the bridge at the Bua, west of Steynsburg, and is advancing.

ONLY A THOUSAND.

London, Feb. 2.—The Daily News' Cape Town correspondent, in a despatch dated Jan. 29, represents Gen. Kelly-Kenny's force at Thebus to be 1,000 men, besides a considerable force at Schoombie, 20 miles to the westward.

ANOTHER EASY PASSAGE.

London, Feb. 2.—Lord Dundonald made a cavalry recconnaissance to Hongers Poort, on Monday, and found easy facilities for crossing the river. Whether the troops have actually crossed since Monday is, however, not yet known.

A SORTIE FROM BELMONT.

Belmont, South Africa, Feb. 2.—After the Boers had been expelled from Sunnyside Laager a force two hundred strong appeared at Thornhill in the neighborhood. The mounted infantry moved out from Belmont and the enemy retired. The Canadians, who still remain in garrison here, were not employed.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

Hockey

After the Colts had left for Kingston yesterday morning a telegram was received from there to the effect that the Cadets had defaulted the game.

Secretary Fred Dixon has been notified that the Upper Canada team would play the Colts here on Wednesday evening next, the return game to be played in Toronto on the 12th. This will be the first league game for Upper Canada.

W. J. English went to Campbellford to referee the gam b etween Keene and Campbellford.

It is now time for some of the local aggregations to get together and get rid of some of the wind. Hockey games should not be played altogether with the mouth.

The Belleville papers are roasting the Kingston team for their rough work. It is nearly time that Frontenacs were asked to keep out of the game. Their conduct generally shows them to be well qualified for a rough and ready shinny team, but they are not fit to play a scientific game like hockey.

Basketball.

Last night the representatives of Wards One and Four played a league game.

Ward One—Lord, captain; Miline, defence; Crowlie, centre; Galley and Ackerman, forwards.

Ward Four—Merrill, Goldey, defence; Hal. Goldey, centre; Hiewett and Payne, forwards.

The match resulted in a tie, with a score of 6—6.

The Turf

The weights are out for the big spring handicaps on the other side—the Brooklyn, Suburban and Brighton. The long, low-stepping black mare, "Imp," has the top weights in all three races. She is a clever old mare, having won both the Suburban and the Brighton cups last year and so deserves the top impost. It is the first time in the life of these handicaps that a mare has won this distinction. Allowing for sex she is really compelled to shoulder 128 pounds, and it will be hard for her to give W. H. Clark's speedy Banaster weight and a beating. The dark horse will be the royally bred Jean Berand, who was allowed a year's retirement after his grand work as a two year old in 1898.

The Canadian horses, Martimas, Zoraster and Advance will find themselves in pretty warm company.

Notes

The new Association of baseball clubs has not materialized very fast. Capitalists are fighting shy of it, and Philadelphia seems to have withdrawn altogether.

Thirty-three full rigged models of American yachts left New York yesterday for the Paris Exposition by the steamer Prairee. The old cup boats, Vigilant, Volunteer, Mayflower, Puritan, Madeline and Defender were among th elot. The model of the Columbia was not sent. We suppose they don't want to give her lines to the English designers.

That little wonder, Terry McGovern, proved conclusively that he is the real featherweight champion of the world by defeating E. Santry, of Chicago, on Thursday night. In the fifth round he knocked out his man. Santry did some clever work but a right and left on the jaw in quick succession did the work.

Colts Defeated in Kingston.

Word was received last night that the Colts, who went to Kingston to play the R. M. C. hockey team, were defeated by a score of 5 goals to 3. It is not known whether or not the game was a schedule match or mere exhibition play, as the Cadets sent notice that they had defaulted to the Colts. The game was a particularly rough one, especially on the part of the Kingston boys, and bad feeling was so high that the Colts were mobbed by a number of rowdies, and were obliged to seek protection from the police. The College team was with two exceptions the same that the Colts defeated here a week ago.

A MISUNDERSTANDING.

Cheedle and I spent the evening alone together, Mrs. Cheedle being out of town on a visit to some relatives, and this was our crucial glass of whiskey and soda. We had been very candid with one another, and were in a fine glow of honesty.

"It's a breach of confidence, I'm afraid," said Cheedle. "And it isn't a thing you ought to know, because you are vain enough already. (No offence, old man. We're being frank, you know. Hang it all, I'm vain, too.) But I tell you this for her sake."

"Her sake? Whose?" I asked.

"All in good time," he replied. "I wouldn't tell you at all, Phil if I didn't repose so much confidence in your good taste; for whatever else you may be, Phil, you are still a gentleman."

"A colored imitation, at least, I hope," said I.

"You know my wife's cousin?" he began.

"She has so many."

"Awful crowd! But I mean the pretty one."

"Little girl with flaxen hair? Rather—a shade—too conscious of her profile."

"Yes, Ha, ha! Miss Marsh." He sipped solemnly.

"Well?"

"It is a pity. My wife told me. I should never have suspected it myself. She's a little bit impressed by you."

"In love with me?"

"Damn your complacency! I suppose so."

"Poor girl!" said I.

"She isn't a fool, either."

"Not a bit of it," I cried.

"That makes it all the more extraordinary.'

"I don't see that."

"My object in telling you is to warn you against that infernal trick of yours on her. You know what I mean? That way you have of talking to a woman as if she were the only one of her sex in the world."

"A reprehensible habit. So dangerous!" said I. "I will be careful.'

"Yes, do be careful, old man."

We were silent awhile. I got up, murmuring again, "Poor girl!" bade farewell to Cheedle, and went home. I had not intended to be at the Massie's party on the following evening, but knowing that Miss Marsh would be there and feeling anxious to begin the cruel business of disillusionment at once—that it might be the sooner over—I dressed and went.

The drawing room was very crowded. I looked about for Miss Marsh, and presently espied her in a far corner. By slow stages I made my way toward her. She marked my approach with a wistful face, and when I was close enough made room for me beside her. Poor thing! We shook hands, and I noted a tender light in her eyes. My heart ached with pity.

"How hot it is in here!" said she.

Oh, these hollow commonplaces uttered calmly in a gale of passion!

"Yes," said I. "I wonder if we could get out into the conservatory?"

We managed it by dint of many profuse hustlings, strewing our path with apologies as we went. Our end attained we sat down side by side under a tub palm, and looked at one another.

"How pleasant it is out here!" she murmured.

"So cool," said I.

Conversation was certainly difficult.

"The usual rumor concerning you is out," said she.

"Indeed!" I cried. It was no time to be witty.

"They have married you again, Mr Wroughtnight."

"Who is the unlucky lady this time?"

"It would not be fair to tell. And—two are mentioned."

Poor girl!

"You know that Rumor is a lying jade, Miss Marsh?"

"By nature—yes. But sometimes—by accident—she speaks the truth."

How valiantly women cover up their scars.

"Of course," said I, 'there is no foundation for the rumor."

"I had hoped there was," said she, softly.

Brave heart! It was a dire business.

"There may be some day," I murmured. "I mean that I expect I shall marry sooner or later."

"Oh, I hope so," said she. "When you are a little older. Some strong, helpful woman with ideas. Not a poor little society butterfly—like me."

"If she were like you," said I, and stopped.

"She won't be," said Miss Marsh, quickly.

My heart was torn with pity of her.

"One so seldom marries the person one wants to," said I, breaking the truth to her gently.

"And how much better for us that is, isn't it?"

The rejoiner hardly pleased me.

"How do you mean, Miss Marsh?"

"I mean that the object of our first love is so rarely the person to make us really happy."

I remembered that this was her third season.

"First love is the only love," said I.

"Oh, no," said she.

"Oh, yes," I repeated firmly. It was no time for mawkish faltering. My duty was plain.

"Mr. Wroughtnight," said she, "believe what I am about to say. You are too young yet to know what is best for your own welfare."

It seemed an odd way to talk, as I was at least two years her senior; but I reflected that she was distraught—that she was fighting against her own happiness.

"I think," said I, "I know what is best for me, young as I may be. When my fate comes along—"

"That time is not yet, of course," said she.

Oh, anxious, despairing heart!

"No," I cried, and shuddered in dread expectation of some tragic sign from her. But she was strangely calm. It almost seemed to me that a light of relief leaped into her eyes. The relief of the tortured soul at hearing sentence of death!

A great silence fell on us. She mused, looking at me with strange intentness.

"Mr. Wroughtnight," said she, "I have a mind to be honest with you. I have a strong prejudice in favor of honest dealing. My honesty may cost me your good opinion, but I don't mind that. I mean that I have enough faith in your good sense to believe that you won't think me unwomanly and immodest in saying what I propose to say."

I rose in great agitation.

"Miss Marsh," I said, "pause, reflect. Don't speak yet. You may save us both much pain."

"Nonsense," said she sharply.

I was surprised and a little affronted.

"I beg your pardon," said I, "Go on."

She fluttered her fan nervously.

"I am afraid," said she, "we don't quite understand one another. At least, I think I understand. But you don't."

I moistened my dry lips. "Go on," I said again, breathlessly.

"Mrs. Cheedle has told you something about me?"

"No."

"Mr. Cheedle, then? Somebody."

"Yes," said I.

"What have they told you?"

"I—I cannot repeat it. Miss Marsh, let me implore you to say no more. Let us go back."

"No," said she. "I will tell you what they said. They told you that I—I am—am in love with you."

"They were mistaken." I cried, still willing to spare her.

"Yes, they were," she responded calmly.

I gasped and leaned back in my chair.

"They told me," said she, that you were in love with me."

A bitterness of humiliation flooded my soul.

"I have no doubt they meant well," said she.

"Oh, there is no doubt of that," I agreed sourly.

"Perhaps they thought they might make a match between us that way. Young married couples are always the busiest match-makers. And really, do you know, I think they showed some knowledge of poor human nature in this instance, at any rate."

She smiled. I felt too sick to smile.

"I am sorry," said she, "if you feel at all hurt by this revelation of truth."

Then I saw the absurdity of my position, and summoned my sense of humor to the rescue. It was not possible to remain insensible to Miss Marsh's magnificent command of her own dignity.

"I was a fool." said I.

"I, too," said she, "but it does not matter, now it is all over, does it? And, anyway, nobody will know. We shall both keep the secret inviolate, I dare say, for our honor's sake."

"I am afraid you must think me rather a conceited ass, Miss Marsh."

"Don't be silly," said she; "you thought as I did."

"But with less reason," said I, bowing.

She looked reproachfully at me.

"I have been sincere with you, Mr. Wroughtnight."

"That is why I pay you compliments, I want to restore the balance of things."

"We seem to understand each other now. I think we might be friends," said she.

She gave me her hand, and I clasped it warmly. But whenever I recall that absurd interview my very body blushes.

HE UNITED STATES TO AID THE BOERS

reat Bro Boer Meetings Being Held in Many Parts of Union.

THE FENIANS ARE BECOMING ACTIVE.

tense Excitement being worked up--It May Become so warm that the government will be forced to act.

Special to the Times.

w York, Feb. 2.—Some six thousand itizens who were enthusiastically friendly to the Boers and still more enthusiastically unfriendly to Great Britain, packed the Grand Central Palace last night. At the preliminary meeting of the committee to aid the United Republics of South Africa, which managed the mass meeting, it was decided that hostility to England would be out of place at the mass meeting. Nevertheless, such hostility lost no single chance of making itself known, and it was evident from the first that, although most of the speakers were Dutch, the great mass of the audience was Irish. That the Tammany element predominated might be inferred from the fact that a reference to the Administration at Washington was hooted.

hen George M. Van Hoesen rose to open the meeting every seat was taken, the rear passage was jammed to the doors, and not only were men standing twenty lines deep beyond the seats at the far sides, but they had even pressed back into the side space to the rear of the stage line. On the stage the Boer, Orange Free State, Irish and American flags were displayed. Chairman Van Hoesen said in his introductory speech—

"Every one knows that the question of the franchise in the Transvaal is merely an empty British pretext. Kruger went as far as man could go in the way of conciliation, but Chamberlain wanted nothing but the annexation of the Transvaal to England.

"We hear that we ought to sympathize with the British because we speak the same language," said Congressman David A. De Armond, on rising to speak. "But there is a language which forms a closer tie than that of speech, the language of the heart, the language of sentiment. The Boers are fighting for liberty, and how should it be that the sentiment of Americans opposed the spirit of liberty? Every nation that upholds liberty must be vitally interested in this struggle; ourselves most of all, for we are the exemplary nation of liberty. I would that swift as lightning from the clouds the word could be flashed to the Boers that here in this greatest city of our enlightened nation the people are met to wish them godspeed. (Applause.) I hope that the time will soon come when all Republicans, Democrats and all other parties will unite in doing their best to end this barbarous war. Much has been said lately about the necessity of our having an understanding with England"—

Here the speaker was interrupted by groans, howls and shouts of "No!" "We don't want it." "Never!" "Down with England!"

"We need no understanding," continued the speaker, "with any nation save the understanding that we are an independent nation and will make our own way. No British alliances for us. (Loud and long cheering and cries of 'Down with the British!') I shall indulge in no words of denunciation. I know that in Great Britain are many great and noble men. Yet in every crucial period of our history, from the time of our birth to the victory of that Irish-American at New Orleans, she has been our foe, and to-day she is our rival. By the guns pointed from Canada's shores at us she recognizes that she may some day seek to destroy us, unless she can first lure us into an entangling alliance and draw our teeth. (Groans.) Let us, then, do what we may to prevent her plans toward overthrowing liberty in the Transvaal as she will yet try to do to every quarter of the world." (Cheers.)

Congressman Cochran, of Missouri, was the next speaker. He said —"The history of England is the history of persecutions. This war against the Boers is only one of many attacks upon the spirit of liberty. The Boer stands now with his back to the wall. He can go no further. The war now going on is to determine whether these sturdy burghers shall be exterminated, victimized by British greed, or whether there shall arise a new United States of South Africa. (Cheers.) Let Ireland, that unhappy island, which for 800 years has trodden the stony path of despair with streaming eyes and bleeding feet, let Ireland say how England treats her unfortunate dependants. (Cheers.) I know how the sons of Erin, wherever found, will feel on this question. Why, whenever England scents gold she will try to extend her boundary lines. She would have absorbed Venezuela had not this country put a sharp check on her schemes. Look at the situation in Alaska. Gold is found there and the British Empire extends its bounds, polices what it calls the frontier and compels American miners to pay big prices to mine there, and now this Administration—"

"Boo! Rats! Hoo-boo-hoo!" yelled the audience.

"—this Administration says that sometime, somehow, it will do something about it. (Groans.) And now this gold-thief nation is reaching out for the Transvaal gold fields. I hope the Boers will carry on this war until the price of crape shall rise in the London market. (Yells of delight.) Spion Kop looks like it. (Cheers.) I believe there is a God who rules battles and I trust that it may seem well to him that liberty and not tyranny shall achieve the victory in this unholy war. Let us give the lie to the brazen charge that in any quarter of this land there is sympathy for the crime against liberty committed in this unholy crusade."

The Chairman then introduced Robert B. Roosevelt, who said—

"'Friends, Murderers and Robbers'—it was in these words that President Kruger once addressed a meeting of citizens at Johannesburg, that model city as it has been described to us, that abode of the ill-treated Uitlanders. He commenced by saying as one ordinarily would 'My friends,' when it struck him that many of the people that he was addressing were outlaws as well as outlanders, and he changed his language. No one took offense and probably a majority of those before him recognized the propriety of the appellations. When we come to look into the cases of the war upon the South African Republic, I feel like using the same terms in inquiring of those who ought to know what were and are the demands or complaints of England which have brought about this cruel, horrible, useless war, a war that no matter how it ends can do good to no one, not even to the mine owners.

"I was intimate with Gen. Joubert when he visited this country some years ago, and I can speak with more authority than most of those who write on the subject of the feelings and wishes of the Dutch race in South Africa. Nothing worried Gen. Joubert more deeply than the very victory he had won at Majuba Hill. He well knew the sting of it would never rest until it had revenged on his poor, feeble little republic its one signal victory. No one was more anxious than he to obliterate the memory of that fateful day. This war, I am convinced, is largely due to the memory of Majuba Hill, a sort of war cry among the common people, but Majuba Hill has been swallowed up in the terrible defeats that the British have suffered lately.

"Occasionally some more than ordinarily absent-minded idiot suggests that the war was initiated by the Boers. No such man is ingenuous nor fair to himself, if he has intellect enough to be either. It is true, the Boers believed, and believed rightly, that it was coming, and made all possible preparations to meet it. There is no evidence that they ever intended to bring it on. This war is not only unjustifiable, but it is stupidly useless. Before it is over it must inevitably cost in money alone more than all the mines are worth. Britain will be crippled for years, a very plaything and object of contempt to the European powers, who now stand in awe of her, and to whom she represents liberty, progressiveness and humanityand humanity. Let us throw that aside as impossible, doubtful as the issue has already become, but let us look at the result wholly on the theory that in the end her immense resources must conquer. Success will leave its legacy of sullen hatred seething in repression and waiting only its chance to burst out like a furious volcano, another Ireland, only ten times as dangerous, for it will be 6000 miles away. NNo time will wear this out. Kill all the men, which is the task set before the conquerors, and the children, now babies, will grow up to abhor the murderers of their fathers. The Dutch are slow to forget, and hard to crush.

"Will time ever remove this bitter feeling? The answer is to be found at Cape colony today, where the British Government after all its years of benign and gentle sway, does not dare to trust its unwilling Dutch subjects. Had not this war been forced upon the Boers, had they been given a few more years for the elders with their vivid recollections of ill-treatment and aggravating insolence to have passed away and both races would have come together. Common interest, common danger, a common religion, aye, even a common tongue, for most of the Boers know something of the language destined to be that of the world, or would rapidly learn it, these things would have cemented a permanent friendship, and possibly made one single people of the Dutch and English alike. Then the tenacity of the former, supplementing the enterprise of the latter, would indeed have redeemed darkest Africa, and made it to blossom like the rose."

The Hon. John Van Voorhis of Rochester was the next speaker—He said—"Because England sympathized with us in a good cause during our war with Spain, is no reason why we should sympathize with them in a bad cause. I believe that fully 90 per cent. of the people of these United States are in sympathy with the Boers. (Applause.) No braver people ever trod the field of battle than the Boers. They have written their characters on the crests of the blood-stained kopjes of the Transvaal. (Applause.) Those Dutchmen of South Africa are the cousins of the Dutch of New York. Are the British going to beat them? Winston Churchill tells us it will take 250,000 men to conquer the Transvaal, and that one well-mounted Boer is equal to five Englishmen. Well, in that view is it possible for England to win? No. But can Great Britain withdraw? Certainly she can. It would be easier for her if she could win a battle; but sooner or later she's got to withdraw, and she might as well do it now. She's lost ten or twelve thousand men. England mourns; Scotland and Ireland are in tears."

"No, no," shouted the crowd. "Not Ireland. No mourning there."

"I'll except Ireland," said the speaker, and there was a cheer. Mr. Van Voorhis made a plea in conclusion for the Red Cross fund now being raised by the Boers.

Mayor Perry of Grand Rapids, was the next speaker, and announced that Michigan was with the movement. He made a strong plea for contributions to the cause and moved his audience to a frenzy by reciting a poem, written, he said, by a young Irish-American, of which the following stanzas are a fair specimen—

Now is the time to take a brace,
Oom Paul.
Time to don your fighting face,
Oom Paul.
Take your gun from off the wall,
Give it to them, grape and ball,
We are with you, one and all,
Oom Paul.

The British lion is hard to lick,
Oom Paul.
But don't forget we did the trick,
Oom Paul.
We were not for size so much,
Just a few good patriots,
And the Pennsylvania Dutch,
Oom Paul.

GLIMPSES OF SOUTH AFRICA.

In Peace and in War A Splendid Lot of Views

Southern Africa, that enormous expanse of tropically verdant territory extending from the Lambesi River to the Cape of Good Hope, has for a century or more lain dormant to the eyes of the civilized world. Only within the past two decades has public attention been drawn to the wonderful natural resources and mineral wealth of this wild and rugged land, and yet, within this period, marvelous creation of brilliant modern cities have supplanted the desert lands and haunts of savage tribes. The steady march of civilization, the all-pervading ambition to accumulate the wealth of diamonds and gold that lay beneath the crust of this benighted land, each has borne its part in the metamorphosis and heralded to the world the wonderful possibilities of that "Dark Continent" for the energy and enterprise that the 20th century will bring to light.

In no other country of the world has progress been marked with such adversity and strife as Africa. From the time the early Dutch settlers landed in the Cape Colony up to the present, there has existed almost a constant state of warfare; the natives disputing the advance of the Dutch and they in turn resenting the inroads of civilization. In spite of this, so strenuous were the efforts of the colonists in their determination to turn to account the beauties and resources of the land of their adoption, that today they enjoy the fruits of their successes in a paradise of tropical vegetation, a salubrious climate and surrounded by the highest advantages of intellectuality and luxuries of civilization.

Cape Town is the metropolis and seat of government of the Cape Colony. Its historical past and present is firmly linked in the traditions of the early Dutch and the Huguenots. True, the old forts and buildings of distinctly Dutch architecture still remain but magnificent edifices of the most modern type, beautiful botanical gardens and the public improvements are evidences of the wonderful advance of civilization.

Port Elizabeth is the Liverpool of South Africa. It is a great commercial center, coupled with some of the largest shipping interests in the world; a city of the most modern type, essentially English in character, and possessing some of the largest as well as the most architecturally magnificent buildings and public institutions in South Africa.

Natal is the beautiful, tropical Garden Colony. Its luxurious vegetation and glorious climate, its wide aveune of trees and fine buildings, the native Zulu servants and the picturesque costumes of the Orientals, lend an ear of peace and tranquility, while the marks of civilization and progress are in evidence at every turn.

Johannesburg, the Golden, with its fine architectural creations, public institutions and parks, possesses many attractions that easily place it as the foremost city of South Africa. Its great industry, mining, the apparently inexhaustible veins of gold-bearing quartz, in which upwards of seven hundred millions of dollars are invested, have been the attraction for the thousands and thousands of "Uitlanders," whose "grievances" are substantially the cause for the cruel war between Briton and Boer, the battles of which have been ranked as the "bloodiest of the century."

So great has been the interest manifested in South Africa and the progress of the war, and so eager the thirst for information, coupled with the demand for a Pictorial History incident to the scenes of warfare, that the publication of "Glimpses of South Africa" has been undertaken upon a scale of grandeur, fidelity and completeness never before though of, involving as it has an expense of extraordinary magnitude. In order that the work might be absolutely reliable and thorough in its character, the publishers have contracted for its authorship with Mr. Wymble Flemming, an Afrikander, whose authority upon South African matters is world-widely acknowledged. This gentleman,—born in the Cape Colony, having travelled over nearly every inch of the country south of the Lambesi River and lived in South Africa for nearly thirty years, with an extensive newspaper experience in Africa, England and America, the author of many interesting sketches of South African life and scenery, formerly connected with the consular service at Port Elisabeth, whose comments on the war have been a ofavorably received by the American press, and whose magnificent collection of photographs will appear in this work,—will present South Africa as it is today, with views of everything of public interest, including most of the important scenes of battle and a graphically illustrated description of each stage in the progress of the war.

This great work is published in serial form, and when complete will comprise the most magnificent collectoin of photographic reproductions of the British-Boer war and South Africa obtainable in this country. Portfolios distributed by the Morning Times. For particulars see announcement on another page of this issue.

Most Miraculous Heart Cures.

Mr. Thos. Cooke, of Kingston, After Suffering Intensest Pain and Distress of the Heart for Seven Years---Is Cured Almost Miraculously by

Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart---A Remedy Which Saves Lives Every Day That Have Been Proclaimed

By Physicians Beyond Human Aid—It is a Powerful, Harmless Heart Specific and Can Work Wonders in Half-an-Hour.

Kingston, April 26, 1899.—Mr. Thomas Cooke, 269 Johnston street, Kingston, tells this wonderful story of his sickness from heart disease, and what he considers his almost miraculous recovery by the aid of that good angel of modern medical science—Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart. He says—"I suffered seven years from a very acute form of heart disease. I experienced great weakness; had smothering sensations; palpitation so badly that one in the same room could hear the heart thumps. I had great nervousness and depression at times, suffered excruciating shooting pains. Could not stand the slightest exertion or excitement. I tried many remedies recommended to me, and consulted best physicians on my ailments, and nobody gave me any hope of permanent recovery. But one day I read of a cure by this wonderful remedy which seemed just to be my own case repeated. I got a trial bottle and derived great benefit from it. I concluded to continue, as it promised a complete and permanent cure, and when I had used six bottles not a vestige of the trouble remained, and although that is a year and a half ago there has never been the slightest symptom of a return of the trouble."

You can readily verify this or any other testimony of the curative powers of Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart, for the commendations for it come spontaneously and unsolicited, and in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred are given out of the "fulness of the heart" in being snatched from the snare of so distressing an ailment as heart disease in any form.

If modern medical science has given to the world a remedy—a cure—that thousands have used and have tested the curative powers of after having suffered for years, and had been pronounced hopeless case—if, as a last resort, even it has proved such a boon, what an amount of suffering would be spared if when the slightest uneasiness of the heart is experienced Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart were used! It has never failed to do what it promises. It gives relief in the most acute forms of the disease in less than thirty minutes. It not only stimulates a healthy heart action, but it heals the diseased organs, gives vitality, tones the whole system, and it's not claiming too much to say "IT 'MOST WORKS MIRACLES."

Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder relieves cold in the head in ten minutes—it will cure the most acute and disgusting forms of catarrh, no matter how long standing.

Dr. Agnew's Ointment acts like magic on Itching, Irritating Skin Troubles, such as Eczema, Scald Head, Salt Rheum, and will cure Piles in from 3 to 5 nights—35 cents.

Dr. Agnew's little pills for Constipation, Sick Headache and Biliousness— 20 cts for 40 doses.

PETERBOROUGH, JANUARY 26, 1900

BRITISH FEELING ON THE WAR.

The English newspapers that reach this country are noticeably less panicky about the war that might be supposed by reading the brief paragraphs from their columns that are cabled across the ocean. The systems pursued by the English correspondents is to select the most piquant sentences, those containing the neatest thrusts at the War office, and the sharpest criticisms of the Generals in the field; but, when the newspapers come to hand they are found to contain much else that was not cabled.

Long and weighty editorials are the rule in the London press, and, instead of sending to this country a column or two of deliberate argument, the correspondents thriftily select a few significant lines that perhaps merely point the moral that the influential London editor sought to enforce.

It cannot be denied that the leading English newspapers have indulged in very candid criticism of the war; yet, if any person has gathered the idea that those newspapers give signs of fear as to the result, they are mistaken. Perhaps no other nation in the world could afford to have its newspapers speaking with perfect candor about mismanagement at home and poor generalship at the front, in the course of a war that drags gloomily along. The London press is the most self-respecting in the world, and no other has a higher sense of responsibility, and we may fairly argue that nothing better illustrates the confidence of the British public in its army, than the very fact that the English press does not feel obliged to sugar-coat the war news, nor to refrain from making whatever adverse criticism of the War Office, or of the generals in the field, that they may think fit. The British public is not easily stampeded.

One thing that we should not forget is, that, although we consider the failure of Gen. Buller to force the Boer army out of the fortified hills in which it has burrowed, as being very disappointing, yet this much has been gained—The wide world knows, and the Boers admit, by their attitude, that, however difficult the British advance may be, a Boer advance is beyond human possibility in any direction. This is the great change that has come over the situation. The Boers have nothing to hope for, nothing to fight for, but to postpone the result. They can now gain nothing. In every direction they have, for a month, been straining every muscle to hold ground. There is nothing else left to them. Every day wears their strength; every day fresh troops land at Cape Town, and soon an army greater than Buller's will be operating in the direction of Bloemfontein. Every day the people of London look for news of victory. Every day the people of Pretoria look for news that the Boers have succeeded in holding their own.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Buller's big check evidently caused another run on the bank of the Tugela.

A tramp claiming a relationship to Governor Roosevelt, took possession of a country schoolhouse near Rochester, N. Y., cooked a fowl on the schoolhouse stove, told the teacher when she put in an appearance that her services were no longer required, heard the lessons of the pupils, drove off the trustees with a revolver, and departed after delivering an address informing the pupils that they should feel highly honored by his visit.

There is one good feature about the Boer generals. They all wear whiskers and they all look alike, and hence it's not difficult for the enterprising publisher to run Joubert's face one day and Pretorius' the next off the same block.

FAIR MILLBROOK.

Latest Budget of News From Peterborough Southern Suburb.

Mr. F. Horner, our genial baggage master, went out to Lindsay last Thursday evening to attend the ball given under the auspices of the brotherhood of Railroad trainmen, which proved a great success. He returned home Friday morning, a little wearied with the excessive indulgence in the light fantastic with some of Lindsay's fair belles, but feeling greatly enlightened with the attraction he had been subject to, going as far ro remark his trips would be more regular in future. He also stated, upon being questioned, that the only proper way he had seen the ball, and enjoyed himself, would be in using the following lines descriptive muse—

The gents then brought their ladies,
And the neighbors brought their babies
And everything went lively from the start.

A PAINFUL ACCIDENT.

We have to chronicle another painful accident which occurred on Monday to Mr. Wm. O'Brien, one of our most prominent citizens. Mr. O'Brien, it appears, he has a farm a short distance from town, left his residence Monday to go out to the same, but having some purchases to make first tied his horse in a nearby shed and upon returning took no notice of another horse which proved to be a colt, tied beside his own, and upon going up to his own the other became frightened at his fur coat and kicked desperately, striking Mr. O'Brien on the leg and breaking it close to the ankle. Medical assistance was at once called and the injured limb set, which we trust will soon recover.

HOCKEY.

The hockey match between Millbrook and Keene, which has been twice postponed on account of unfavorable weather, is again announced to be played on Friday evening. If Keene does but only come forward which they failed to do Wednesday evening, although the oysters in Victoria House lockers showed plainly our boys surely expected their arrival, they will be well treated.

A number of the younger boys kept our hockeyists in great consternation Wednesday evening by frequently announcing that there was "20 from Keene," which, upon investigation, proved 20 in "Keene" frost.

BILLS OVER A CENTURY OLD

They Show Tea to Have Been a Cambridge Student's Favorite Drink.

There is a bill for groceries, etc., furnished for an undergraduate at Cambridge in the year 1788. The bill contains one or two items of furniture. Apparently the undergraduate took over rooms already furnished at a valuation, and certain articles had to be bought new, such as a hearth brush, a pail, a mop and a "Holland gotch." One knows not what this means, but it cost 2 shillings 9 pence (43 cents).

The undergraduate would seem at first sight to have consumed tea in a most reckless manner. On Oct. 24 he is charged 2 shillings for Hyson and 1 shilling 6 pence for Congo. On Nov. 1 he is charged 2 shillings for tea and on the same day, which looks odd, 6 shillings 6 pence for tea. On the 9th of the month he buys a new teapot, the old one, one supposes, worn out with hard service. However, this tea lasts him till the end of the term, so that his tea costs him for the two months no more than 11 shillings, or $2.75, and as the price of tea at this time varied from 8 shillings to about 25 shillings we may conclude that he got through no more than a pound during the term.

In other words, this young man took for breakfast a slight repast of weak tea and bread and butter. Dinner was then served at 12, so that breakfast was only what the Indians call a "chota hazri." On sugar he spent 4 shillings, which means six pounds at 8 pence a pound. On candles he spent 24 shillings 8½ pence, or about 3 shillings a week. He burned wax candles, mold candles and "wax twist." Salt was a shilling a packet. On two occasions he bought sand. Was, then, the floor of his room sanded? It would seem so.

India Rubber Industry.

The bulletin of the Royal gardens, Kew, states that the falling off in the production of India rubber at Lagos is due to the reckless way in which the trees are being exhausted. There is a want of control over the collectors, who tap young trees and destroy whole rubber forests by overworking, so that this industry, which is an important source of wealth to the colony, is in danger of extinction. A similar disaster occurred in Madagascar, and now active steps are being taken to preserve the industry by the establishment of plantations of rubber producing plants.

Animal Criminals.

A writer in Forest and Stream says that the criminal tendency is manifested to a greater or less extent by all the lower animals, and he has compiled a list of 18 crimes which are commonly committed by birds, beasts or reptiles. The indictment includes murder, parricide, fratricide, suicide, theft, kidnaping, highway robbery, polygamy and drunkenness.

HEAT SOLD IN BLOCKS.

SCIENTIFIC ENTHUSIAST WHO THINKS HE HAS A FORTUNE IN SIGHT.

The Trouble is He Doesn't Know How to Do it.

Concentrated heat, heat in blocks, to be delivered by the heat man as ice (is by the ice man; heat that can be stored away and taken out block by block when needed for warmth or for purpose of power—this is the extraordinary prophecy of the new president of the Brooklyn Engineers' club, George W. Tilson. Mr. Tilson made it in the course of his inaugural address before the club a few nights ago.

This scientific enthusiast does not pretend to have any idea as to how all this is to brought about or that he has been experimenting in this direction. He simply sees here the trend of a great development and names the fifth great civilizer—heat—after the alphabet, the art of printing, gunpowder and electricity.

No Change in Nature's Laws.

"Heat," said Mr. Tilson in the paper he read at the club, "is the power that moved the world. It drives our express trains, propels our ocean steamships, turns the wheels of our factories, turns winter into summer and night into day. And what more natural, then, if we wish to investigate this power, than we go to its source, the sun? The storage of the heat from the rays of the sun is going on at the present time and has been going on for ages. We call the product coal, but it is the heat and energy of the sun stored up, but at how great a loss of efficiency no one can tell. And do you doubt that in this coming twentieth century some man will be found who can accelerate this action and hasten it so that it can be brought about within a reasonable time and during the life of man? This will not be a change in the laws of nature, but it will be by acquiring such a knowledge of the laws of nature that they can be so taken advantage of as to produce what seems an anomaly.

"In these times it is the believer who is the conservative man and the doubter who is the radical.

"Think of an ocean steamship starting off on a voyage across the Atlantic without any coal or coal bunkers, and in its place tanks of concentrated heat! Think of our houses heated without the annoyance and dust of coal and ashes! Think of being served every morning in winter by the heatman, the same as we are served in summer by the iceman! Think of taking up the morning paper and reading that the good ship Eldorado has arrived over night laden with a general cargo and a certain amount of concentrated heat! Think of Peary starting off on a voyage to the north pole carrying among his general stores a certain amount of concentrated heat!"

How all this is to be brought about Mr. Tilson does not know. If he did, he says, he would guarantee to build within the next five years a clubhouse for the Brooklyn Engineers' club such as no society has ever seen. He would be sure that his name would be handed down honored among those of Morse, Edison, Tesla and Marconi. Perhaps the transformation will be brought by means of electricity, perhaps by means of liquefied air, perhaps by some method of which at the present time we have no knowledge. But it is bound to come. It may not come in our time, and when it does please remember that it was once predicted by Mr. Tilson in the Brooklyn Engineers' club.

Sing While Marching.

A German army doctor has discovered that singing possesses health giving properties. He claims that it intensifies the respiratory movements, thus rendering the lungs capable of dealing with more air. This increases and strengthens the action of all the organs of the body. Appetite and thirst increase, and the more frequent movements of the diaphragm materially aid digestion. German foot soldiers are therefore encouraged to sing on the march.

Electric Bell Substitute.

A substitute for an electric bell has been devised by a deaf couple. Not being able to hear the bell themselves, and having no servant, they have fixed up an arrangement by means of which when the button at the front door is pressed, the electric lights all over the place light up, and remain so until the button is released. By a reversal of the arrangement, all the lights are switched off when the button is operated after dark.

SHAVING ACCIDENTS.

THE BARBER DISCUSSES THEM WITH THE MAN IN HIS CHAIR.

Chances to Cut Throats That Are Not Often Taken Advantage Of—Narrow Escapes From Serious Mishaps—A Father's Dream.

"Did it ever strike you," asked the little barber, "how easy it would be for the man that shaves you to kill you?"

The man in the chair sat up quickly and looked carefully at the barber, who was feeling the edge of the razor with one finger. The barber smiled to reassure his customer and said:

"It seems a queer question, I know, but it is a wonder to me that there are not a number of people killed in that way every year. It would be the easiest thing in the world for the barber as he wielded his razor to make one sweep with it and sever the jugular vein, and you would be dead almost on the instant. Suppose, for instance, that the barber should go insane. There would be nothing to prevent his doing such a thing, and you would have no warning nor any opportunity to save yourself.

"There is always a chance of a serious accident happening to the man in the chair. I have seen a number of such accidents and have a horror of even nicking the man I am shaving. In fact, such an occurrence makes me feel out of sorts for the rest of the day. It was only a few days ago that I almost had an accident that gave me a great fright and completely unnerved me. I was shaving a young man, and in passing from one side of the chair to the other a button of my waistcoat caught in his hair. It pulled a trifle, and he moved his head suddenly just as I went to put the blade to his face. I came within an ace of slashing him, and only a quick jump back saved him. The perspiration stood out on me, and I had to call one of the other men to finish shaving my customer.

"But the worst accident I ever saw in a barber shop occurred while I was working in a small town in the west. One of the patrons of the place was a business man whose 5-year-old daughter was lying at the point of death. Her father put in most of his time at her bedside. One afternoon while she was asleep he came in here to get shaved. He was so exhausted through lack of sleep that he fell asleep immediately after he had taken his seat in the chair next to the one behind which I was at work.

"He dreamed that some one had come into the place to tell him that his child had died. With a cry of alarm he started up just as the barber laid the razor against his neck. Into the flesh it sank. He was not yet thoroughly awake, and as he imagined that some one was holding him back from his child he threw out his hand to free himself, and his fingers closed over the blade of the razor. So dazed was he that he could not realize what had happened, but sat there in the chair, with the blood streaming from his throat and fingers.

"The man who had done the cutting was the first to act, although half crazed. He hurried for a doctor while we stanched the flow of blood the best we knew how. Even as the doctor was at work sewing up the wounds a messenger came to say that the little girl had died suddenly in the greatest agony, calling for her father just before she died. He was under the influence of ether at the time and did not know, but afterward, when he heard of the circumstances attending her death, he insisted that he had heard her call as he lay there asleep in the chair and that it was her cry that had caused him to make his sudden movement.

"For years after the accident he continued to shave in the same shop where it had occurred, and it was never mentioned. He carried a reminder of it for the remainder of his life. In addition to the scar on his throat, the fingers of his right hand were all drawn up and useless.

"Sudden movements while in the barber's chair are always apt to be attended with serious results, and I could recall dozens of instances where it has been only the merest chance that has prevented serious if not fatal mishaps. Nine times out of ten where the person getting shaved receives a nick and lays the blame on the barber he should thank the wielder of the razor that it was no worse. The probabilities are that it was quick action by the barber that prevented a bad cut. A slight nick often would have been a case for the doctor or coroner were it not for the watchfulness of the barber. Here yesterday I happened to draw blood from a young fellow's face near his ear, and he made a great fuss about it, until I showed him that it was only the sudden withdrawal of the razor which resulted in the slight nick that prevented him losing a good part of his ear. Then he was grateful and thanked me, besides promising to be more careful in the future.

"But there are other ways the barber has of getting even," continued the little barber after relathering one side of his customer's face. "There is no need of his slashing a man. He can inflict injuries that will make his victim decidedly uncomfortable, and at the same time the latter will not be aware of what is being done." What the barber meant by this last remark his victim did not ask.—New York Sun.

A QUEER SENSATION.

HOW IT FEELS TO BE HELD UP AT THE POINT OF A REVOLVER.

Curious Phenomenon That Causes Each Man in a Roomful to Believe That a Weapon Is Pointed Straight at His Own Head.

"If you will take my word for a little experience I had recently, perhaps I can make clear to you how it is possible for three bad men to hold up a roomful of fairly brave men and get away safely with their money," said a merchant from the state of Washington who was a guest at the Lotos club one night recently. "I was in such a hold up not long ago, and I have ceased jeering at fellows who have been through similar experiences. I was one of 70 men who were held up in a big gambling hall, and as I am not a regular patron of such places I kept quiet about it at home. The gambling house is one of the best known in the west, and on the night of the hold up it was filled with a representative crowd. A search would have disclosed the fact undoubtedly that many of the men present were armed. No trouble in recent years has occurred in this place, and there was no reason to anticipate any. It was nearly midnight when the door opened and three men, masked and each holding two revolvers, entered the room.

"'Hands up, quick!' shouted the foremost man.

"I was sitting at a faro table when I heard this command, and as I looked up I found a revolver pointing straight at my head. When I compared notes with the other seventy odd men later, I found that each one had the same experience. There were only six revolvers, and yet each man in the room was willing to swear that one of them was pointed at his head all the time. The crowd was simply paralysed with fright. For two or three seconds not a man moved. Then over in one corner a Leadville sport brought his hand around to reach his hip pocket.

"'Stop that or I'll shoot,' said one of the masked men, covering him with his revolver. 'Hands up, now; quick! We mean business.'

"Every man in that room did hold his hands up. There was no hesitation then. It was my first experience in that kind of game, but it was not until I was able to take my hands down that I realized how tiresome the operation was. There we stood, each man with his hands stretched high above his head, held up in a room on a busy street when an outcry would bring help at once. It was a pretty sure thing, however, that no one would make the outcry. The three masked men had eyes for every move, and their revolvers pointed all ways at once. It is easy for a man who has not been through such an experience to suggest that if several men had only made a break these fellows would have run. I can honestly say that the barrel of the revolver into which I looked seemed to me to be as large as a sewer pipe. I even thought that I could see the end of the bullet, and I was awfully afraid that the man who held the revolver might get nervous and shoot me by accident. I tried to look pleasant to appease him. All this had taken perhaps a minute and a half when the spokesman shouted to us:

"'Line up against that wall with your backs to me, and the man who takes his hands down will get shot. Quick now, gentlemen, if you please. Obey orders, and you won't get hurt.'

"We lined up as directed like a lot of schoolboys.

"'Now then, my friend here will relieve you of your valuables without your assistance,' said the spokesman. 'Don't move, because there are two dead shots behind you. Keep quiet, and it will soon be over.'

"It was a very cool piece of work, I can assure you. One of the three went straight down the row, taking each man's watch and money. He didn't get as much as he expected, and as near as we could estimate later the total haul was under $5,000. There was over $100,000 in the safe which the robbers overlooked. When we had been cleaned out, the spokesman said:

"'Now, gentlemen, we are sorry to inconvenience you further, but we shall have to request you to stand just as you are for five minutes more. Don't cut the time short, or you will get hurt.'

"The side door opened at this instant, and we heard the order 'Hands up, Chink, or you are a dead man!' It was one of our Chinese servants who was returning with a tray filled with drinks. He promptly dropped his tray, smashing all the glasses and threw up his hands. We heard no other sound for five minutes. Each man counted the seconds to make sure that he shouldn't take down his hands ahead of time. The proprietor was the first man to move. As soon as he felt that it was safe he turned and found the robbers gone. He picked up a heavy chair and threw it through the window. It carried the sash with it, and the crash that followed attracted general attention in the street below. The proprietor stuck his head out of the window and profanely shouted such details of the hold up as might put the people in the street on the track of the robbers. It was useless, however. The fellows walked out quietly, took off their masks and disappeared without leaving any clew. We all piled out of the place to aid the search. When we found out that a chase was hopeless, most of us came back to the gambling room to talk it over. When we entered the place, we found the Chink standing in the ruins of his glasses with his hands still above his head. The proprietor told him to take his hands down. The Chink wouldn't do it, and two men who pulled his arms to his side had all they could do to hold him. He had looked in the big barrel of one of those small revolvers, and he hadn't forgotten it.

"Now this was an actual experience, and some of your New York papers had accounts of it. If I were mixed up in an affair of that sort again, I would raise my arms just as quickly. It was expediency and not a yellow streak that made that crowd act as it did."

Never Caught Alive.

In Lake Derwentwater, in England, there is a species of fish called vendace, which are never caught alive. They are said to frequent the deeper parts of the lake and are never met with in the rivers. One or two dead specimens of the breed which have been found in the lake are treasured as curiosities.

ENGINEERS' IRON NERVES

CRUCIAL SECONDS IN THE LIVES OF VETERANS OF THE LEVER.

Few of Them Have Been Found Wanting When the Emergency Came.

To the engineer belongs the most hazardous and at the same time the most responsible task of any of the men who run the train, and the passengers on one of the great flyers, as they loll back in their seats reading the most recent work of ficton, or gazing placidly forth at the scenery, scarcely ever give a thought to the fact that ahead of them there is a dust and oil-begrimed man who, for the time being, literally carry their lives in the hollow of his sweaty hand. It is extraordinary how few cases there are where engineers have been found derelict in the moment of wrecks since railroads were first introduced into the country, but the record of the number of engineers who have failed when the crucial test came is infinitesimal.

When once danger appears in front an engineer's duty is, first, to close the throttle, second, to apply the airbrakes, third, to reverse the engine—that is, to throw over the reversing lever, which enables the engine to run in the opposite direction from which it had been going; fourth, to reopen the throttle. To do these four acts calls but for a small fraction of time, but where wrecks result the danger is usually so imminent as frequently not to leave even sufficient interval to accomplish them, and often when the ruins have been cleared away the body of the faithful guardian has been discovered with his hand stiff in death on the throttle, reverse lever or brake and bearing silent witness as to how far he had got toward the accomplishment of that duty which he had yielded his life to perform

Some are Reckless.

Many engineers are reckless and will take awful chances. At one time a certain driver was taking through a special train consisting of four empty freight cars and a caboose. The station master told him that the down train was a trifle late, and due at the next station beyond, seven miles away at 2.37 o'clock. Glancing at his watch, the engineer said he had nine minutes, and decided to take the chance. He had to cross a bridge just beyond the town he was leaving, and midway across he began to increase his speed. As the engine struck ground again on the other side and they headed straight up the river's valley he threw her wide open and gave his engine ever ounce of steam there was in the boiler. Three miles farther on when running to the limit of his capacity, he struck the down train head on. Both engineers and firemen were killed outright, and the engines reduced to a condition that rendered them only fit for the scrap heap.

Strange to say, no passengers or other member of either crew were killed outright or afterward died as the result of injuries received. Only the shoulders and head of the fireman of the special were ever found. He had been driven into the door of the firebox feet first, but had stuck at the shoulders. The white-hot fire within had completely incinerated the rest of his body. To look at the door of a fire-box such a casuality as that seems all but impossible, the opening looks so small. In reality, however, it is large enough, as any railroad man can tell you.

Watch Was To Blame.

The watch of the engineer of the special when found was still running, and was four minutes behind. It was to this error of his timepiece that the tragic death of himself and his three companions was due.

In daylight it is the habit of the engineer to follow with the eye the glistening track of rails over which he must travel. Should a rail be misplaced, it would break this line of light and betray itself to the watchful man in time to stop and save his train. This particular wreck, however, resulted from that curse and dread of all railway runners—the washout. The culvert which caused it was a short one, its width being hardly greater than the combined length of engine and tender. The masonry had been carried away, but the fishplates and spikes holding firm the rails still crossed the gully. This held the rail line of light true, and in consequence the engineer was well up to the danger before he realized it. He was able to stop the train, but to do so had to go into the ditch himself, although, fortunately, he did not lose his life.

He was washed out of his cab window by the flood. His jumper catching over a stone, the trani newsboy fortunately found him in time to save him from death by drowning. So close a thing was it that when the train came to a full stop the front wheels of the forward truck of the baggage car was hanging over the opening made by the washout. No one was injured save the engineer, who escaped with a couple of broken ribs and a dislocated shoulder. He completely recovered, however, and is one of the most trusted engineers on that particular line to this city.

An Amusing Incident.

A rather amusing thing occurred in connection with this wreck. There was little coal in the tender, what was left being in the rear end, and the fireman had gone back to shovel it forward. The impetus of the engine caused it to jump clear across the gully and stick its nose in the opposite bank. The rear part, being the heavier, fropped first, carrying the forward part of the tender with it, causing tender and engine to shut up like a jack knife. The fireman was tossed clean over the engine and alighted uninjured on the track beyond the washout.

He was a lanky, six-foot Irishman, with carroty hair and the brogue still strong upon him. In telling of his experience afterward he said—

"Sure, it was a quare expayriende there was. I one minit stooping wid me shovel over the coal hape and the next minit there was I and me shovel and the coal oil flying troo de air, and each trying to see who would get there first. Glory be that I was not hurt at all, at all. It's a brave man is Moike (the engineer); fine, big, brave man, sor. The last thing he said was—what do you think it was, sor, and him expecting to die the next minit, at that, sor? Widout turning his head he yells out to me, 'Jump, you red-headed scoundrel!' he yells, and while I didn't have no toime me, I take it very koindly that he thought of me as he did." The tears stood in the honest fellow's eyes as he told the story.

RAN A RACE WITH DEATH.

Narrow Margin by Which a Man on a Railway Bridge Won.

A high trestle bridge more than a quarter of a mile long, supporting the single track of the Nickel Plate railroad, spans the valley of Grand river, east of Painesville, O. The bridge is little wider than the distance between the rails, and the ties are placed eight or ten inches apart, the space between being open to the river below.

A young man who crossed recently had a thrilling experience on the bridge. He had just passed the center when a fast train rounded the curve behind him. As the engine whistled he quickened his pace. With every step the train was rushing nearer, and there was not a moment to lose.

Once the young man stumbled and seemed about to fall, but quickly regained his balance and hurried on. As he reached the place for which he had started the train was close behind, and he had just time to swing himself over the side of the bridge as the locomotive thundered by. The ends of the ties were slippery with grease from dripping axle boxes, and his foot slipped wide as he left the track. His right hand, stretched blindly out before him, touched a round iron bar, bracing two parts of the bridge, and, with a grip like that of a drowning man, his fingers clasped around it. For a moment he swung in empty air. In another his left hand had found a place beside his right, and his feet touched the welcome edge of a brace below. With bleeding fingers clutching the slender iron bar that vibrated widely from side to side, moments seemed hours.

At last the train passed, and the young man was able to climb slowly to the track above. Unnerved by the trying experience, he lay for a moment stretched across the rails and, then rising to his feet, with blanched face and unsteady limbs, made his way to firm ground.—Cleveland Leader.

Origin of Diamonds.

The origin of diamonds, which for so long has been a debated question, appears to be explained by a recent discovery near Kimberley.

In both the Indian and the Brazilian diamond fields the gem occurs like a pebble in certain gravelly strata, but has not been traced back to any rock that gives any indication of its genesis. After the discovery of diamonds in the river sand of some South American rivers a peculiar material of a brownish buff color, which turned to a dark bluish tint, was found. It became darker as the miners dug down. The diamonds lay in this material, together with several other materials, such as garnets, iron ores, augite, olivine, etc. Excavations, begun systematically, were eventually carried on on such a large scale that near Kimberley they reached a depth of more than 1,400 feet. Here the rock is about as hard as ordinary limestone. The blue ground is found only in limited areas. The rocks around are of dark shades, banded with hard sandstone, in which sheets or dikes of basalt or some material which was once in a molten condition are occasionally found. The blue ground fills a sort of shaft of colossal size in these other rocks and is itself cut up by similar dikes. The opinions of geologists differ as to whether the gems are produced where they now lie or have been formed of some volcanic explosions. Experts now tend to the belief that the blue ground in which diamonds were found is not the true birthplace. The bowlders are often watermarked and may have rested for ages in an ancient gravel at the very bottom of sedentary rocks of the district. In course of time volcanic explosions shattered the rocky floor in which the diamonds were imbedded, of which the bowlders were only samples, and dispersed it, together with the overlying materials. It is believed that this is the true explanation of the formation of the diamand bearing blue ground.

Tea Drinking and Cold Feet.

Professor Hutchinson, F.R.S., reports the case of a lady who could not take tea because it made her feet icy cold and wet with perspiration. She thought that the soles were chiefly affected and that the hands were also made cold, but not so markedly as the feet. Mr. Hutchinson had long been familiar with the fact that tea made the feet of some persons cold, but did not know that cold prespiration attended it. He believed the coldness to be caused by contraction of the arteries, inasmuch as the feet shrank. Alcohol had usually an opposite effect.

SOME QUEER DREAMS.

VISIONS THAT RESULTED IN THE CAPTURE OF CRIMINALS.

Marvelous Manifestations That Baffle the Ingenuity of Man to Explain and Which Prove Anew That Truth is Stranger Than Fiction.

A very remarkable instance of the tracing of a criminal by means of a dream occurred in St. Louis. A woman named Mary Thornton was detained in custody for a month, charged with the murder of her husband. A week or so after her arrest she requested to see one of the prison officials and told him she had dreamed that an individual named George Ray had murdered her spouse, giving the official at the same time full details of the tragedy as witnessed in her vision. The man Ray was not suspected at the time, but the prison authorities were so much impressed by the woman's obvious earnestness that a search was at once made for him.

After some delay he was traced and charged with the crime, the details of the same as seen in the dream being rehearsed to him. Overcome with astonishment, he then and there confessed that he had committed the crime. Curiously enough, the woman had only met the murderer once and believed him to be on the very best of terms with her husband.

Almost as remarkable was the case of a woman named Drew, who dreamed one night that her husband, a retired sailor, had been murdered by a peddler at a Gravesend tavern, where the said husband was in the habit of putting up when visiting the town in question. The first news that awaited her on rising in the morning was that her spouse had been assassinated at the very tavern she had seen in her extraordinary vision, whereupon she burst into hysterical tears and cried out that her dream had come true.

She calmed down somewhat after a few hours and then handed the police officials an exact description of the peddler of the vision, giving a minute account of his dress, which included a blue coat of a very peculiar pattern. Marvelous as the fact may appear, a man wearing such a coat and following the occupation of a peddler was discovered two days later at an inn some six miles from Gravesend, and, on being taxed with the crime, he at once admitted that he was guilty and that robbery had been the motive of the outrage. He was hanged soon afterward, his doom having been brought about by the flimsy evidence of a woman's dream.

Women as dreamers seem more successful than men, but a rather peculiar instance of a crime being traced by a vision and in which the dreamer was a member of the male sex comes from Rennes, in France. A worthy merchant, having quitted his office one Saturday evening, proceeded home to dinner and after enjoying a substantial meal lay down on the couch and fell into a light doze. A very vivid dream then came to him wherein he saw two men of the burglar type engaged in rifling the safe in his office, and so much impressed was he by the vision that he resolved, upon awakening, to at once go to the office and see that everything was under lock and key.

His amazement may be imagined when, on arriving there, he discovered the door forced and a burglary in progress. To summon a couple of gendarmes was the work of an instant, and five minutes later the thieves, who proved to be notorious housebreakers, were on their way to the police depot, where the prosecutor told his extraordinary story. In view of the fact that the safe contained valuables to the extent of some thousands of pounds, the dream in question proved a very fortunate one for the dreamer.

How to explain these marvelous manifestations, which prove once more that truth is stranger than fiction, is a task beyond the ingenuity of man to compass. Perchance the theory of telepathy may have something to do with the mysterious business, but even that theory would appear rather inadequate in such cases as the aforementioned.

A skillful forger who moved in the highest circles of society was once detected by the agency of a dream. The affair occurred in Boston and caused the greatest excitement of the time.

The forger, a young man of eight or nine and twenty, had become acquainted with a rich publisher, at whose house he became a constant guest. One day the publisher's bankers discovered that some one was forging their client's signature to various large checks, and two detectives were at once instructed to look out for the culprit.

Their efforts proved useless, but one evening the publisher's youngest daughter, a little girl of 11, dreamed that she saw a man whom she described as "like Mr. Blank," the visitor to whom reference has been made, sitting in a room in Maine street copying her father's signature. The child's dream was communicated to the police, who, though inclined to ridicule the same at the outset, eventually promised to have the gentleman in question watched, with the result that his lodgings were raided and a complete plant for the making of bank notes found there. It then transpired that he was a man who was wanted for manifold forgeries throughout the Union, and he was sent to prison for a very long term.

The child's dream was all the more extraordinary in view of the fact that she was too young to understand the leading incidents of the business and attributed the copying of her father's signature in the dream to the "gentleman wanting to write nicely, like papa." Strange, very strange, but none the less true, and proving once more that, as Hamlet remarked, "There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio, than are dreamed of in your philosophy."—Philadelphia Times.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES

THE UNITED STATES TO AID THE BOERS

The audience got up and yelled itself hoarse over the rhyme. Resolutions were passed declaring that "it is morally wrong and particularly absurb to aid and abet England in her wrong doing, because she will lose prestige, if she fails in her iniquitous attempt," and "that the much-vaunted English civilization has failed to produce a better soldier than the Boer." The resolutions further ran—

"That we request the President to see to it that the feeling of the American people with respect to this most wicked war is made known to the British ministry; and we further request him not to wait till both combatants ask him to act as arbitrator, but to proffer his services."

"Demand it! Demand it," shouted the audience. "No request! Demand!"

The resolutions were passed with a whoop, one intrepid individual voting no, whereupon the crowd demanded that he be put out. As a fitting close the chairman proposed three cheers for the Boers. They were given, and a big man on the stage jumped up shouting—

"Now, three groans for the British!"

They were given with heart-felt unction and the meeting adjourned. Subscription envelopes were passed around during the meeting and it was announced afterward that about $5,000 had been subscribed.

ENGLAND IS DENOUNCED.

Prominent Men Address a Pro-Boer Meeting at Minneapolis

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 2.—Bitter denunciation of Great Britain was one feature of the pro-Boer mass meeting held here this evening, another feature was the utter absence of republicans from the gathering, which was attended by 2,000 democrats, and still a third feature was the lashing given England by Rev. J. M. Cleary, a Roman Catholic priest of this city, who made an address so radical that even the most ardent Boer sympathizers looked startled.

Prominent at the meeting were Governor John Lind, Mayor Gray of Minneapolis, L. A. Rosin, the governor's secretary; State Secretary McGowan, E. L. Corser, a leading member of the Anti-Imperialistic league, and many other antis and Judge William Prentiss of Chicago.

"There is no news today from South Africa," said the mayor in opening the meeting. "This means that God has not yet permitted the British army to wipe out the South African Republic, much as it would like to do so."

The mayor than referred to Secretary of State Hay as a "London importation." He appealed to England to stop the war against the Boers and said, in conclusion, that three-fourths of the American people would favor having President McKinley ask Great Britain to call off her soldiers."

Before the meeting adjourned a resolution calling upon the president to take action along the lines laid down by Mayor Gray was adopted by a unanimous vote. The resolution incidentally denounced Great Britain and expressed sympathy for the Boers.

DEMAND FOR INTERVENTION.

Citizens of St. Louis Would Have President McKinley End War.

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 2.—The Fourteenth Street theatre was packed with enthusiastic sympathizers of the Boer cause this afternoon. Dr. Emil Preetorious, editor of the Westliche Post acted as chairman and opened the meeting with a brief and interesting speech. Addresses were made by ex-Governor W. J. Stone, Judge Rombeu and Estes, J. W. Taylor and O'Neil Ryan.

Resolutions extremely strong and sympathetic were read and adopted. The resolutions are probably the strongest passed by any pro-Boer mass meeting yet held in this country. After declaring in favor of freedom, as defined by the immoral and illustrious Abraham Lincoln, they call upon the president of the United States to use his good offices to bring about a quick ending of the struggle now on between the Boer republics and Great Britain, and if later developments tend to forecast the ultimate victory of Great Britain to step in and "demand" that the war be stopped. They also ask the president of the United States to recognize at once the representatives of the Transvaal and Orange Free State officially.

The resolutions are to be sent to the congressmen representing St. Louis in Washington.

From Indiana

Fort Wayne, Ind., Feb. 2. — At the meeting of the Fort Wayne Hiberian societies tonight resolution were adopted indorsing the Boers in their war against Great Britain and also condemning the sympathy of the administration for the British army. Committees were appointed to solicit funds for the Boer ambulance corps.

JOY AT BRITISH LOSSES.

Eau Claire, Wis., Citizens Will Celebrate Victories of the Boers.

Eau Claire, Wis., Feb. 2.—Several prominent attorneys are arranging for a great pro-Boer celebration to be held in this city as soon as the English losses reach the 10,000 mark. That is, as soon as 10,000 English soldiers are killed, maimed or taken prisoners.

The pro-Boer enthusiasts will engage brass bands and have a grand jubilee over the English losses.

Lima, O., Feb. 2.—This afternoon divisions Nos. 1 and 2 of the Ancient Order of Hiberians held a largely attended meeting at their hall and took action in sympathy with the Boers in the Transvaal war with England. It was decided to give an entertainment on the evening of Washington's birthday, the proceeds to be used in establishing an ambulance corps and buying medical supplies for the Boers. Prominent speakers will be present. Resolution expressing sympathy for the Boers were passed today and copies were ordered sent to Congressman Gordon, representing this district, and also to Charles Adkins, Allen country's representative in the Ohio legislature.

HUMBLED THE SENATOR.

He Tried to Assert His Independence, but Failed Miserably.

The writer remembers a good many years ago when the late Ezekiel Clarke was a member of the state senate from Johnson county. It is well known that the senator or member from Johnson county is always expected to get a large appropriation for the state university. To fail would be political death. Senator Clarke was anxious to succeed and during the early part of the session voted for everything. If another senator had a bill, all he had to do was to go and whisper in Ezekiel's ear, and he would vote "aye."

One day, however, Ezekiel came into the senate with hair cut and a clean shave. He sat upright in his seat and began to slaughter right and left. State Senator George F. Wright looked across to where the senator from Johnson was sitting and inquired what change had come over the senator from Johnson county. The other senator replied that the appropriation bill for the state university had now passed both houses, and the senator from Johnson was going to make up for lost time.

Clarke kept on punching heads until the senator from Jefferson, Moses A. McCold, rose and solemnly introduced a bill for an act entitled "An act repealing the appropriation for the state university." A broad smile passed around the room, and everybody except the senator from Johnson saw the joke. But the spirit of levity passed away from Senator Clarke. He at once assumed his humble attitude, and the other boys voted him as usual during the remainder of the session.—Des Moines Capital.

A Race With the Sun.

The London Daily Mail says if an aerial machine were capable of traveling at any rate up to 1,000 miles an hour a traveler in it, starting westward from London at a speed of 600 miles an hour, would arrest the progress of time. If he started at 10 a. m., it would always be to him 10 a. m. Should he find his unending day monotonous, he could reverse his direction and get a quick succession of short days and nights of some six hours' duration, but he could regulate the length by the speed of his machine. Suppose he traveled from London one night at 10 o'clock westward at a speed of 1,000 miles per hour. He would soon experience the sensation of seeing the sun rising in the west where it had set a short time before.

All Men Prize Muscle and Strength

Paine's Celery Compound

Builds up the Weak and Broken-down.

It Has Special Elements That Purify and Enrich the Blood.

It Quickly Expels Disease Germs from the System.

Heaven's grandest and most glorious creation is the man who is physically perfect—blessed with iron nerves, brawny muscle and fullness of strength.

Half-sick, weakly and broken down men makes their homes unhappy and miserable, and as citizens they are, frankly speaking of small value.

To be useful in society and our country, and to become fit temples worthy of our great Creator, the weakly, sick and diseased should use every endeavor to acquire health and strength.

Heaven, always kind to those who are willing to help themselves, has given to failing and ailing men Paine's Celery Compound, the greatest and grandest of health-giving medicines.

Millions are now using Paine's Celery Compound with mighty and happy results. High encomiums and thankful letters come from physicians, lawyers, clergymen, bankers, legislators, business men, mechanics and farmers who have been made well and strong after months and years of sickness.

Try it, ye men who are honestly seeking after health! Disappointed in the past by worthless pills, nervines, sarsaparillas and concoctions, you will have cause to thank Heaven for Paine's Celery Compound. The good results that follow the use of one bottle are wonderful and convincing.

His "Dear Old Jim."

"Corbett is my friend and benefactor," says Mr. Jeffries. "I was once his sparring partner, and he treated me as a gentleman. Hence I have gladly agreed to fight him as a return for favors. I am bound by all the ties of friendship and gratitude to give him a chance to fight me." Was there ever such a touching instance of devotion? Mr. Jeffries will reward his old patron and benefactor by beating him into pulp and knocking his head off. One can fancy him saying, as he puts his terrible right into his friend's ribs, "Dear old Jim!"—Kansas City Star.

The Billing and Cooing.

Uncle George—You do not appear to think it necessary to spend so much time at home as you did when you were first married. I suppose the billing and cooing are all over now.

Harry—There doesn't seem to be much of a let up in the billing, and, as for the cooing, I am dreadfully afraid of it. It is sure to mean a new hat or a new gown or a new something.—Boston Transcript.

Skin.

Each average human being has about 15,000 square feet of skin to look after and nearly 3,000,000 oil and sweat glands. The outer layer of skin is constantly wearing off and must be constantly removed to allow the new skin beneath to form fresh, white and beautiful.

To make paper fireproof nothing more is necessary than to saturate the paper in a strong solution of alum water, and when thoroughly dry it will resist the action of flame.

THE ARCTIC MOSQUITO.

It Is About the Most Terrible Insect Pest in the World.

"Nothing that has ever been written about the arctic mosquito begins to come up to the real thing," said a guest in the St. Charles corridor the other evening. "I went up the Yukon river in the summer of 1896, representing the Alaska and Dominion Trading company, and we struck mosquitoes as soon as we got into the hills. They are twice as large as our familiar bayou species, and their sting is like the prod of a hot needle. They sweep along the valleys in dense clouds, and if they catch a man unprepared they are liable to blind him before he can escape. I heard stories of children being stung to death and can readily believe them.

"Whenever we went ashore we wore heavy hat nets and took the utmost precaution, but were certain to suffer more or less. One of our party cut the tongues out of his shoes, and a narrow line of sock was exposed under the lacing. Next day he was bitten there at least a hundred times, and his feet were so terribly inflamed that the shoes had to be cut off.

"Another man, a fireman in the boat crew, got drunk on Alaska whisky one afternoon and lay down to take a nap in a corner of the engine room. I noticed him a little later and was horrified at the solid brown mass of mosquitoes that had settled on a small exposed section of his cheek and throat. In an hour his face was swollen out of all resemblance to anything human, he was unable to swallow and was burning with fever. It was a week before he was able to be about. I saw a number of cattle near Fort Hamilton that had been made stone blind by stings near the eye.

"The arctic foothill mosquito is without doubt the most terrible insect pest in the world."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

"WHOSE GOD WAS HIS BELLY."

Of him it might be written that "his god was his belly." Too often he permitted himself to become fascinated by the "ruby" and good eating, and when an outraged digestion goaded him to remorse, he exhibited in a marked degree his strongly religious nature. One thing which may have influenced him in his sanctimonious outpourings was that he feared he might die. The agony that disordered digestion caused him made him sometimes think that death would be a relief, and yet he was not anxious to die. His appearance partly evidenced his distress. He was bloated by the fermentation of partly-digested foods. His breath was foul from the pestiferous gases generated by this same crude matter, which lay like so many cobblestones on his stomach. When at his worst, his eyes protruding, a glassy yellow in a sea of purple, he heard of Hutch Tablets, he determined to try them, feeling satisfied that he could obtain relief from the cures he heard Hutch had been making. He started taking the little chocolate-coated tablets. He felt relieved almost instantly, and on continuing their use felt quite a different man. He was able to attend the convivial gatherings which oftentimes kept him up in the "wee sma' hours"; and his religious convictions were if anything strengthened. and a much truer inspiration given his spiritual life.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

A Year in Toronto.

At the police court yesterday Lewis Clapper, of Hastings, came up for sentence for robbing McKenna and Brady's store in that village a short time ago. Clapper broke in at night and stole a clothing outfit and fifteen dollars in money. He acknowledged the act and was sentenced by the magistrate to one year in the Central prison.

Lumbering Operations.

Mr. P. M. Gunter, of the Gilmour Company, called on the Times yesterday on his way to the camps in Galway and Harvey. Mr. Gunter says that his company have about 120 men in the camps in the above townships. All the timber will be floated down the Otonabee river to Trenton. Next year, if stiff prices prevail, a much larger force of men will be used.

Belleville Street Railway.

Belleville Sun.—In view of the negotiations of Mr. W. H. Pearson and the city in regard to the franchise of the Belleville Traction Co. the public generally will be greatly interested to learn that the entire plant, rolling stock, equipment and property of the Belleville street railway, including the franchise for lighting, power, etc., will be offered for sale by public auction at the bank of Montreal at the court house here on Thursday, March 1. The sale is to be made under the provisions of a mortgage issued to the Bank of Montreal by the Canadian General Electric Co., Peterborough.

A Big Shipment.

The largest shipment of cattle which ever left Peterborough, was sent out from Mr. H. P. Kennedy's yards Thursday over the C.P.R. to Kansas city.

The entire shipment consisted of 17 cars, making a complete train. The cattle was a mixed lot composed of calves, yearlings, and aged beasts and were all comfortably housed in Street's Western Stable cars in which the animals can be fed and watered without being taken out. Over the cars canvas was stretched to prevent draughts and in big letters on each canvas was inscribed "Peterborough Stock Yards, H. P. Kennedy, shipper."

There was 800 head of cattle, all told and a double decked car of sheep.

ST. PAUL'S CHURCH.

Annual Meeting of the Members and Adherents of the Church.

The annual meeting of the St. Paul's Presbyterian church took place on Thursday evening, and was largely attended. After devotional exercises Sheriff Hall was voted to the chair.

REPORTS.

The Moderator read the report of the Session, which was received and adopted. The report stated that the number of families on the roll was 400, the largest number ever recorded. The total membership now stands at 745. The losses by death were 13; by certificate, 14, and by removals from town, 10.

The Church Secretary read the report of the Church Managers. The report referred to the alterations and improvements in the church organ in connection therewith. The amount due the bank was principally accounted for in this way. General reference was made to arrearages by envelopes, collections for missionary purposes and mortgage debt, which now stands at the sum of $2,500.

Mr. Robert Innes read the report of the Missionary Society. The total amount collected was $1,017.81.

Mr. J. Coyle Brown read a very interesting dissertation on the subject from a layman's standpoint. The meeting listened with close attention to the clear and concise explanation of the origin, aims and objects of the scheme.

The reports of the Sunday School, Women's Foreign Missionary Society, and Ladies' Aid Society were also received and adopted, and ordered to be printed in the year book with the other reports.

GENERAL BUSINESS.

The retiring members of the Board of Managers were Messrs. Robert Innes, Peter Hamilton, Thomas Tucker and Dr. Greer.

On motion of Mr. J. D. Collins, seconded by Mr. J. Wright, the retiring members of the Board were again re-elected.

On motion of Mr. W. Madill, seconded by Mr. Fife, Messrs. John Crane and W. Pringle were elected auditors for 1900.

The matter of the erection of a mission school in the south ward was then introduced.

The secretary read the petition to the Presbytery from the heads of 40 families in the district asking permission to erect a school building on the lot previously purchased for that purpose on the corner of Wolfe and Reid streets. The resolution of the officer bearers of the congregation was also read expressing approval of the undertaking and permitting the whole or any portion of the subscriptions to the Century Fund being devoted to this purpose.

On motion the whole matter will be left in the hands of the officials of the church.

THE EXCELLENT CHOIR.

Mr. P. Hamilton gave expression to his appreciation of the services of the organist and choir, and alluded to the continued harmony which prevailed among the members. The congregation, he thought, had just reason to be thankful for the high satisfactory musical services of the choir for their valuable services during the past year.

The motion was heartily carried.

It might be said in this connection that Mr. John Crane, the organist and choirmaster, has just completed his seventh year in the position.

The meeting then closed with the doxology and the benediction.

A Serious Accident.

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. W. E. Sherwood, while passing along near the Y. M. C. A. building, slipped and fell on the pavement, breaking her leg below the knee. She was conveyed to the Oriental Hotel, where Dr. Halliday set the injurd limb. The unfortunate lady is now doing as well as can be expected.

Have a Cigar?

Capt. John Martin received a letter yesterday from Mr. James Regan, of Monroe, Wash., in which Mr. Regan states that Seattle is full of miners preparing to go north, mostly into the Atlin district. He winds up his letter as follows: "Give my best wishes to the Times, and tell them I reached home safely. I get the paper regularly, and like it very much. When I was in Peterborough a few weeks ago, I noticed that the Times was in everybody's hands, so concluded to subscribe for it myself, and am not sorry I did so."

Found on the Skin
Phosophate
Direct from the Brain

We know that active brain work throws out the phosphate of potash, for this product is found on the skin after excessive brain work, therefore, brain workers, in order to keep well, must have proper food containing phosphate of potash to quickly and surely rebuild the used-up tissue. That one can obtain such food has been proven in thousands of cases among users of Postum Cereal Food Coffe and Grape Nuts.

Both contain phosphate of potash in minute particles, just as it is furnished by nature in the grains.

This product makes from albumen the grey matter that builds the brain and fills the nerve centers.

In no way can this gray matter be made except by the action of phosphate of potash upon albumen, and this mineral should be introduced to the body just as it comes from nature's laboratory, and not from the drug store. The system is more or less fastidious about taking up the needed elements, and, as might be suspected, it will favor the products of Mother Nature rather then the products of the drug shop, however valuable they may be for certain uses.

Athletes, lawyers, journalists, doctors, ministers, business men, and others, who earn their living by the use of the brain, are using both Postum Food Coffee and Grape-Nuts Food Both products are manufactured for a reason. They were originated by an expert, and the regenerative value of both the Postum Coffee and the Food has been demonstrated beyond question. All first-class grocers sell both Postum and Grape-Nuts, and the Postum Ceral Co., Ltd., manufacture them at the Battle Creek factories.

Osler, Toronto; James Dickson, Fenelon Falls; W. B. Wells, Chatham; and W. G. Parish, Athens. The chief game warden, Mr. E. Tinsley, of Toronto, and M. H. K. A Safe Investment.

Elsewhere appears the advertisement of the Union Development Company, which is worthy of the earnest consideration of investors. The company is a consolidation of twenty well-known mining properties of gold, copper and silver. Some of these properties are now producing and others are in process of development. The revenue of the company, as will be seen by the proposition, will be derived from the sale of mining properties, royalties from leases, and the product of the mines operated by the Company. The proposition is one that should command the favorable consideration of investors It is safe, and is one that promises exceptionally good returns.

Mr. Fitzgerald's Letter.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Just a line, Mr. Editor, in the public interest: I notice in a late issue of the Examiner a letter, from Mr. J. W. Fitzgerald criticizing Dr. Torrance's sermon of last Sunday night, the prominent feature of which is the absence of that peace, charity and goodwill he expects from others. I am not going to defend the Dr's sermon, for it does not need it, and Mr. Fitzgerald must be supersensative to find anything in it at which to take offence. I think, however, the public is about tired of his everlasting interference. Only last fall he had to undertake to correct (?) Mr. Ranney's figures and had to be corrected himself by a "schoolboy". This was most unpardonable, as it was right on a line with his special profession. I say special profession for he professes apparently to know everything.

Now, J.W., you are doubtless a very wise man, but, well, there may be one or two others, not many of course, and I would advise you to let up on this "meddlesome matter" business and give your attention to government surveys, for no one imagines for a moment, except yourself, that you are the only one on whom it has "rained wisdom and knowledge for quite a spell."

Yes, let up on it, old man, and neither you nor the world, will be any the worse for it.

A DISGUSTED IRISHMAN.
Peterborough, 31st Jan., 1900.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I see that a certain gentleman living in the northern part of the town, has undertaken to champion Ireland and home rule. I would like to ask him the following questions:—

1. Are the people of Ireland any less free than the people of England or Scotland?

2. Who are the "home rulers," any how? Are they not such men as Redmond, et al, who is reported to have called for cheers for the Boers at a meeting in Dublin recently?

3. Did Dr. Torrance really use the words in the sence they are given—"Irish agitators and the Romish Church?" I heard the sermon and do not remember any such words falling from his lips.

I am well aware, Mr. Editor, that the matter is hardly worth replying to, but nevertheless venture to ask you to make room for these few lines and oblige.

GEN. BULLER AGAIN CROSSES THE TUGELA TO RELIEVE LADYSMITH

BULLER CROSSED THE TUGELA RIVER FRIDAY

General White Hears Artillery of Relieving Force and Signals Cheerful News.

WAR OFFICE WILL NOT DISCLOSE MOVEMENS.

Boers Admit That the Attack on Ladysmith Was a Serious Blunder.

A Boer General Accused of Cowardice and May be Sentenced to Death eneral Buller crossed the Tugela river Friday night and is marching on Ladysmith. No definite news will be permitted to go out until Ladysmith is relieved.

Durban, Feb. 4.

---

adysmith, Feb. 4.—By heliograph from Signal Hill.

he garrison was cheered by hearing General Buller's guns yesterday. The result of the engagement is not known.

he Boers are again massing near Ladysmith also moving another gun toward Surprise Hill.

e are quite ready for them if they contemplate another attack.

adysmith, Feb. 3.—By heliograph from Signal Hill.

eneral Buller's guns have been heard again, otherwise it is very quiet. We are awaiting further news of his progress. There has been no further developments here. Very few Boers remain northeast of the camp The majority are concentrated sotuh and west. The health of the garrison is improved.

London, Feb. 4.

he War Office has received the following from Lord Roberts dated Cape Town, Feb. 4: "Mafeking well on Jan. 17. Trenches extended towards enemy's big gun battery causing it to be vacated. Enemy now pushing back on northern, southern and western sides all out of rifle fire. Otherwise no change in situation."

---

pearman's Camp, Feb. 3rd, 9.25 a.m.

he Boers fired from the hills on several squadrons of Bethuen's mounted infantry, who were reconnoitering. They continued to set fire to the grass on the left of Mount Alice in order to destroy the cover of the British troops and to enable the Boers to see the advance.

Durban, Jan. 31

eneral Buller personally supervised the retirement of the army across the Tugela. He then returned to his old headquarters at Spearman's Camp, looking much fagged but impassive.

London, Feb. 6

The Pietermaritzburg correspondent of the Daily Mail telegrapuing yesterday says:

"General Buller has undoubtedly secured the road to Ladysmith and should reach his objective this week. It is believed that the boject of the Boers in occupying Ngutu Zululand is to secure the road from Dundee to Vryheid in case of retreat.

"I learn from a reliable source that General Joubert was seriously injured by a shell in the fight at Willow Grange and that he will never be able to command again on horseback, my informant says he has in fact retired from the field. The Boers admit that the attack on Ladysmith was a serious blunder and would not have occured if General Joubert had been in command. Gen. Lucas Meyer played the coward at Talana and sheltered himself in a red cross wagon shamming sickness. He has been unable to face the Boers since and they threaten to shoot him.

"The Boers say Great Britain made a mistake in not sending General Sir Evelyn Wood. I understand that they still have thousands of bags of flour stored in reserve at Delagoa Bay."

London, Feb. 5

A special despatch from Durban, dated Sunday, and referring to General Buller's recrossing the Tugela in his advance upon Ladysmith, says—"It is probable that General Buller at a spot above Trichard's Drift and leaving the enemy to the right he is marching to Acton Homes, whence the road to Ladysmith runs almost due east through a fairly open country.

London, Feb. 5, 4.30 a.m

Although there is no actual confirmation of the reportthat General Buller has re-crossed the Tugela on a third desperate attempt to relieve Ladysmith, it is known that the War Office has received several South African despatches which have not yet been published, and the advance is an actual fact the secret is being well kept.

SITUATION REVIEWED.

London, Feb. 3.—Despite a crop of wild rumors to the contrary, it is improbable that General Buller has made any important move since the retirement over the Tugela. A rumor said to come from Spearman's Camp, Gen. Buller's headquarters, near Springfield, says that an attempt is likely to be made upon the Drakensberg passes by the cavalry brigade. What object could be served by such a dash it is hard to devine. There would be just as much wisdom in a march to the sea or a raid into Bastoland, and these movements would have an equal bearing upon the relief of Ladysmith. There are only two passes over the Drakensberg which Buller's men could hold with any degree of safety—Bezuidenhout and Oliver's Hoek—and these being well to the south are not absolutely necessary to the enemy, seeing that there are no less than eight others to the south, through which they could retreat and obtein supplies and which at present are not in danger of being occupied by the British. In order to make any useful occupation of the passes Buller would have to work around the Boer right flank, as Dundonald did, and this would be a most formidable undertaking.

It can scarcely be credited that Gen Buller is about to entangle his force among the two passes referred to. His only object in doing so would be to take the Boers at Ladysmith in the rear by marching through the mountains at the south and out again at the north. Such a scheme would, however play into the hands of the Boers splendidly and would stamp Buller as a military amateur not fit to command an army.

It is probable that the most interesting developments of the war will be coming from the southern border of the Orange Free State, where both French and Gatacre appear to have the Boers in a difficult place, from which they may be easily driven when the time comes. Indications are that the order for such a movement will not long be delayed, when the struggle may enter upon a new phase, and a British army may for the first time enter the enemy's country.

HAS BULLER ADVANCED?

New York, Feb. 3.—Very little news of the situation in South Afrira has found its way out of London during the past 24 hours. Much work is in progress on the southern frontier of the Free State, but the details are being held back until results can be reported. That is the impression made by such despatches as are allowed to come through from Sterkstroom and French's camp near Colesberg. The report that the Boer losses at Spion Kop on Wednesdal last exceeded one thousand dead, althoug unconfirmed, has created a favorable impression, and very few are disposed to credit it.

The Leader's Opinion .

The Morning Leader believes that Gen. Buller has begun a movement towards Ladysmith. The article says—"General Buller engaged soon after noon yesterday Friday—if his artillery and munitions had come up. In any case, his orders were definite for an advance at the latest this morning.

There is no actual news to support the statement ofthe Leader, but several of the London morning papers profess to believe that General Buller is pushing towards Ladysmith. Gen. Warren's troops on Wednesday were still resting south of the Tugela, an apparent indication that he expects another attack on his right.

The Flying Column.

The Boers are exhibiting considerable anxiety in regard to the movement of the British flying column, which started through Zululand in the direction of Vryhead, about the time that Gen. Buller began his move towards [illegible]. Boer reinforcements from about Ladysmith have been hurried bak to protect their lines of communication northward. Gen. Tucker, who came from India to command the seventh division, has gone up to Modder River. This seems to indicate that the troops of the division which are now arriving at the Cape, as well as those of the sixth division, under Kelly-Kenny, will be utilized along the border of the Free State and take part in the prospective invasion.

PROMOTION FROM THE RANKS.

The System Will be Introduced in the Army Owing to Losses Among Officers.

London, Feb. 3.—An important statement was made by Mr. Wyndham in the House of Commons on Thursday, namely, that the vacancies the war had made among the officers would be partly filled by promotion from the ranks This means the democratization of the army. On this subject a letter which is attracting much attention appeared in Friday's issue of the Daily Chronicle. It was written by a British officer who knkows most of the armies of Europe from personal observation and who has seen much service. He plainly declares that the society from which British officers are drawn is "distinctly degenerate, due to lack of intellectual training and dissipation of the aristocracy," and that the class "commonly known as society provides ninety-nine per cent. of the officers." The writer also says: "The intellectual standard of a young man of 17, fresh from the English public schools, is lower than that of a German boarding school boy of eight. His time is devoted to athletic sports. As his ancestors have done, he marries a girl of th esame training, and in three or four generations society will consist of physically, splendidly developed idots."

The only remedy, according to the writer is, "intermarriage between society and the heatlhy middle classes."

FOR VALOR ON THE BATTLEFIELD.

Heroes of Colenso Will Receive the Victoria Cross for Trying to Rescue Guns.

London, Feb. 3.—The Gazette intimated last evening that it is the Queen's intention to confer the Victoria Cross on Captains Congrieve and Reed, Lieut Roberts and Corporal Nurse, for their attempts to save the guns at the battle of Colenso. Nineteen distinguished service medals will also be awarded to men who took part in the affair.

Lord Roberts' son, Lieutenant Roberts', K.R.R., with Captains Schofield and Congrive, of the staff, volunteered to ride out and endeavor to save the two field batteries in the open. Readily other volunteers were found. Corporals from the linesmen and drivers of the ammunition waggons taking spare teams galloped out, and men and horses again began falling on every side. Young Roberts' horse was blown up with a shell, which inflicted mortal wounds upon his body and limbs. Congreve was hit in the leg with a bullet and his clothes were cut with other missiles. Schofield alone escaped untouched across that valley of death. Quickly the surviving animals were rounded up, the guns hooked and dragged away. Again and again that day were attempts made to haul of the remaining guns, which belonged to the Fourteenth and Sixty-sixth Field Batteries, but the Boer cannon and rifle fire was incessant and withering

COLONEL LONG IS DEFENDED.

Winston Churchill Says He is Not to Blame for Losing the Guns at Colenso.

London, Feb. 3.—Colonel Long, who error caused the loss of the guns and whom Gen. Buller virtually accused of disobeying orders is defended by Winston Churchill, the correspondent of the Morning Post, in a message printed today. He ascribes the loss of the guns to an error of judgment. He recalls the fact that it was believed there were no Boers south of the Tugela river, and says: "The position Col. Long gained was underneath the fire of the enemy's big guns, and enabled the complete silence of Fort Wylie. The error was not attributable either to rashness or incapacity."

Col. Long is one of the most dashing gunners of the Horse Artillery, and is a great authority on artillery. He materially contributed to the victory af Omdurman. When he was terribyl wounded at Colenso he behaved with great gallantry.

The correspondent appeals to the press and public to judge generously and moderate of this officer, whose distinguished reputation was striken through an error which was not the greatest of this war.

Col. Long's condition is now most grave.

Wyndham's Speech .

The good effect of Mr. Wyndham's speech in explanation of the War Office's work was apparent in the Commons and in the press. The Unionists spoke with increased confidence, since they could referto the unique record of the WarO ffice in raising and despatching 145,000 troops for foreign service at a remote distance, and the Liberals admitted that the Government was free from reproach of incapacity in the management of administrative details of the campaign.

The truth is now nown that the British force is more than double that of the Dutch and superior to it in number of guns.

FRENCH CONSULTS WITH ROBERTS.

London, Saturday, Feb. 3.—General French, who visited Cape Town to consult with General Roberts, returned to Rensberg on Jan. 31, and resumed reconnoitering, but nothing of consequence resulted.

According tothe Daily Chronicle's correspondent at Sterkstroom, who telegraphs underdate of Feb. 1, Boer reinforcements are arriving at Stormburg. The enemy have repaired the railway between Aliwall North and Bugersdirp, which they destroyed when they first crossed the frontier, and trains are now running over it.

The same correspondent records rumors that Commandant Steyn has been recalled from the command of the Free State forces in Natal to defend the southeastern border.

CRITICISM OF BULLER.

Berlin, Feb. 2.—The Militair Wochenblatt, the organ of the general staff, reviewing Sir Redvers Buller's last movement, pronounces it "an extraordinary risky undertaking, only to be justified by the urgency of the situation." The writer says—"General Buller should have reckoned with the fact, already repeatedly demonstrated in the Boer war, that with modern weapons even those long-drawn out lines of defence are exceedingly strong, when an enemy skilfully takes advantage of the topography as the Boers have done."

One hundred and seventy-four thousand seven hundred and seventy marks have been raised to assist the Red Cross service among the Boers.

SEVEN BOER GUNS DISABLED.

London, Feb. 3.—A despatch from London, Feb. 2.—A despatch from Ladysmith, undated, via Spearman's Camp, Feb. 2, says: Native deserters report the following field cornets killed in last weeks fighting: Lombard, of Waterburg; Grobelair, of Bremersdorp Opherman, of Pretoria; Daniel Erasmus, of Magaliersberg, and one Free State cornet. The British artillery broke seven Boer guns. The Boer casualties were approximately 1000, though this information is not confirmed officially.

BOERS' LOSSES.

Sterk's Spruit, Jan. 29.—It is admitted that in the recent fight af Ladysmith the Boers lost 1100 killed and 600 wounded. The fight referred to is that of January 6th when General White beat of the Boers who attacked Caesar Camp and Wagon Hill.

BOERS IN STRAITS.

Sterks Spruit, Jan. 29.—Commandant Olivier, of the Orange Free State, in a speech to the Boers at Ladygrey, said that his men were almost surrounded at Stormberg, and unless recruits were forthcoming he would be compelled to abandon the position.

Many colonists who fought at Stormberg have gone back to their farms and have refused to return to active service, though threatened with death Among those are some conspicuous burghers who originally invited the Free Staters to invade Cape Colony.

A FIRE ON THE VELDT.

Modder River, Feb. 2.—A great fire has been burning along the veldt since 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. It is two miles in length and extends alogn the plain between Jacobsdal and Kopje's ram. Some of the British officers believe that it was started by the Boers to screen a movement of some of their forces who have been summoned to the eastward. The fire burned all night and it is believed, that under cover of the smoke some of the recent reinforcements that have arrived at Magersfontein morhed in the direction of Barkly West and Komdodubery districts. British long range artillery on the left threw shells in the direction of the Boer position.

The Boers shelled the British from the west for half an hour in the morning, probably to cover the movement referred to. Their shells hit nobody. The Boer losses, if any, are unknown.

The British troops here are eager for an aggressive movement to start.

SON OF GARIBALDI VOLUNTEERS.

Rome, Feb. 2.—Riccotti Garibaldi, one of the sons of the famous Italian patriot, inconsideration of the service rendered by England to the cause of Italian independence, has offered the British Government to command a corps of Italian volunteers in South Africa.

BRITISH NATION NEEDS A STRONG MAN TO LEAD

Lord Rosebery is Regarded as the Coming Man, Although Chamberlain Finds Favor.

PARTY STRIFE MUST CEASE IN NATIONAL CRISIS.

British Public Are Indignant at Scenes of Incrimination in House of Commons and Incompetency Displayed by Members of Cabinet.

London, Feb. 3.—The indignation and amazement of the nation at the incompetency displayed by its Ministers has risen to heights probably never before attained. While the empire is engaged in the most serious struggle to which it has been committed since the first years of 19th Century, while the statesmen and the Legislatures of the self-governing colonies faithfully represent the Imperial spirit of the constituents, while the Britishers of all ranks have risen to the occasion with a courage and a unanimity unsurpassed in their annals, the statesmen at home have committed themselves to party manoeuvres, mutual recriminations, contradictions, shuffling evasions, and palpably lame excuses so utterly heedless of the temper of the people, that the movement in favor of the reconstruction of the Cabinet, first inaururated a few weeks ago, promises, unless a more vigorous policy is speedily adopted, to develop into a national uprising.

Foolish Chattering.

Even the Times, that bulwark of conservatism, declares "the chattering in the House of Commons during the past few days is simply irritating and offensive to nine out of ten people in the United Kingdom.

Roseberry Mentioned.

Consequently it is not astonishing that the people are looking for some strong man to lead them. Lord Roseberry's name is the most prominent. His pitiless lashing of Lord Salisbury on the day Parliament reassembled marks him, in the opinion of many, as the right man to face the present Imperial crisis. A small faction, led by the Daily Mail, is pushing the claims of Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, the Colonial Secretary, for a trial. The Mail says he has shown himself to be a "shrewd, determined and capable organizer, and, apparently, is the only member of the Cabinet who grasped the realities of the situation in South Africa." Though the paper admits he lacks tact, and that his speeches have done much to alienate the sympathies of America in this war, and give umbrage to Germany and France. Yet, The Mail suggests, it would be well to watch Mr. Chamberlain's attitude during the next few days.

Their Patience Tested .

Truly has the patience and fortitude of the people of Great Britain been subjected to severe tests. After a Brisk rally from the staggering blows to the nation's military prestige the people had a right to turn to Parliament for encouragement and inspiration. But, one by one the Ministers have been unmasked and discredited and the weakness of the official leaders of the Opposition has been revealed. From every newspaper in the land has arisen the cry that party strife must cease and political ambitions be laid aside and the stifled determination of a willing people must have rein.

A result of this outburst is seen in the new and more lofty tone introduced into the discussion by the speech of Mr. George Wyndham, theP arliament Under Secretary of the War Office, Thursday evening, which was the first Ministerial statement evincing a proper appreciation of public feelings. There is no hope of the debate on Lord Edmund Fitzmaurice's amendment to the address in reply to the speech from the throne collapsing, so a division will hardly occur before Tuesday. Tuesday. There is a movement on foot to induce the Government to refuse to discuss at length Mr. Joh FRedmond's amendment, on the ground that the present state of the campaign is not suitable for the discussion of conciliation or the terms of peace.

Redmond's Quary.

Mr. Willian Redmond desires definite information as to the relations of Great Britain with the United States and Germany, and proposes to ask Mr. A. J. Balfour, the Government leader, Monday, whether he has any announcement to meke or papers to lay on the table bearing on the proposed new triple alliance between Great Britain, the United States and Germany, announced by Mr. Chamberlain at Leicester, November 30.

A PLACE FOR COL. HUGHES.

Ottawa, Feb. 3.—Lieut.-Col. Sam Hughes is sure of a place on the third contingent, as Lord Strathcona has expressed a desire that he be appointed one of the officers. A considerable number of applications for positions as chaplains and nurses are still coming in, notwithstanding the announcement that none would be taken with the Strathcona Horse.

THEY WERE NOT KILLED.

London, Feb. 3.—The War Office is silent as regards Gen. Buller, but there is every reason to believe he is continuing his movement upon Ladysmith. Those who are in a position to know, confirm his reported recrossing of the Tugela river, and believe he was engaged yesterday. The message from Ladysmith Thursday saying the Boers were leaving again, and that the besieging force was considerably diminished, tends to confirm this. Field Marshal Roberts has notified the War Office that forty Highlanders who were previously reported killed at Magersfontein are prisoners at Pretoria.

ADVICE OF AN EXPERT.

London, Saturday, Feb. 3.—Mr. Spencer Wilkinson, who devoted his article in the Morning Post to-day to the principles upon which war should be conducted as applicable to South Africa, says—

"The Boers have no great cities. Pretoria and Blomfontein are not centres of national life, like Paris and London. To occupy them, therefore, would have little effect, unless after a defeat of the Boer army.

"The Boer power is the centre of citizens constituting the army. It is, therefore, our first business to crush the biggest army, namely, that in the vicinity of Ladysmith. Though there have been, apparently, troops enough in South Africa, General Buller has never had a sufficient number for this purpose. Accordingly, the outlines ofthe war reveal no bold and clear conceptions.

"Until the strategical idea emerges and controls the whole opinion, there can be no decided turn in the tide."

FLYING COLUMN IN ZULULAND.

London, Feb. 3.—A despatch to a London paper from Pietermaritzburg says The appearance of the flying column of scouts in Zululand has created some uneasiness among the Boers over the border. A number of Boers have been hurriedly withdrawn from Ladysmith and Dundee to Vryhold to protect that place and oppose any British advance. The Boer force there is about 1,000 strong with three guns.

BOER GUNS DEMORALIZING.

London, Feb. 3.—The first batch of wounded men belonging to the naval contingents serving in South Africa has arrived in Engalnd. They are mostly skilled gunners. They say that the Boer Maxims-Nordenfeldt one pound quick firing guns have a most demoralising effect on the British. These guns are made in England, but they are not supplied to the British troops.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

Hockey

Ww little thought when writing on Friday evening the paragraph advocating the refusal of the entry of the Kingston hockey teams in the O. H. A., that almost at the same moment the Colts were being set upon by those same Kingston hockey enthusiasts and players—so badly, indeed, that they had to ask police protection. It is time the Kingston so-called sports were tabooed from decent society. Because there are al ot of toughs inside the penitentiary, that is no reason why those outside should be allowed to act as toughs at the expense of decent visitors. Refuse their entries in the O. H. A.

Waterloo beat 'Varsity, and they will be near the finals, as they will get away with the Wellingtons when they meet.

Look out for London in the intermediate series.

The eastern section will start to break the tie to-night. Cornwall and Iroquios play and the Caps play the winner .

The Crescents, of Brooklyn, defeated the St. Nicholas team of New York on Friday night. The teams were tied for first place and a fast game was looked for. It was fast—it was also rough and two Shamrock men were largely responsible for foul work. Dobby and Wall were on the fence repeatedly, and the former had to go off altogether in the last part of the second half.

Curling

We hope the Thistles will get together a good combination and will go to Toronto after that Governor-General's Cup As they were the last competing team withthe winners of district No. 7, they are entitledto have a go for that prize Get together, Thistles.

The Ring.

When the sealed bids for the heavyweight championship battle Corbett and Jeffries, to take place next month, were opened, it was found that the carnival company of San Fracisco, had put in the best offer. They agreed to give the fighters a purseof $20,000 and a fifty per cent interest in the pictures to be taken of the fight, or a purse of $32,000, the club to have all the interest in the pictures. Brady put in a bid, and he was the only one that complied with the articles of agreement, in which was a clause to the effect that a certified check should be enclosed with the bid as a forfeit. It was not decided who would get the fight, as time was given for the Californians to put up [illegible] as a forfeit.

THE BOERS AND THE BLACKS.

The Boers owe their political existance to the nation against which they are now engaged in war. At any moment during the past decade the black hordes of Zwaziland, Zululand, Basutoland, Bechuanaland and Matabeleland, who have forsworn the assagai for the Krag-Jorgensen and Lee-Metford arms, could have overrun the Transvaal and exterminated the Dutch usurpers who dispossessed them of their domain. England has held the restraining hand, for the black races both respect and fear their imperial conqueror and protector. The natives entertain implacable hatred for the Boers, for by them they have been robbed, beaten and enslaved; but toward the British, who have organized the tribes and given them forms of self-government, the Kaffirs on the whole are friendly. In 1868 the great Basuto race sought refuge from Boer aggression by voluntary submission to England.

One of the secrets of the Great Trek was a determination on the part of the Boers to establish a system of slavery, which in British territory is forbidden. The treatment of the blacks by the Boers is a tragic story of injustice and cruelty. In Johannesburg and Pretoria today a black man is not permitted to walk on the sidewalk; he must keep to the middle of the street with the oxen and the horses. If sent on an errand which makes it necessary for him to enter a building he must crouch as he hurries from the gutter to the store or stairway to which he is bound.

One day in my office in Johannesburg the door was pushed open by a Kaffir prone on the floor, dragging himself on his elbows. Thinking he was wounded, I rose to assist him. He grinned and handed me al etter. It was from a government official, and the Kaffir was merely an apprentice messenger delivering a public document. I made him get up and take a chair while I answered the message. When I gave him the note he slunk away trembling and much mystofied. Afterward I spoke to the Boer official about the episode. He protested that I had done very wrong. "I always kick them as they go out," he explained; then they know who is the superior." Another law prohibits Kaffirs from whistling or singing in the streets; and as the spirit of the black man, however much he is oppressed, finds expression in melody, this statute is constantly violated; and for their musical indiscretion Kaffirs are dragged in great numbers to jail and beaten mercilessly en route. The Boers explain that this law was passed to suppress the exasperating independence and jubilant bravado of the blacks, and to instruct them in the way of true humility. Possibly the law is also due to the creed of the Doppers, the party long in control of the Government, who regard all music as a profanation, and who have accordingly renounced even the intoning of the psalms in their solemn services.

The drastic subjugation of the blacks has produced a deep determination among the tribes to be avenged if opportunity ever occurs.

NO CASE AGAINST HIM.

Admitting all that Major-General Hutton against Col. Sam Hughes to be true, says the Toronto Telegram, do these errors of procedure or of good taste affect the immediate efficiency of the Canadian who is generally regarded as an ill-used man?

Journals which by no means regard Col. Sam Hughes as a political influence for good have declaimed against the injustice of denying him a chance to disport himself in a field where he would probably shine.

Grave errors of deportment may be chargeable against Col. Sam Hughes, but unless Major-General Hutton knows something to discredit the bravery or cast doubts on the loyalty of Col. Hughes, he has no right to raise his red-tape ideas or prejudices as a barrier to the usefulness of a Canadian soldier.

There is surely something bigger in sight than the points of military procedure which have put Col. Sam Hughes in the bad books of Major-General Hutton, and the General Officer Commanding showed the qualities of a small-minded man when he raised these small points of order between a brave man and the duty which he could discharge with honour to himself and his country.

A GOOD APPOINTMENT.

Under the caption "Pink Pills for Pale Politicians," the Toronto World attacks the Laurier government for appointing Mr. G. T. Fulford, the Brockville medicine man, to the senate, and concludes — "Speaking of Fulford, why were a dozen old and staunch servants of the Liberal party passed over to reward the Brockville Quack?" The World tries hard to make a point against the government. Mr. Fulford has not been an active politician, but he has been a very successful business man, and has the respect and esteem of the people of Eastern Ontario. This paper for one does not think the Dominion senate will suffer if in filling the vacancies Mr. Laurier once in a while gives the politicians the go-by and appoints energetic and capable business men of Mr. Fulford's kind.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Sir William Butler, who was transferred from the Cape at the beginning of the war, advised that no attempt should be made to defend Natal north of the Tugela river, and that an advance should be made upon Bloemfontein with an army of 80,000 men. The critics now see that Sir William Butler's advice was right. It is probable that this was the original plan of campaign, and that it was altered owing to pressure from Natal. The march up through the Free State may be the next move. It is an open country there, and the Boers will be deprived of their natural forts, the kopjes.

Col. Hughes and General Hutton.

Editor Morning Times:

Sir,—I desire to thank the people of Canada for the almost universal condemnation of the petty action of General Hutton towards my brother. The recent action of General Hutton in giving a statement regarding the correspondence between Col. Hughes and himself is on a par with his past conduct. A British gentleman of true breeding would have waited till the correspondence was laid before Parliament before making remarks about it for publication. The friends of Col. Hughes are willing to wait. Several charges have been officially made against General Hutton, and they will be investigated in due time. I know that the other officers and members of Parliament whom General Hutton has insulted since he came to Canada are grateful to Col. Hughes for having the courage to ask that the recall of General Hutton be demanded.

Personally I hope that General Hutton may be the last officer sent to Canada to irritate Canadians and put Canadian loyalty to unnecessary strain by arrogance and red tape. There are plenty of wise and experience officers, who, in my opinion, could organize and train our volunteers better than General Hutton. If the colonies are to do their true work as parts of our Empire, they must develop their of our Empire, they must develop their own individuality in military matters as well as in other departments of national life.

Col. Hughes deserves better treatment than he received from General Hutton. He has been an enthusiastic patriot and soldier since his boyhood. Since he went to Africa his family received his medal for services at the time of the Fenian raid, when he was only a youth of 18. He has been an officer for a quarter of a century. He organized the most active Imperial Federation movement in Ontario outside of the large cities. He was the first man in Canada to propose to aid the Mother Country in the Transvaal. But he indignantly resented the insinuation of General Hutton against Canadian officers, and had the manliness to refuse to allow General Hutton to control his actions as a Canadian and as a member of Parliament, so the temporary tyrant tried to rob him of his right to fight for the Empire. Canadians will have little difficulty in deciding between Hughes and Hutton.
